PREFACE.

FROM an early period I have been deeply interested in the history of Hardwick, and in the genealogy of its inhabitants; — the more deeply, doubtless, because my own ancestors were among the early pioneers, were actively engaged in the management of public affairs and by numerous intermarriages were connected with so many of its families. Although I have been a non-resident and comparative stranger for more than fifty-six years, my attachment to my native town has never grown cold; but its rocks and hills are still viewed with almost childish delight, whenever I visit them, and many of my old friends, though personally departed, are represented by worthy descendants, who are beloved for the fathers' sake. As I had opportunity, from time to time, I have gathered and preserved historical materials, intending to embody them in a permanent form. Other and imperative engagements intervened, and prevented the execution of my purpose until now: so that what I originally designed to be my first literary labor, of any considerable magnitude, has become absolutely the last; for at the age of eighty-one years it is altogether too late to commence another task requiring much time for its completion.

The materials embraced in this history were gathered from various sources; among the most important of which were the Records of the Proprietors, of the Church, and of the Town, of Hardwick, including the Registry of Births and Deaths by the Town Clerk, and of Baptisms from the beginning, and of Deaths since 1789, recorded by the several Pastors of the Church, and supplemented by inscriptions on monuments and head-stones in the several cemeteries. Besides these, I consulted such printed authorities as were within my reach, including files of newspapers; the manuscript records of the General Court; the vast collection of original papers in the Archives of Massachusetts; the Court Records, and Registries of Probate and of Deeds in several counties, — not only in Worcester, but in Bristol, Plymouth, and Barnstable, — and the records of many towns in those counties, from which came so many of the early inhabitants of Hardwick; and also the records of Bennington and Barnard in Vermont, which towns were originally settled by emigrants from Hardwick. Besides all this, I have thoroughly explored more ancient burial-places, both in Massachusetts and Vermont, than I can easily enumerate. Notwithstanding the expenditure of so much time and labor, however, I am conscious of many deficiencies, for which I am not wholly responsible; they are attributable rather to the neglect of parents to record the birth of their children, and of survivors to record the death, or to erect even the most humble memorial, of the departed.

It will be observed that, both in the History and in the Genealogical Register, some family names occur much more frequently than others, notably the names of Allen, Paige, Robinson, Ruggles, and Warner. The reason is twofold: first, the families bearing these names were among the very earliest in the town, and with the exception of the first named were from the beginning to the present time among the most numerous; and second, for the first hundred years they were more constantly and prominently than others engaged in the management of municipal affairs.

It will also be observed that my attention has been devoted chiefly to early events in the history of the town, and that comparatively few recent occurrences are mentioned. The reason is, that I desired to revive and perpetuate the memory of what might otherwise fade entirely from remembrance and pass into oblivion. The current events of the day are fresh in the minds of the living, and are not liable to be soon forgotten. In like manner, I have mentioned some organizations which formerly existed here, such as the Social Library and the Masonic Lodge, because they are wholly of the past, so far as this town is concerned, and have left no visible trace behind them (unless the painted device on the ceiling of the Ruggles Hall remains perceptible); and have omitted special notice of living organizations, such as the Library recently established under the patronage of the Ladies, which is already a treasure, and which gives promise of still greater usefulness; and of the High School, or a school equivalent to a High School, which is understood to be now in successful operation. I have not even ventured to prophesy the future establishment of a school of the highest grade, and of a Free Public Library, with funds for their perpetual maintenance, — a “consummation,” not only “devoutly to be wished,” but not impossible of accomplishment. One of the living organizations, however, deserves a conspicuous place in a history of the town, namely, the Grange. But I had no materials for an account in any degree adequate to this institution, representing, as it does, one of the most important branches of industry; and I considered it more proper to be silent than to speak without knowledge. The Grange is too well known, both at home and in all the region round about, to suffer from this omission of notice.

The “R. Map,” or “Ruggles Map,” sometimes mentioned in the History, and much more frequently in the Genealogical Register, is a Map of the Town drawn by Gardner Ruggles, Esq., and lithographed, about fifty years ago, indicating the position of the several houses and their distance from the Common.

I gratefully acknowledge the uniform kindness and courtesy of the gentlemen having custody of the records and archives which I have had occasion to consult, and of the Town Clerks and numerous individuals of whom I have sought information, not otherwise to be obtained. My special thanks are due to Albert E. Knight, Esq., the veteran Town Clerk of Hardwick, not only for the facilities granted to me, when making personal investigations, but for promptly and patiently answering my multitudinous inquiries, and performing much labor on my behalf. I also cherish a grateful remembrance of one of his predecessors in office, Dr. Joseph Stone, for his kindness, assistance, and encouragement, many years ago.

I should be unpardonable if I did not acknowledge the public spirit and generosity of the Town, which has caused this History to be published, and has placed a portion of the edition at my disposal, notwithstanding my willingness to furnish the manuscript without any compensation whatever. In justice to the Town, I here insert a certified copy of the vote authorizing the publication: —

“ At a legal meeting of the inhabitants of Hardwick, Nov. 7, A. D. 1882, on motion of Hon. William Mixter, the following vote was unanimously passed: That the Town cause to be published four hundred copies of the History of Hardwick, written by Lucius R. Paige, D. D., of Cambridge, at an expense not exceeding sixteen hundred dollars, and that Mr. Paige retain fifty copies for his own use, for his labor of love in writing the History of his native town, and that the expense of publishing the above History be paid out of any money belonging to the Town. Voted, that the Selectmen be instructed to sell copies of this History, when published, to any who desire them, at four dollars per copy. A copy from the Records. Attest, ALBERT E. KNIGHT, Town Clerk.”

A final word in regard to this work. I have spared no reasonable exertion to secure accuracy; yet the universal experience of authors admonishes me that undoubtedly some errors, perhaps many, have escaped correction, and I bespeak the forbearance of the reader. For the rest, I have not aimed at brilliancy, partly because it was beyond my reach, and partly because I consider it to be unsuited to sober history. If lack of vigor and sprightliness be regarded as a serious fault of style, I may plead in extenuation, as in the Preface to my History of Cambridge, and with additional force, that although many of my materials were gathered long ago, I was obliged by other engagements, literary as well as secular, to postpone their final arrangement for publication until impaired health and the infirmities of age became uncomfortably manifest.

HISTORY OF HARDWICK.

INTRODUCTORY.

Location. — Boundaries. — Soil. — Hills. — Ponds. — Rivers. — Brooks. — Climate. — Longevity of Inhabitants.

THE town of HARDWICK is situated very near the territorial centre of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on the western border of Worcester County, and midway between the States of New Hampshire and Connecticut. It is bounded on the south by Ware; on the west by Ware, Enfield, and Greenwich; on the northwest by Dana; on the northeast by Barre; and on the southeast by New Braintree, from which it is separated by Ware River, except at the southerly end of the line. Like many other towns, its boundaries have several times been changed, and its territory enlarged or diminished, as will hereafter be described. It now contains about 21,000 acres, of which, with the exception of a few ponds and a somewhat plentiful supply of rocks, almost every inch is improved or improvable.

The description given by Whitney in 1793 is substantially correct at the present time: "The town is of a good form and shape, being nearly square. The face of the town is rather rough, hilly, and uneven, although there are no very great and remarkable hills.¹ The soil is in general deep, loamy, and very fertile.

¹ There is one high hill at the south end of the town, called McDougal on the map, but generally known as Bugle Hill, which affords excellent pasturage. About three quarters of a mile north of the Common is Poverty Hill, so called, perhaps, on account of its unproductiveness. From the summit of this hill, though not greatly elevated above the surrounding highlands, a very extensive and magnificent landscape is visible, embracing Wachusett on the east, Monadnock on the north, and on the west the mountains beyond Connecticut River. In the early part of the century this was a favorite resort. On the very pinnacle a tower was erected, about twenty feet in height (whose stone foundation still remains in place), on which a choice company of young men and maidens were accustomed to assemble on summer afternoons and moonlight evenings, and make the air resound with music,

The lands produce all kinds of grain in sufficient plenty for the inhabitants ; but they are best adapted to grass and pasturage. Here vast quantities of butter and cheese are made, and most excellent beef fatted for the market. All kinds of fruit-trees flourish here.”¹

With the exception of the manufacturing village at Gilbertville, Hardwick remains an almost exclusively agricultural town. A less quantity of grain, however, is raised now than formerly, and more attention is devoted to the production of hay, milk, butter, and cheese. The more general use of horses instead of oxen for farm-labor has also somewhat diminished the quantity of “beef fatted for the market.”

The township is well watered. Near the southwest corner is Muddy Pond (through which Muddy Brook passes), formerly, and perhaps now famous for its abundance of fish ; and on the northwest border, but now wholly included in Dana, was the even more productive Pottapaug Pond, fed and drained by Swift River. Though the pond is now severed from the town, Swift River still flows across its northwestern corner, furnishing water-power to Southworth’s saw-mill and manufactory of powder-kegs, at the place marked “Wardwell’s Mills” on the Ruggles map. On Ware River, which forms almost the entire easterly boundary of the town, there is a very valuable water-privilege at Gilbertville, and another, less powerful, at the paper mill near Barre, marked “N. W. Mills” on the Ruggles map. On that map are also delineated four brooks, all flowing in a southeasterly direction into Ware River, and on all of which, except perhaps the first named, are mill privileges of greater or less value :—namely, Board Meadow Brook, Moose Brook, Great Meadow Brook, and Muddy Brook. Besides these, there is another of considerable size, sometimes called Fish Brook, between Moose and Great Meadow brooks. Living springs abound throughout the town.

The climate of Hardwick is eminently favorable to health and long life. In the Registration Report for 1877, published under the supervision of the Secretary of State, is an abstract, exhibiting the number of deaths registered “for the thirteen years, 1865–1877,” together with the proportion of deaths to the whole population. The ratio of “Deaths to 100 persons living” in the both sacred and secular. They called the hill “Mount Pleasant,” an appellation which it richly deserves, and which ought to be perpetuated. The few survivors of entire Commonwealth was 1.77; the same ratio in the town of Hardwick was 1.03, — less than three fifths of the general average. Only five towns in the State exhibited a less number of deaths in proportion to their living population. This result may be attributed partly to the skill of the physicians; but doubtless it is chiefly due to the clear air and the fresh breezes which sweep over the hills, dissipating and expelling the malaria, and purifying the atmosphere. Very seldom has any epidemic proved destructive in this favored place. The canker-rash, indeed, in 1803, made sad havoc among the children; and a malignant fever proved fatal to many adults in 1814; but generally the inhabitants have been preserved from “the pestilence that walketh in darkness,” and from “the destruction that wasteth at noonday.”

In very few towns has so large a proportion of the inhabitants attained the allotted age of threescore years and ten. Before the year 1789, the registry of deaths does not indicate the age of the deceased, with only two exceptions; but during that year a new system was adopted. If I have counted correctly, the whole number of deaths registered from

The number under 70 years is	1,708
The number from 70 to 80 years is	253
The number from 80 to 90 years is	202
The number from 90 to 100 years is	58
The number over 100 years is	1

Hence it appears, that of the whole number who deceased in Hardwick during a period somewhat exceeding ninety-one years, nearly one fourth part ($23\frac{1}{8}$ in every 100) attained the age of 70 years; more than one ninth part ($11\frac{3}{4}$ in every 100) reached 80 years; one in every $37\frac{2}{3}$ survived 90 years; and one¹ completed the full century.

¹ The records and a headstone indicate a second centenarian; but the age is over-rated.

INDIAN HISTORY.

Indian Occupation. — Indian Fortress. — King Philip. — Indian Hostilities in Plymouth and Bristol Counties. — Sanguinary Conflict at Winnimisset. — Quabaog destroyed. — Report by Ephraim Curtis concerning the Nipmucks. — Captain Edward Hutchinson's Commission and Death. — Captain Thomas Wheeler's Narrative. — The Indians abandon their Stronghold at Winnimisset. — Personal Encounter between Captain Eleazar Warner and a Canada Indian.

THERE is no evidence within my knowledge, that the present township of Hardwick was ever occupied by the Indians as a place of residence; but that these hills furnished favorite hunting-grounds, there were manifest tokens in my younger days. Stone arrow-heads¹ were found so abundantly in the fields as to indicate their frequent and long-continued visitation in pursuit of game. Moreover, long before the settlement of the town by Englishmen the Indians had a military stronghold at Winnimisset, now in New Braintree, but for many years included in Hardwick. At this place occurred a sanguinary conflict between the two races, at the commencement of what is generally called King Philip's War. "From 1671 to 1674 we meet with no transaction of moment relative to the Indians, but it is affirmed that Philip was all this time using measures to engage the Indians in all parts of New England to unite against the English. . . . They did not expect to be prepared before the spring of 1676, but Philip precipitated his own nation and his allies into a war before they were prepared. . . . The war was hurried on by a the present owner of the field (formerly a part of my father's homestead), where it was found half a century ago. Very probably it passed unnoticed under my own hoe in my boyhood, when laboring in that field; and hence it has an additional value to me as a memento.

piece of revenge, which Philip caused to be taken on John Sausaman, a praying Indian.”¹ Sausaman had exposed to the English some of the plots of Philip, who thereupon caused him to be murdered. The murderers were tried and executed at Plymouth in June, 1675. Philip was enraged, and commenced hostilities at once. “June 24th, in the morning, one of the inhabitants of Rehoboth was fired upon by a party of Indians, and the hilt of his sword shot off. The same day in the afternoon, being a fast, as Swanzey people were coming from public worship, the Indians attacked them, killed one and wounded others, and killed two men who were going for a surgeon, beset a house in another part of the town, and there murdered six more.”² The English gathered troops, and in July attacked the Indians in a swamp at Pocasset, hoping to capture or destroy them; but the attempt was unsuccessful. “This disappointment encouraged the Indians in other parts of New England to follow Philip’s example, and begin their hostilities against the English. Some few had begun before. The Nipnet or Nipmuck Indians had killed four or five people at Mendon, in the Massachusetts Colony, the 14th of July. The Governor and Council, in hopes of reclaiming the Nipnets, sent Captain Hutchinson with twenty horsemen to Quabaog (Brookfield), near which place there was to be a great rendezvous of those Indians. The inhabitants of Quabaog had been deluded with the promise of a treaty, at a place agreed upon, the 2d of August. Some of the principal of them accompanied Captain Hutchinson thither. Not finding the Indians there, they rode forward four or five miles towards the Nipnets’ chief town. When they came to a place called Meminisset,³ a narrow passage between a steep hill and a thick swamp, they were ambushed by two or three hundred Indians, who shot down eight of the company, and mortally wounded three more, Captain Hutchinson being one of the number. The rest escaped through a by-path to Quabaog. The Indians flocked into the town; but the inhabitants, being alarmed, had all gathered together in the principal house. They had the mortification to see all their dwelling-houses, about twenty, with their barns and outhouses burnt.”⁴ written by Captain Thomas Wheeler, one of the actors therein, which Hutchinson seems not to have seen, was reprinted in the Collections of the New Hampshire Historical Society in 1827; and some manuscript details of preliminary proceedings have been preserved in the Massachusetts Archives, but I think have never been printed. From these sources it appears that in July, 1675, the Governor and Council employed Ephraim Curtis¹ to visit the Nipmuck Indians at Quabaog (Brookfield), and to ascertain their position in the controversy which had commenced. On his return he exhibited a report as follows:—

“To the honered Governer and Councile of the Massathusetz Colony in New England.²

“Wheras your honors imployed your servant to conduct Uncheas his six men homwards as far as Wabaquesesue, and alsoe to make a perffet discovery of the motions of the Nepmug or Western Indians, your honors may be pleased here to see my return and relation. I conducted Unkeas his men saffly while I com in sight of Wabquesesue new planting fielde; first to Natuck, from thenc to Marelborrow, from thenc to Esnemisco, from thenc to Mumchogg, from thenc to Chabanagonkomug, from thenc to Mayenecket, from thenc over the river to Seneksig, while wee cam nere to Wabaquasesu, wher they were very willing that wee should leve them, and returned thanks to Mr. Governer, and to all them that shewed them kindness, and alsoe to us for our company. And in my jorny my chefe indever was to inquire after the motions of the Indians. The first information which I had was at Marelborrow att the Indian fort, which was that my hous at Quansigamug³ was robed; the Indians, to conferm it, shewed me som of the goods and alsoe som other goods which was non of mine. They told mee it was very daingerous for mee to goe into the woods, for that Mattounas, which they said was the leader of them that robed my house, was in company of fifty men of Phillips complices rainging between Chabanagonkamug and Quatesook and Mendam and Warwick, and they might hopen to mett mee; and if I mised them, yet it was daingerous to meet or see the other Nipmug Indians which wer gathered together, for they would be reddy to shoot mee as soon as they saw mee. With this newes, thos three Natuck Indians which wer with mee as vollenteres were discourriged and tould mee that if I did not provide mor company they wer not willing to goe with mee. Hearing this, I repaired to the Consable of Marrelborrow and to the milletary officers and tould them my busnes, and they presed two men with horses and armes to goe along with mee. And soe as wee pased the forementioned place, wee could not find any Indians, neither in tents nor feldes; but after wee pased Senecksik som milds into the woods westwards, wee found an Indian path newly mad. There being with mee a vollenter Indian that cam from the Indians out of the wilderness but two or three days before, and hee tould mee hee would find them out. Soe in our travell wee followed this tract many milds, and found many tents built, wherin I supos they might keep their randivos for a day or two; and soe wee found three places wher they had piched, but found no Indians. And following still in pursut of the tract, wee com to the lead mynes by Springfield ould road, wher wee saw new footing of Indians: and soe looking out sharp, in about two milds riding wee saw two Indians, which when wee saw I sent the Indian that went with mee from Marrelborrow to speek with them. But soe soone as they had discovered us they ran away from us, but with fast riding and much calling two of our Indians stopped one of them; the other ran away. Wee asked the Indian wher the other Indians were; hee being surprised with feare could scarcely speek to us, but only tould us that the Indians were but a littel way from us. Soe then I sent the Marrelborrow Indian before us, to tell them that the Gouvner of the Massathusets messenger was a coming with peacable words; but when hee cam to them they would not beleve him; hee therefore cam riding back and meet us. Thes Indians have newly begun to settel themselves uppon an Iland conteinging about four acres of ground, being compased round with a brood miry swamp on the one sid and a muddy river with meaddow on both sids of it one the other sid, and but only one place that a hors could posably pas, and there with a great deal of difficulty by reson of the mier and dirt. Befor wee com to the river ther mett us att least forty Indians at a littell distance from the river, some with ther guns uppon ther shoulders, others with ther guns in ther hands reddy cocked and primed. As wee cam nere to the river most of them next to the river presented att us. All my aquantane would not know mee, although I saw ner twenty of them together and asked ther welfare, knowing that many of them could speek good English. I speek to many of them in the Governour's name, which I called my master, the great Sachim of the Massathuset English, requiring them to owne ther fidellyty and ingidgement to the English, telling them that I cam not to fight with them or to hurt them, but as a messenger from the Governor to put them in mind of their ingaidgment to the English. I think some of them did beleve mee, but the most of them would not. Ther was a very great upror amongst them: som of them would have had mee and my company presently kiled; but many others, as I understood afterwards, wer against it. I required ther Sachims to com over the river; but they refused, saying that I must com over to them. My comppany wer somthing unwilling, for they thought themselves in very great dainger wher wee wer; they said what shall wee bee when [wee] are over the river amongst all the vile rout? I tould them wee had better never have sen them, then not to speek with ther Sachims, and if wee run from them in the tim of this tumult they would shoot after us and kill som of us. Soe with much difficulty wee got over the river and meadow to the Iland wher they stood to face us att our coming out of the mire, many Indians with ther guns presented att us, redy cocked and primed. Soe wee rushed between them and called for ther Sachim; they presently faced about and went to surround us, many of them with ther guns cocked and primed at us. We rushed between them onc or twice, and bid them stand in a body, and I would face them; but still the uprore continued with such noyes that the aire rang. I required them to lay down their armes, and they comanded us to put up our armes first, and com of our horses, which I refused to doe. Som of them which wer inclinable to beleve us, or wer our friends, som layd down ther armes, but the others continued the uprore for a while; and with much threathening and perswasion, at last the uprore ceased. Many of them sayd they would neyther beleve mee nor my master without hee would send them two or three bushells of powder. Att lynch I spok with ther Sachims, which wer five, and ther other grandes which I think wer about twelve more; our Natuek Indians semed to be very industrious all this tim to still the tumult and to persuad the Indians. And as soone as I cam to speek with the Sachims, we dismounted and put up our armes. I had a great deal of spech with them by an interpreter, being brought to ther court and sent out again three or four times. The nams of the Sachims are thes: 1, Muttamp; 2, Konkewasco; 3, Willymachen; 4, Upchattuck; 5, Keehood; 6, Nontatousoo. Muttamp I perceive is chosen to bee head over the other five, and was the chefe speaker. There company in number I judg may bee ner two hundred of men. They would fain have had mee to stay all night: I asked the reson of some that could speak English; they sayd that they had som messengers at Cunnetequat and som southward, and that was the reson they would have mee stay. I asked them the reson of ther rud behaviour toward us, and they sayd they heard that the English had kiled a man of thyres about Merrymak River, and that they had an intent to destroy them all. I left them well apeased when I cam away. Mor might be added; but thus far is a true relation, p^r your honers most humbel ser-vent.

EPHRAIM CURTIS.

Immediately afterwards Curtis was sent again with “a message to the Nipmug Indians.” He reported, July 24, 1675, that he “found them att the same place wher they wer before;” that they manifested a better temper, and that “they promised that Keehoud and one mor of their principle men would come to the Massathusets Bay within foure or five days and speek with our Great Sachim.”² This promise was not fulfilled, and the government organized a military expedition. A paper remains in the Archives, indorsed “Capt. Hutchinsons Instructions, 27 July, 1675,” to wit:—

“Boston, 27 July, 1675. The Council, beeing informed that the Narraganset Indians are come downe with about one hundred armed men into the Nipmuck country,—Do order you, Capt. Edward Hutcheson, to take with you Capt. Thomas Wheler and his party of horse, with Ephraim Curtis for a guide, and a sufficient interpreter, and forthwith repaire into those parts, and ther laubour to get a right understanding of the motions of the Narraganset Indians, and of the Indians of Nipmuck; and for that end to demand of the leaders of the Narraganset Indians an account of the grounds of their marching in the country, and require an account of the Nipmuck Indians why they have not sent downe their Sagamore according to their promise unto our messenger Ephraim Curtis. And further let them know that we are informed that there are some among them that have actually joyned with our enimies in the murder and spoyle made upon the English by Philip, and that Matoones and his complices who have rob'd and murdered our people about Mendon are now among them; and that wee require them to deliver up to you, or forthwith bring in to us, those our enimies; otherwise wee must looke at them to bee no freinds to us, ayders and abbetors. . . . And in prosecution of this affayre, if you should meet with any Indians that stand in opposition to you or declare themselves to be your enimes, then you are ordered to ingage with them, if you see reson for it, and endeavor to reduce them by force of arms." ¹

The tragical result of this expedition was described by Captain Thomas Wheeler, in "A true Narrative of the Lord's Providences in various dispensations towards Captain Edward Hutchinson of Boston and myself, and those that went with us into the Nipmuck Country, and also to Quabaug, alias Brookfield." — "The said Captain Hutchinson and myself, with about twenty men or more, marched from Cambridge to Sudbury July 28, 1675, and from thence into the Nipmuck Country; and finding that the Indians had deserted their townes, and we having gone until we came within two miles of New Norwiche on July 31, . . . we then thought it not expedient to march any further that way, but set our march for Brookfield, whither we came on the Lord's day about noon. From thence the same day (being August 1), we understanding that the Indians were about ten miles northwest from us, we sent out four men ² to acquaint the Indians that we were not come to harm them, but our business was only to deliver a message from our honoured Governour and Council to them, and to receive their answer, we desiring to come to a treaty of peace with them (though they had for several days fled from us), they having before professed friendship and promised fidelity to the English. When the messengers came to them they made an alarm, and gathered together about an hundred and fifty fighting men, as near as they could judge. The young men amongst them were stout in their speeches, and surly in their carriage. But at length some of the chief Sachems promised to meet us on the next morning about 8 of the clock upon a plain

Hucheson, and by his order went and treated with the Nipmug Indians in a swamp about eight milles from Quabooge." Mass. Arch., lxvii. 254.

within three miles of Brookfield ; with which answer the messengers returned to us . . . Accordingly we with our men, accompanied with three of the principal inhabitants of that town, marched to the plain appointed . . . The Indians kept not promise there with us. But the three men who belonged to Brookfield were so strongly persuaded of their freedom from any ill intentions towards us . . . that the said Captain Hutchinson, who was principally intrusted with the matter of Treaty with them, was thereby encouraged to proceed and march forward towards a swampe where the Indians then were. When we came near the said swampe, the way was so very bad that we could march only in a single file, there being a very rocky hill on the right hand, and a thlick swampe on the left, in which there were many of those cruel bloodthirsty heathen, who there waylaid us, waiting an opportunity to cut us off : there being also much brush on the side of the said hill, where they lay in ambush to surprise us. When we had marched there about sixty or seventy rods, the said perfidious Indians sent out their shot upon us as a showre of haile, they being (as was supposed) about two hundred men or more. We seeing ourselves so beset, and not having room to fight, endeavoured to fly for the safety of our lives. . . . There were then slain, to our great grief, eight men, viz., Zechariah Philips of Boston, Timothy Farlow of Billericay, Edward Coleborn of Chelmsford, Samuel Smedly of Concord, Sydrach Hopgood of Sudbury, Sergeant Eyres,¹ Serjeant Prichard,² and Corporal Coy,³ the inhabitants of Brookfield, aforesaid. It being the good pleasure of God that they should all there fall by their hands of whose good intentions they were so confident, and whom they so little mistrusted. There were also then five persons wounded, viz., Captain Hutchinson,⁴ myself, and my son Thomas, as aforesaid,⁵ Corporal French of Billericay ; . . . The fifth was John Waldoe of Chelmsford.”⁶

The survivors fled to Brookfield, took possession of “one of the

⁵ Captain Wheeler's horse was killed, and himself sorely wounded. He bears this testimony to the good conduct of his son, who “had then received a dangerous wound in the reins : . . . he endeavoured to rescue me, shewing himself therein a loving and dutiful son, he adventuring himself into great peril of his life to help me in that distress ; there being many of the enemies about me, my son set me on his own horse and so escaped a while on foot himself, until he caught an horse whose rider was slain, on which he mounted ; and so through God's great merey we both eescaped.”

largest and strongest houses therein" (into which all the inhabitants were speedily gathered), and there defended themselves two days against the violent assaults of the Indians, until relieved by the force under Major Willard. On his approach, the Indians betook themselves to the wilderness. "But before they went away, they burnt all the town except the house we kept in, and another that was not then finished. They also made great spoyle of the cattel belonging to the inhabitants."¹

After this, the Indians never returned to Brookfield as a place of residence; but for more than half a century they hovered around the town, occasionally destroying property and killing the inhabitants. It does not appear how long they retained their stronghold at Winnimisset; but it is certain that after a short time they returned and remained there until after the destruction of Lancaster on the 10th of the ensuing February. Mrs. Rowlandson says that on the second day after that disaster, "in the afternoon, about an hour by sun, we came to the place where they intended, viz. an Indian town called Wenimesset, northward of Quabaug," and remained there until after February 18, on which day her daughter, six years old, and wounded at Lancaster, died, and was buried on the hill east of the swamp.² Subsequently Muttamp, the chief Sachem of the Quabaogs, is said to have been hung at Boston, and the remnant of his tribe joined with the River Indians.

I have devoted much space to the narration of these events, partly because they occurred on territory which afterwards became our own, partly because they illustrate the labors and perils and sufferings to which the early settlers in the wilderness were exposed, and partly because at least one of the individual sufferers was represented by his posterity among the first English inhabit-

¹ Immediately after arriving at Brookfield, Ephraim Curtis and another started for Boston on horseback to report the disaster; but the Indians had already arrived, and they were obliged to return. "The next day," says Capt. Wheeler, "I spoke to Ephraim Curtis to adventure forth again on that service, and to attempt it on foot, as the way wherein there was most hope of getting away undiscovered; he readily assented and accordingly went out, but there were so many Indians everywhere thereabouts, that he could not pass without apparent hazard of life; so he came back again; but towards morning the said Ephraim adventured forth the third time, and was fain to creep on his hands and knees for some space of ground, that he might not be discerned by the enemy, who waited to prevent our sending, if they could have hindered it. But through God's mercy he escaped their hands, and got safely to Marlborough, though very much spent and ready to faint, . . . from whence he went to Boston. Coll. N. H. Hist. Soc., ii. 11-13.

ants of this town. With a brief notice of a single affair in which a prominent representative of that posterity was engaged, I shall dismiss what may be called the Indian History of Hardwick. One of the "principal inhabitants" of Brookfield, whose cattle, house, and household goods were destroyed by the Indians, was John Warner,¹ who fled for refuge to Hadley (where one or more of his sons then resided), and died there nearly twenty years later. His grandson, Eleazar Warner, who was born 27th January, 1686, very early entered the military service of his country, and was assigned to duty on the frontiers. Whether he enlisted in that company of his own choice, or was placed in it by authority, does not appear; but the fact is certain that he was for many years stationed at Brookfield (the scene of his grandfather's disasters), first as a private soldier, and afterwards, by gradual promotion, as sergeant, ensign, and lieutenant of the company commanded by Captain Samuel Wright of Rutland. Later in life, he was captain of militia in Hardwick and New Braintree, and retained that office until 1756, when he had attained the age of threescore years and ten. About 1730, while yet in the service of the government, he removed his family from his former residence near Ditch Meadow to a farm which included a part of the old Indian fortress at Winnimisset. Soon afterwards he went to Canada, to effect an exchange of prisoners. While there an Indian became offended, and followed him through the wilderness to his home. According to the family tradition, as I received it from his eldest daughter, my grandmother, after the Indian had lurked about the house for a few days, Captain Warner went into the forest with his musket. He soon discovered his enemy, who stepped behind a tree, and he dropped by the side of a log. He then adopted a common stratagem, placing his hat on a stick and cautiously elevating it above the log, as if to reconnoitre. Almost instantly a bullet passed through it, and he sprang upon his feet. The Indian was rushing forward with his scalping knife in hand; but his race was soon ended, and his body was consigned to a lily-pond between the road and the river, about half a mile east of the Old Furnace.

Except in the foregoing solitary case, I am not aware that the said persons being betruſted by the town or present inhabitants of Brookfield for taking in and receiving this present deed." Fiske's Centennial Sermon, App. iii.

Indians ever molested the inhabitants of Hardwick, although in one respect it was a frontier town, when settled by the English. There was a settlement at Rutland on the east, and Brookfield on the south was again inhabited. A line of towns had also been established on Connecticut River; but otherwise the whole country, between Hardwick and Hudson River, was then a wilderness; and in a direct line to Quebec or Montreal there was not a single English settlement.

Purchases of Indian Titles. — Indian Deed. — The Proprietors petition the General Court to confirm their Title. — The Representatives grant the Request, but the Council non-concur. — First Settlement at the “Elbows.” — Title partially confirmed. — Purchase and Settlement of Leicester by the same Proprietors. — Associates admitted. — Claim by Hendrick Kekquoquau. — Answer by Proprietors.

AFTER the close of Philip’s War some of the Nipmuck Indians returned to their former haunts; and both these, and others who dwelt elsewhere, asserted hereditary rights in the soil which the English recognized as valid, and extinguished by purchase.¹ Among these purchases was that which, about half a century later, resulted in the settlement of Hardwick. The deed of sale, executed by sundry Indians, was recorded in the county of Hampshire, in which this territory was then embraced, from which record it is here copied:² —

¹ Such purchases became very frequent immediately after the abrogation of the Colony Charter in 1684. It was then assumed by the new representatives of royal authority that all titles to land derived from grants by the superseded government were utterly void and worthless; that the king was the absolute owner of the whole territory; and that he had an undoubted right to dispose of it at his own pleasure. Indeed the common and undivided lands of some towns, and the farms of several individuals, were seized and bestowed upon others. Apparently with the hope of securing themselves against the rapacity of their new rulers by obtaining another title which might be respected, many towns, which had peacefully existed under a grant by the General Court, now procured and placed on record deeds of release and warranty from the aboriginal owners of the soil. In like manner, individuals purchased large tracts of unoccupied territory, designing at some future time to organize new townships, or at least to have a place of refuge to which they might flee, if driven from their present habitations by arbitrary power.

² In this copy, the orthography is preserved, but the punctuation is revised. The deed was also entered on the Proprietors’ Records, with slight variations which are designated in the following notes.

No immediate effort is known to have been made to derive any profit from the purchase of this territory in the wilderness.⁶ Even the title-deed was not recorded until more than thirty-six years after its date. At this period all the original purchasers, except Deacon Richard Draper, had left all terrestrial possessions and departed to a better country, even a heavenly. At length, however, their heirs and assigns determined to take possession of the property, and to improve it for their “mutual advantage,” for which purpose they adopted and placed on record the following agreement:—

Subsequent proceedings are recorded as follows: —

“ At a legal Proprietors' meeting at Simon Rogers in Boston on the 25th of April 1727; in the first place, by a major vote of the proprietors we chose Deacon Richard Draper Moderator of said meeting; in the next place, by a major vote of the proprietors, we chose Joseph Ruggles Proprietors' Clerk: in the next place, voted that Capt. Samuel Green should be allowed the charges in his account expended upon finding out the said land, to be paid the next meeting; and in the last place, voted that this meeting be adjourned to the same place the last Tuesday of May next, at one of the clock in the afternoon.”

At the adjourned meeting, "Voted, on the 30th of May, 1727, by the Proprietors of a certain tract of land contained in a deed signed John Magus, Lawrence Nassawanno, &c., dated 27th of December, 1686, that Col. Joshua Lamb, Deacon Richard Draper and Capt. Samuel Green, be a committee to represent the whole proprietors, and to prefer such a petition to the honorable General Court as they in their prudence may think fit; the prayer of which to contain what may be most needful for the safe proceeding of said proprietors in settling the said propriety."

In the printed Journal of the House of Representatives, under date of June 10, 1727, we find this record: "A petition of Joshua Lamb, Richard Draper, and Samuel Green, as they are a committee of a number of proprietors and purchasers of a certain tract of land, lying near the town of Brookfield, formerly called Quabaug, shewing that the said Richard Draper and sundry others formerly purchased of some Indians a large tract of land called Wombemesiscook, butted and bounded as by said deed exhibited with the petition appears, being acknowledged and recorded, praying that this Court would confirm unto them and those they represent, and their associates, the said tract of land, that they may be encouraged to make a speedy settlement thereof, for the reasons mentioned. Read, and committed to the Committee appointed to take into consideration the several petitions for lands to be erected into townships." The Committee submitted a report June 23, 1727, and it was thereupon "Voted, that the contents of six miles square be allowed to the purchasers of the tract within mentioned, between the town of Brookfield and the Equivalent land in the county of Hampshire, to be laid out by a surveyor and chainmen upon oath; provided that within five years next after such survey and confirmation thereof by this Court, the grantees, their heirs and assigns, shall settle fifty families, that are now inhabitants of this Province, and have a meeting-house erected, a Minister settled, a lot for the ministry, and one for the school laid out; the house-lots to be laid out as near as may be, and as regularly and defensibly as the land will allow of, provided the petitioners make no further claim to the said land within mentioned."¹ The General Court Records show that the Council non-concurred June 28, 1727.

It is evident that a settlement had already been commenced at the "Elbows"; for on the next day after the rejection of their petition by the Council, June 29, 1727, the Proprietors met at Boston, and "in the first place chose Deacon Draper Moderator; in the next place voted that Capt. Green should go upon the proprietors' land, and warn them off from making any further improvement thereon: again voted that Capt. Samuel Green should agree with those persons that have made a pitch upon the said land for the present year, as he and they shall agree, as our tenants."¹ It would seem that those who had "pitched upon the said land," without authority, were quieted in their possession, and that not long afterwards a colony of Scotch Presbyterians, sometimes called Scotch-Irish, were admitted.² The Rev. Simeon Colton, in a brief sketch of Palmer, published in the Historical Magazine, October, 1869, says: "The earliest date of the laying out of any lot of land is the 11th of June, 1728. . . . There are many lots laid out in 1728, most of which were laid out in December." Notwithstanding the Council had refused to concur with the House of Representatives in granting the authority which the proprietors desired, they asserted their just right to the territory, and determined to make it available by admitting settlers. At a meeting, July 25, 1728, after reciting the purchase, and the failure to obtain "the privileges of a township," they elected Joseph Ruggles to be their clerk, and directed that he should be sworn, and should "buy a good book of clean paper to record all our acts and votes in, from year to year." The record continues: "And we do also hereby appoint Capt. Samuel Green, and Mr. Nathaniel Paige, and the Rev. Mr. Timothy Ruggles, to be a Committee to procure a good and well approved of Surveyor and two Chainmen, who shall be under oath to the faithful discharge of their office and trust, and shall survey six miles square within our claim, and draw a fair platt thereof, and the same put on record; and any two of the committee to have full power to act; and also their power is to penation, or equivalent therefor, the former granted to the latter a large tract of land embracing the present towns of Belchertown and Pelham, and the greater part of Prescott and Ware. This tract was called the "Equivalent Land," which was sold by Connecticut for about six farthings per acre. See Palfrey's Hist. N. Eng., iv. 363.

sided in Leicester more than ten years, of which town, as well as of Lambstown, or Hardwick, he was a proprietor.

² "As early as 1727, settlements were made in what is now Palmer, under grants or permits from the proprietors of Lambstown, by a colony of emigrants from the north of Ireland, among whom were Isaac Magoun and James Brakenridge."

extend to make an agreement with such persons as have settled upon the same as to the bounds of their farms, and what to give for their interests there, and to improve the money they shall gain thereby towards defraying the charge that the committee shall be at in the work they are empowered to do. . . . Then to proceed to make an allotment of forty or fifty lots, one for a minister, one for a ministry, and one for a school; and the other to be disposed of as the proprietors shall hereafter order and agree."¹

During the next year another effort was made by the proprietors to have their claims recognized by the General Court. By the printed Journal of the House of Representatives, it appears that on the 24th of September, 1729, "A petition of Joshua Lamb, Esq. and Mr. Timothy Ruggles, a committee of a number of proprietors and purchasers of a certain tract of land lying near Brookfield, praying for confirmation of all or part thereof for a township, for reasons mentioned. Read, and the question was put whether the prayer of the petition should be granted. It passed in the negative."

Two months later the printed Journal describes a general scramble for this territory. November 25, 1729: "A petition of Josiah Edson and sundry others, inhabitants of Bridgewater, praying for a grant of a tract of land for a township between Ware River and Swift River. Read and referred to Thursday the 27th current, when other petitions for lands are to come under consideration." November 27, 1729: "A petition of Isaac Burr, John King,² and sundry others, shewing that they are settled upon a certain tract of land, bounded easterly by Brookfield, southerly and westerly by Brimfield, and northerly by Coldspring,³ by admission of the Reverend Mr. Timothy Ruggles of Rochester and others, a committee of the proprietors of said tract of land (as they call themselves), praying that they may have the grant and authority of this Court for settling on said land, and be exempted from the conditions they have entered into with the said committee. Read. A petition of Robert Auchmuty, Esq., for and in behalf of Joshua Lamb, Esq., and Timothy Ruggles, Clerk, as they are a committee of the proprietors of a certain tract or parcel of land containing by estimation twelve miles long, north and south, and eight miles wide, east and west, lying near Quabang, known by the name of Wombemsicunck, in which is concluded the land petitioned for by Isaac Burr, John King, and others, as also the land contained in the petition of Robert White, and John Stiles, Josiah Edson, Jr., and sundry others, as well as sundry other petitions for land within their propriety, praying that they may be heard by their counsel, to make out their right to the lands contained in their purchase from the Indian Sachems, before any grant on the said petitions be made, or that, if any grant should pass, that a saving of their right and claim may be inserted, for the reasons mentioned." December 2, 1729: All the parties were heard, and the petitions were rejected.

¹ Both the trespassers, or squatters, and those who were regularly admitted, united in a petition to the General Court, November 24, 1732, for a grant of this land to themselves, alleging that "the reason why your petitioners entered on the said land was as follows: Some from the encouragement of Joshua Lamb Esq. and Company, that the said land belonged to them, and that they would give to such of your petitioners as entered under them a good right and title to such a part thereof as they respectively contracted for: . . . Others of your petitioners entered on from necessity, not having wherewith of their own to provide."

Similar petitions were presented in June, 1731, with this variation: that John King and others asked to "be confirmed in their possession of the said lands, saving to Col. Lamb and associates their right therein." June 16: "The House proceeded to the consideration of the several petitions of Joshua Lamb and others, Joseph Wright and others, and John King and others, entered on the 15th instant, which were severally read, and the papers referring to them; and after a long debate the questions were severally put, whether the prayers of the said petitions should be granted? and it passed in the negative." Apparently despairing of success in their effort to obtain confirmation of their title to the whole territory purchased by them, the committee, on the next day after the rejection of their petition, June 7, 1731, entered a new petition for "eight miles square, adjacent to the river called Nenemeseck, alias Ware River (in such form as the lands will admit of), for a township." This petition was rejected December 31, 1731; and on the next day "a petition of Joshua Lamb, Timothy Ruggles, Joseph Ruggles, and Ebenezer Pierpont, in behalf of themselves and associates," was presented for the grant of "a tract of land of the contents of six miles square." This petition was granted by the House January 13, 1732; the Council concurred; but the Governor withheld his consent.

The same committee renewed their petition, at the next session of the General Court, reciting the facts before stated, and praying for "a grant of land of the contents of six miles square on the northward of the river aforesaid, and adjacent thereto." "In the House of Representatives, June 17th, 1732. Read, and in answer to this petition ordered, that there be and hereby is granted unto the petitioners and their associates a tract of land of the contents of six miles square for a township, at the place petitioned for, to be laid out in a regular form by a surveyor and chainmen under oath, a plan thereof to be presented to this Court at their next session for confirmation:¹ the said land by them to be settled on the conditions following, viz., that they within the space of five years settle and have on the spot sixty families (the settlers to be none but such as are natives of New England),² each settler to build a good and convenient dwelling-house, of one story high, eighteen feet square at the least, and clear and bring to four acres fit for improvement, and three acres more, well stocked with English grass, and also lay out three shares throughout the town, each share to be one sixty-third part of the said town, one share for the first settled minister, one for the ministry, and the other for the school; and also build a convenient meeting-house, and settle a learned and orthodox minister, within the term aforesaid." The Council concurred June 20, and Governor Belcher consented June 30, 1732.

Thus, after a tedious and expensive delay of five years duration from the date of their first petition, the proprietors obtained legal recognition of their title to a little more than one third part of the territory which they claimed under their Indian deed; being the north end of the tract, instead of the south end for which they first sought confirmation. The question naturally arises, what occasioned such long delay? When the same proprietors desired to improve their property at Leicester in 1714, the General Court granted their first petition, and not only recognized their title, but established the territory at once as a township. Why was not their petition in the present case granted as readily?

² In the order passed by the House, June 23, 1727, it was required that the grantees should "settle fifty families that are now inhabitants of this Province," under which provision the Scotch-Irish Colony was admissible; but this new restriction effectually excluded all except the native-born population. It is not improbable that this exclusion was made at the suggestion of the petitioners, who had already suffered so much annoyance and loss by the conduct of those who had settled at the Elbows.

Perhaps one reason was this: the "Equivalent Land," granted by the General Court in 1713, was so near to Brookfield and the "Braintree six thousand acres," that a tract of twelve miles in length and eight miles in width, bordering on Nenemeseck or Ware River, could not be found between the Elbows and Rutland, which then included Barre. Moreover, in this case the proprietors did not adopt the expensive method which had formerly proved so successful. The order of the General Court, confirming the title of Leicester to the nine persons who purchased the territory of the Indians, was passed February 25, 1713-4. "These proprietors had probably already associated others with them in the enterprise of settling the town and sharing in the speculation; for we find them executing a deed on the 23d of the same February, which was acknowledged before Penn Townsend, Esq., to thirteen other associates, dividing the same into twenty equal and undivided shares, of which two were equally divided, each between two, so as to make twenty-two proprietors of the twenty shares. The names of the persons who thus became interested with the original purchasers were Jeremiah Dummer, Paul Dudley, John Clark, Addington Davenport, Thomas Hutchinson, John White, William Hutchinson, Francis Wainwright, John Chandler and Thomas Howe as one, Daniel Allen and Samuel Sewall as one, and William Dudley. Every one of these were men of influence in the Province. . . . If it were proper, at this distance of time, to indulge in any conjectures in relation to the affairs of the proprietors, one would be led to remark upon the character and position of the men with whom the original purchasers shared the territory they had acquired. They embraced some of the most prominent and leading men of both political parties, some of them connected with the immediate government of the Province, and quite a proportion of them united by strong family ties; and if it could be supposed that by lapse of time, or defect in the original deed, or any other cause, it had become necessary to exert a combined influence over the government in order to obtain a confirmation of the title, it is pretty obvious that these were precisely the class of men through whose aid such a measure might be hoped to be accomplished."¹ No such lavish expenditure was made to secure the grant of Hardwick. But six months afterwards, December 27, 1732, Joseph Haskell of Rochester, Samuel Willis, Esq., of Dartmouth, and Ebenezer Pierpont and Colonel William Dudley of Roxbury were admitted as joint proprietors, "each of them for a whole share," making the shares "twelve in number and no more." If these persons did not purchase their shares by payment of money, Haskell and Willis probably rendered efficient aid in bringing forward the settlement by inducing their townsmen to emigrate to the wilderness; Pierpont was cousin to the Ruggles heirs, and was proprietors' clerk, and apparently legal adviser for several years; Dudley only can reasonably be suspected of having used official influence in obtaining the grant, but even of him it is recorded that his share was received in right of his brother Thomas, deceased.

Several years later, the title to this territory was challenged by a Stockbridge Indian. This subject is introduced here, somewhat out of the order of time, as a fit conclusion of this chapter. The original papers are still preserved:—

"To his Honor Spencer Phips, Esq., Lieut. Governor and Commander in Chief in and over his Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, and to the Hon. his Majesty's Council and House of Representatives in General Court convened at Boston, September the 26th, 1750.

"The Memorial of Hendrick Kequoquau, now resident at Stockbridge, a native and claimer of the northern part of Brookfield, alias the land called Lambstown, lying on the northwest of the said Brookfield, humbly sheweth, That your memorialist, being born and brought up at said Brookfield, and by right of inheritance from his ancestors the proper owner of said land, your memorialist, not having yet sold the said land, or ever in any way or manner received any thing in consideration therefor, although your memorialist has had encouragement from Col. Stoddard that he should be paid for the same. Your memorialist has been long endeavouring to obtain justice respecting the premises, but has hitherto failed. Your memorialist being aged and necessitous, and standing in real need, having an honest and just right to the lands granted away by this Province, your memorialist prays that the honored Court would be pleased to consider the case, and agreeable to their invariable rule of justice and goodness be pleased to grant something by way of satisfaction for said lands. And your memorialist shall, as in duty bound, ever pray, &c.

Instead of determining whether the Province should “grant something by way of satisfaction,” as prayed for by the petitioner, an indorsement on the petition shows that the House of Representatives, October 10, 1750, “ordered that the proprietors of Hardwick make the within named Hendrick proper satisfaction in consideration of his right to the lands belonging to said Township; it appearing that he was one of the native owners of the same, and it not appearing that he has made sale thereof.” The Council non-concurred; and an order of notice to the proprietors was issued, returnable at the next session, at which time they presented this answer: —

“To his Honor Spencer Phips, Esq., Lieut. Governor and Commander in Chief in and over his Majesty’s Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, and to the honorable his Majesty’s Council and House of Representatives in General Court convened, January 1750–1, the answer of the Proprietors of Hardwick to the memorial of Hendrick Kekquoquan, resident at Stockbridge, humbly sheweth:— That in order to set this affair in its proper light, we are obliged to recur to the year 1686, when our ancestors purchased a tract of land, twelve miles north and south, and eight miles east and west, of John Magus, Lawrence Nassawanno, James, Simon, and other Indian Sachems, to the northward of Brookfield, by the River Nenemeseck, now called Ware River; that your respondents, the said purchasers, were at many hundred pounds charge to bring forward a settlement of a plantation on the southerly part of their said purchase, about twenty years ago, at Kingston,² by the Elbows, which was quitted by the said purchasers without being reimbursed any of their expenses. And in the year 1732 your respondents, in consequence of their said purchase, obtained a grant of land, from the General Court, of the contents of six miles square, on the northward of Ware River and adjacent thereto for a township, subject to certain conditions of settling the same (being part of the premises purchased by our ancestors as aforesaid), which conditions of settling the said grantees many years since complied with, so as that in the year 1738³ the General Court, in their wisdom saw cause to incorporate Lambstown into a Township by the name of Hardwick, wherein the bounds, in their act made for that purpose, are expressed at large. So that they humbly apprehend, having in the first place obtained the native right, and afterward the General Court's grant, and complied with the conditions thereof, that they stand firm in their claim. More especially since they possess but little more than one third part of their purchase, having been obliged to surrender to the Secretary of this Province, for the public benefit, the remaining part of our said purchase,¹ with this proviso, that the said grantees should have, hold and enjoy the said grant of the contents of six miles square, to them, their heirs and assigns forever. And your respondents now want about one thousand acres of land to complete the said grant, besides the nine hundred acres in dispute with the proprietors of Quabin, which affair now lies before the Honorable Court. So that, upon the whole, when we call to mind that the Great and General Court, in their wisdom and goodness, have at all times encouraged industry and fidelity, we find our fears very much alleviated on account of the challenges made of our claims and right, one after the other; that we persuade ourselves that the premises in dispute, or any part thereof, will never be taken from those persons who have paid a dutiful regard to the Great and General Court, in complying with the conditions of their grant, and thereby promoted the public good, and be given to them who have neglected their duty in this respect; or that we shall be obliged to pay any sum or sums of money to a Native, upon his making any challenge without foundation. For though the memorialist, Hendrick Kekquoquan, was born and brought up at Brookfield, it does not necessarily follow that the lands to the northward thereof did belong to his ancestors, and so by right of inheritance descend to him; nor can we perceive that he ever made out any just claim that they or he had to the same. And as to any encouragement that Col. Stoddard might give the memorialist, we are wholly ignorant of it; but beg leave to represent that we have heard of, and some of us have seen, a large tract of land, lying northwest of Brookfield, at a place called Coyshill,² which we were informed that Col.

rendered "for the public benefit" nearly two thirds of the territory rightfully belonging to them, in order to acquire peaceable possession of the remainder, rather than to give it to individuals as the price of their favorable influence.

Stoddard claimed; so that it's highly probable that the memorialist has made a mistake as to the spot of land which he suggests he has a right to; for Col. Stoddard could not mean that the proprietors of Lambstown should pay him, the memorialist, for the lands which the General Court had granted to our propriety. Finally, we humbly leave the memorialist to the compassion and goodness of your Honor and Honorable Court, to relieve him, as to your wisdom shall seem meet, saving always our right to the lands purchased, granted, and settled by us, as aforesaid. And your respondents shall ever pray.

This answer having been read, the petition was referred to a joint committee, and its further consideration assigned to “the first Friday of the next sitting of the General Court;” but no subsequent action thereon appears to have been had.

HAVING obtained confirmation of their title, the proprietors procured from John Chandler, Jr., Esq., a warrant, by virtue of which Joseph Ruggles gave notice of a legal meeting to be held at Roxbury on the 27th of December, 1732, “then and there to choose a Proprietors’ Clerk, and to manage, improve, grant, dispose, and divide the said lands, more especially to admit our associates in due form, and to choose a committee to lay out convenient highways to accommodate a township, and to lot out so much of the said land to the proprietors and such as shall be hereafter admitted settlers in such ways as may most conduce to the promoting and settling thereof,” etc.¹

At this meeting, and the next succeeding which was held by adjournment, effective measures were adopted for the speedy fulfilment of the conditions imposed by the General Court. I shall quote freely: — “Voted and chose Joshua Lamb, Esq. Moderator of said meeting; and chose Joseph Ruggles Proprietors’ Clerk.

“Voted, That Nathaniel Paige’s heirs, Andrew Gardner’s as-

“The forewritten is a true copy of a notification which Abner Lee of Worcester this day made oath before me, the subscriber, that he set up on the house of William Thomas within the tract of land aforementioned, and which was done by eight o’clock in the forenoon of this day.

Attest: John Chandler, Jr., Justice Peace.”

Very probably other persons may have already erected houses on this territory, but no proof of their identity is known to exist; and this William Thomas may therefore be regarded as the first known English resident in what is now Hardwick; though an ancient tradition gives the priority to Benjamin Smith.

signs, Benjamin Gamblin's heirs, Benjamin Tucker's heirs, John Curtis's heirs, Richard Draper's heirs, Samuel Ruggles's heirs, of Roxbury lately deceased, Joshua Lamb's heirs, and Joseph Haskell, Ebenezer Pierpont, Samuel Willis Esq., and Col. William Dudley Esq., are received as associates, according to said Court's grant, each of them for a whole share.¹

“Voted, That five committee men are chosen to manage the affair of the settlement of the town according to the warrant, to wit: Col. William Dudley, Col. Joshua Lamb, Mr. Ebenezer Pierpont, Capt. Joseph Ruggles, and Mr. Samuel Davis; but three of the five to go at a time. Three men are chose a committee to audit all our accounts against the next meeting, to wit, Col. Dudley, Caleb Seaver, and Thomas Mayo. This meeting is adjourned or continued unto Wednesday the twenty-first of February next ensuing, at nine o'clock in the morning, at the Gray Hound Tavern in Roxbury.

“February 21, 1732-3, by continuation from Dec. 27th, at the Gray Hound, met and unanimously voted, in the first place, that two thousand acres of land in our new settlement or township hereby is given and granted to the petitioners and Committee, to be by them disposed of as a gratuity to such persons as have been serviceable to us in obtaining the grant of the same, as they shall think fit; all necessary highways needful for the same to be included. Voted, that we are adjourned for the space of one hour to the same place.

“And then met and voted that whereas in the Court's grant of our new township at Ware River, the Rev. Mr. Timothy Ruggles and Capt. Joseph Ruggles are two of the grantees, they have quitted to the proprietors the grant of Court to them as petitioners; they shall have, and hereby have granted them five hundred acres of land between them in said town, by allotment, over and above one share to the heirs of Capt. Samuel Ruggles, late of Roxbury deceased.

“Voted, That Benjamin Smith, who married one of the heirs of John Curtis deceased, since he has carried on his part of the charge with us, it is ordered that the said Benjamin Smith shall have recorded to him the ninth part of the said John Curtis's share.

“Unanimously voted, That whereas Joshua Lamb, Timothy Ruggles, Joseph Ruggles, and Ebenezer Pierpont, have given a general quitclaim to the Province of a Deed, signed by John Magus, Lawrence Nassawano, and other Indian Sachems, to Joshua Lamb and others; now we do declare we are contented and well satisfied, and do ratify and confirm said act, agreeable to said quitclaim. . . .

“Unanimously voted, That the whole township shall be lotted out as soon as may be by the committee as shall hereafter be determined by the Propriety; three convenient places, if they may be obtained, to seat mills on, reserved for the benefit of the proprietors, and the committee to make report of the same to the proprietors.

“Voted, That ten acres¹ of land be reserved near the centre of said tract, to set a meeting-house on, and for a burial-place and a training-field.

“Voted, That this meeting is adjourned to to-morrow morning at the same place.

“Roxbury, February 22, 1732-3. Met by continuation from the 21st of February, 1732-3.

“Unanimously voted, That the committee shall as soon as may be lay out one hundred and eleven lots for the proprietors and settlers, in one hundred acre lots, having respect to the quality of the land, viz., four lots to each proprietor's share, sixty settlers, and the lots for the minister, ministry, and school; the minister's lot to be laid out by the committee near the centre of the town, and the rest of the lots to be drawn for, both by the proprietors and settlers.

“Unanimously voted, That the remaining land belonging to the proprietors be all lotted out by the committee in such quantities as that each proprietor have three lots and so sorted as that in the draft each person may have a just and equal share.

“Unanimously voted, That each settler pay into the hands of the committee, upon his drawing his lot, the sum of five pounds towards the defraying the charges of surveying, &c.; and the further sum of ten pounds each, for the building a meeting-house and settling a minister, within the space of three years after his being admitted.

“Unanimously voted, That each proprietor have leave to offer for admission five settlers of such persons according to the Court's grant, and shall give bonds to the committee for the fulfilment of the order and conditions of Court within three years from their admission on forfeiture of their lots to be again disposed of; always provided that those who have paid their money and are already admitted be deducted out of the whole in proportion; and whereas the proprietors have each of them a draught of four lots, which makes nine lots including the settlers, five of any of the nine being settled by them shall be sufficient."

On a more careful survey, the proprietors found that they had interfered with other grants, and were curtailed in their territory. They petitioned the General Court for relief, June 15, 1733, representing that, "so it was, that the surveyor and chainmen, who were under oath, not knowing the bounds of a tract of land of six thousand acres granted heretofore by this Court to Braintree and adjoining to Rutland, and not thinking the said Braintree land or any part was on the northwest of Ware River, have included within that plat four hundred acres of good land,¹ fit for settlements; as also have included the quantity of three hundred acres more at the west end of the grant, being land formerly granted by this Court to the Government of Connecticut, called, Equivalent lands, and belonging, as your petitioners are informed, to John Read, Esq.,² all which will appear by the plan herewith presented. Wherefore your petitioners being thus lessened in their grant, and having three large ponds of some hundred acres included, obliges us humbly to pray your Excellency and Honors that a strip or parcel of land belonging to this Province, between Braintree grant, Brookfield town, and Ware River, so far as the bend of the River is, may be added to the grant made your petitioners. . . . Our humble prayer is that the said land may be added to and accounted a part of the township granted as aforesaid, in full satisfaction of the land that is wanting of the contents of six miles square as aforesaid."

"In the House of Representatives, June 16th, 1733. Read, and ordered that the prayer of the petition be and hereby is granted, and the strip or parcel of land within mentioned is confirmed to the petitioners, and their associates, and their assigns, respectively, forever by the following bounds, viz., beginning at the east bank of Ware River, at the northwest [northeast?] corner of a tract of land laid out to James Hovey, and confirmed this present session; from thence running southerly, as that line runs, to Brookfield bounds; and from thence easterly, as Brookfield bounds run, to the southwesterly corner¹ of Braintree six thousand acres; and from thence extending northwesterly, bounding northeasterly on said six thousand acres, till the line comes to Ware River; and then bounding on Ware River to the first bounds: in lieu of the four hundred acres taken off by Braintree grant, and the three hundred acres taken off by land of John Read, Esq., and the ponds, etc., as aforesaid, provided it interferes with no former grant." The Council concurred three days afterwards, and the Governor gave his consent.

At the time of this grant, Lieutenant (afterwards captain) Eleazar Warner resided with his family on a farm, which was given to him and his wife by her father, Thomas Barns of Brookfield, in 1729, and included part of the Winnimisset swamp and upland. His house stood about a mile east of Ware River, at the corner of the old turnpike and the road leading to New Braintree meeting-house, and was afterwards long known as the Perez Cobb house. He was probably the first English settler on this territory.² At this time also very few settlers had become resident on the original grant. By the Proprietors' Records it appears that on the 12th of June, 1733, seventy-four of the one hundred and eleven proposed lots had been laid out; "and there is sixteen persons already settled and entered on them;" and it was "proposed that twenty-four persons³ more shall at this time be admitted as settlers thereon, who, together with the proprietors, shall draw for the lots already laid out. . . . Then the

² It is a family tradition, and it is so stated in the Massachusetts Spy, December 10, 1817, that his son Warham Warner, who was born November 1, 1730, and died December 4, 1817, "was the first [English] child born in New Braintree." At the date of this birth, probably no settlement had been commenced in what is now Hardwick.

³ These "twenty-four" were not yet resident, as they had not drawn their lots, and some of them never personally occupied those lots. Several were delinquent for a full year, and it was voted, June 12, 1734, "that the Committee write forthwith to each settler that has not yet been at work on their lots, to come into the meeting on the adjournment to give bond to fulfil their settlements according to agreement; and provided they do not, others shall be admitted." Five such lots were declared forfeited July 21, 1736.

proprietors and the twenty-four proposed as settlers proceeded to draw their lots." And December 26, 1733, "The proprietors proceeded to draw for their two hundred acre lots, and drew the same as follows:" three lots of two hundred acres each to "Coll. Lamb, Gardner's heirs, Mr. Haskall, Mr. Paige, Ebenezer Pierpont, Mr. Tucker's heirs, Coll. William Dudley, Mr. Draper's heirs, Mr. Gamblin's heirs, Capt. Willis, Mr. Curtis's heirs, Capt. Ruggles' heirs." At the same meeting "the lots were drawn amongst the proprietors and settlers, viz.: the remaining thirty-two as follows." The list, however, was not entered on the Proprietors' Records until November 3, 1743, when it was "voted, that the list of the lots drawn by the proprietors and settlers, laid before the proprietors by their Committee, be and hereby is accepted, and that the Proprietors' Clerk be desired to record them forthwith in their Book of Records." Four one hundred acre lots are recorded, as drawn by each of the twelve proprietors. Then follows a record of the settlers' lots: "The following is a list of the persons' names and the lots drawn by them, with the number of acres belonging to each lot drawn by the persons admitted settlers in Lambstown, so called." I omit the numbers of the lots, as no plan of them is known to exist.

October 30, 1733. "Voted, That the Rev. Mr. Timothy Ruggles shall have the Mill Lot for one of his settlers' lots to the west side of the 69th lot."¹ "Voted, That Lieut. Leonard shall have the Mill lot adjoining to Ware River, at the southerly corner of the town,² provided he erects a good grist mill on the River in one year from the last day of June next, and that he keeps and maintains the said mill in good repair for the space of twenty years, so as to supply the inhabitants of the town with grinding from time to time, and for the usual toll; said lot to be accommodated as the Committee shall see cause, but not to include above one hundred and fifty acres of land."

Although never actually attacked by hostile troops, in its exposed situation on the frontiers the settlement of the town was retarded by fears of invasion. Hence the proprietors voted, December 27, 1733, "that if the inhabitants or settlers are mo-

² At Gilbertville. Lieutenant Leonard failed to perform the conditions, and the lot was granted, September 10, 1735, to "William Jennison, Esq., and Thomas Stearns, both of Worcester, and Stephen Harrington of Lambstown in equal parts. . . . And it is to be understood that the said mill is to be set on either Ware River or the Brook running through said lot, as may best answer the end of the builders and inhabitants, both." The mill and lot subsequently became the property of John Wells, after whose death they were sold, 24th October, 1750, to Jonathan Warner. The water-power at this place is the most important within the town. Instead of a grist mill it now moves an extensive manufactory.

lest by a war with the Indian or French Enemy, it is agreed and allowed that if they, within two years after the expiration of the war, shall fulfil and bring forward their settlement according to the Court's grant, they shall enjoy their rights." And six months later, June 12, 1734, it was "represented to the proprietors, that Mr. Stephen Griffen¹ was desirous to build and settle on his brother Norcross's lot, that the neighborhood might be more complete and defensible in case of a war ;" and liberty was granted accordingly.

A somewhat suspicious vote was adopted, December 27, 1733 : "Voted, to Mr. Ebenezer Pierpont the quantity of three hundred acres of land, to be disposed of by him to two particular gentlemen, viz., one hundred acres to one of said gentlemen, and two hundred acres to the other gentleman." The mystery is partially solved by a memorandum made on the fourth Wednesday of September, 1734, that "whereas there was a grant of three hundred acres of land to Mr. Ebenezer Pierpont some time ago for two particular gentlemen : now the meaning is, that the Honorable Judge Dudley shall have two hundred acres, and one hundred acres to William Dudley, Esq." What service these gentlemen had rendered or were expected to render in consideration of this gift does not appear ; nor is any reason obvious why their names were not mentioned in the original grant, like those of other recipients of land, whether by gift or purchase.

Until 1736, the settlement of the township made slow progress ; but in that year there seems to have been a large accession of inhabitants. In the House of Representatives November 29, 1736, "a petition of Benjamin Smith and sundry other inhabitants of lands lately granted to Joshua Lamb, Esq. and others, at a place called Lambstown, setting forth that they have fulfilled the conditions of a settlement, being arrived to the number of sixty inhabitants,² and performed what was enjoined on them as to subduing and improving the lands, and have called and settled a minister, praying that they may be incorporated into a township, for the reasons mentioned. Read, and ordered that the prayer of the petition be granted.”¹ The Council non-concurred; but two days afterwards proposed to incorporate the place as a district, to which the House assented, and it was enacted, “That the prayer of the petition be so far granted as that Mr. Benjamin Smith, one of the petitioners within named, be and is hereby authorized and empowered to notify and warn the inhabitants and residents on the tract of land within mentioned, qualified by law to vote in town affairs, to convene as soon as may be in some public place, then and there to choose town officers, and agree upon methods for the support of the ministry, and defraying other charges; the said officers to stand until the twenty-fifth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and thirty-eight. Provided, nevertheless, and it is hereby declared, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the confirmation of the original grant of the said tract of land, but that the same remain as heretofore until this Court be fully satisfied that the grantees have fulfilled the conditions of the grant.”² The meeting, thus authorized, was holden February 9, 1737; and its proceedings are here entered in full, as they show to a certain extent who were then inhabitants. It was voted:

² If this mean sixty families, — the number required in the grant, — the greater part must have become inhabitants during this year. Deacon Joseph Allen moved into the town in the early part of the year ; and he says there were then only twenty-three families in the place.

“1. That Mr. Benjamin Smith be the Moderator of said meeting.

“2. That said meeting be adjourned to the house of Nathan Carpenter, on said day.

“3. That Samuel Robinson be Town Clerk.

“4. That Benjamin Smith, Joseph Allen, Samuel Robinson, Stephen Griffeth, and Benjamin Ruggles be Selectmen.

“5. That John Wells be Town Treasurer.

“7. That George Abbot and Ichabod Stratton be Constables.

“8. That all the remaining town officers be chosen by holding up of hands.

“9. That Thomas Perry and Benjamin Andrews be tiding men.

“10. That Josiah Barret and James Aikens be surveyors of highways.

“The families were twenty-three,
That then did here belong:
They all did hardships bear with me,
But now are dead and gone.”

Up to this time, the Rev. Timothy Ruggles was more active than any other person in carrying forward the settlement of the town. Although he sold, in 1736, his proportion of the share inherited from his father, Captain Samuel Ruggles, of Roxbury, he made frequent and extensive purchases from the heirs of other proprietors and from those who had received grants as settlers. His activity and the extent of his possessions by grant and purchase are partially indicated by votes passed June 29, 1737: “ Whereas Mr. Timothy Ruggles of Rochester, one of the proprietors, was obliged to settle five lots, called settlers' lots, in said Lambstown, as granted to himself, each of them one hundred acres, and there was a vote passed, that if he did the duties of settling on the thousand acres, so called, that it should answer for the same, and he having performed his duty as such on said thousand acres, as appears by the view of the proprietors' committee, voted that those lots in said thousand acres which are No. 1, No. 2, No. 3, No. 4, No. 5, No. 6, No. 7, according to the plan of that part of the thousand acres, so called, which lies on the westerly side of Ware River¹ in Lambstown, containing in the whole eight hundred and seventy-three, signed William Chandler, Surveyor, and as entered on the original plan, &c., be and hereby are confirmed to the said Timothy Ruggles, and to be to him, his heirs and assigns forever.” At the same time three other lots were confirmed to him, he having bought them of Samuel Willis, Esq., Samuel Shumway, and Samuel Douglass, and “ having performed the like duties on the same.”

During the two years between the grant of authority to elect

homestead, and south on the mill lot, this line being “ the line between the mill lot and the thousand acres.” The proprietors voted, in September, 1734, “ that the piece of land decyphered on the plat^of one hundred and twenty-eight acres, lying eastward of Ware River, and on Brain-tree grant, and on Mr. Barnes's heirs, is allowed to make up the complement of one thousand acres on Ware River,” etc.

certain officers and the full incorporation of the town, the inhabitants transacted very little business at their public meetings, except providing for the erection of a meeting-house and the maintenance of a minister, which will be noticed elsewhere. Heretofore the provision made by the proprietors for this purpose was inadequate; and the inhabitants manifested a strong desire for incorporation, that they might thus become able to raise a sufficient revenue by taxation of all the land, whether owned by residents or non-residents. Accordingly it was voted, June 30, 1737, "That Mr. Christopher Paige be the man to go to the General Court, to get the Town incorporated, or the land taxed." When this petition was under consideration in December, 1737, the proprietors asked the General Court to delay the act of incorporation for another year, and their request was granted.

At the election of officers, March 6, 1738, several new names appear: John Amadon, Matthew Barr, Samuel Gillett, Robert Gitchell, Roger Haskell, Stephen Herrington, Constant Merrick, Christopher Paige,¹ Eleazar Sanyer, Jonathan Warner, and Samuel West.

August 8, 1738, voted, "That Benjamin Smith's yard be a pound for the town this year."

October 19, 1738, voted, "That the town-meetings for the time be warned by posting at the meeting-house." Personal notice seems to have been given, heretofore, by two constables, each being directed "To warn all freeholders and other inhabitants in Lambstown, so called, in your district." The Great Meadow Brook was then the division between the two districts. At a later period, the county road, which afterwards became a turnpike, was established as the line between the north and south districts.

November 2, 1738, voted: "1. That Lieut. Eleazar Warner be the Moderator of this meeting. 2. That the town will send to the General Court, to pray for a tax of two pence per acre upon all the land lying within the limits of Lambstown. 3. That Deacon Christopher Paige be the man to go to the General Court, to pray for the laying of the aforesaid tax."²

This petition was presented in December, and an order of

² In anticipation of this movement, a petition was presented, December 2, 1738, by "Ebenezer Ayers, Eleazar Warner, and sundry others, proprietors and inhabitants of the southeasterly part of Lambstown, so called, on the southerly or southeasterly side of Ware River, showing that though they live on farm notice was issued to the proprietors. December 15, 1738, in the House of Representatives, "The petition of Christopher Paige in behalf of Lambstown, so called, praying as entered the 9th current, read again, together with the answer of Joshua Lamb, Esq., and others, a committee of the proprietors and non-residents of Lambstown, and the matter being maturely considered, in answer to this petition, voted, That the Assessors of the plantation of Lambstown, so called, are hereby allowed and empowered to levy an assessment or tax of three half pence per acre per annum, for the space of five¹ years next coming, on all the lands therein and belonging either to resident or non-resident proprietors; the money arising hereby to be annually applied and paid, viz. one half thereof to the Reverend Minister there for his better encouragement and more comfortable support, the residue for building and finishing a handsome meeting-house for the better accommodating the inhabitants in attending the public worship of God. And the constables or collectors of said plantation for the time being during the said term are also hereby directed and required duly and seasonably to collect and pay in the sum of the said tax annually, for the uses and purposes aforesaid. And the petitioner is hereby further allowed and empowered to prepare and bring in a Bill for erecting the said plantation into a township, that so the inhabitants thereof may be vested with, hold, and enjoy, equal powers, privileges, and immunities, with the inhabitants of the other towns of the Province." The Bill or Act of Incorporation was duly enacted, and approved January 10, 1739.² It is inserted in full at the end of this chapter. On the following day it was "ordered, That Mr. Christopher Paige, a principal inhabitant of a new land which they hold by purchase, and lately by this Court annexed to the said plantation of Lambstown, and are accounted to help make up the number of Lambstown settlers, yet they never received any of the propriety lands, that their habitations are so situated as renders it much more convenient for them to be annexed to Braintree new grant than to remain as they are; praying the order of the Court to annex them to Braintree new grant, for the reasons mentioned." This petition failed; but it was renewed several years later, and was then successful.

² At this time the township received the name of Hardwicke, and it was thus written for many years. The final letter has since been omitted, and in conformity to the almost universal custom, I have written Hardwick, in this sketch. Hardwicke, however, is undoubtedly the original name. This name was probably given in compliment to Lord Hardwicke, an English nobleman. But if the whole vocabulary had been searched for the purpose, it would have been difficult to find a name more accurately descriptive of the character of this township; for it imports a place favorable for husbandry and the raising of cattle. See Rees's Encyclopedia.

Town, lately erected at a plantation called Lambstown, in the county of Worcester, by the name of Hardwicke, be and hereby is fully authorized and empowered to assemble the free-holders and other qualified voters there, on the first Monday in March next, at some convenient public place in said town, in order to their choosing a Town Clerk and other town officers for the year then next ensuing." A meeting was accordingly holden March 5, 1738-9, at which town officers were elected, to wit: Christopher Paige, Moderator; Cornelius Cannon, Town Clerk; Eleazar Warner, John Wells, Benjamin Smith, William Thomas, and Constant Merrick, Selectmen; John Wells, Treasurer; Samuel Robinson and Matthew Barr, Constables; Samuel Gillet and Josiah Barrett, Tythingmen; Ichabod Stratton, John Amadon, Roger Haskell, and Nathan Carpenter, Surveyors of Highways; Phineas Powers and Jeremiah Powers, Fence-viewers; Richard Church and Amos Thomas, Hog-reeves.

CHAPTER IV.

CIVIL HISTORY.

Early Arrangement concerning Meeting-house, Minister, Schools, Highways, and Pound. — Cattle. — Deer. — Destructive Birds and Beasts. — Squirrels. — Beaver-dam. — Land Bank Bills. — Province Tax. — Cartway across Great Meadow Brook. — Pauper. — Inhabitants on the East Side of Ware River desire to be set off. — Excise Bill — Proprietors' Meetings established at Hardwick. — Proprietors' Records. — Advent of Brigadier Ruggles. — Highways. — Lottery. — Fair.

FOR several years after the incorporation of the town, the records disclose no event of a remarkable character. Preparations for the erection of a new meeting-house and for the comfortable support of a minister were continued. A beginning was also made for a permanent establishment of schools. Highways were laid out, and made passable for man and beast, but scarcely for even carts: — pleasure-carriages were unknown here until long afterwards. Measures were adopted for the destruction of beasts of prey, and mischievous birds, for the protection of domestic animals, and for their restraint from doing damage. Attention was principally given to the construction of humble dwelling-houses and the conversion of the forest into fruitful fields. Those who now enjoy the fruits of their labor can scarcely conceive the toil, and hardship, and self-denial of the pioneers in accomplishing this work. A few extracts from the records may afford a glimpse of their primitive condition.

April 3, 1739, at the first meeting after the organization by choice of officers, it was voted, "That the town will build a pound, thirty feet square, and that it shall be set near the meeting-house, and that Samuel Robinson be the man to build said pound according to law." Voted, "That hogs shall run at large the year ensuing, being yoked and ringed." Voted, "That the former Records shall stand good."¹

April 23, 1739. Voted, "That droves of cattle shall not be brought into town, under the penalty of ten shillings per head, for the men to pay that taketh them in, or yardeth them, or salteth them, or is anywise instrumental in such affair." [This order was modified, a year afterwards, April 14, 1740, when it was voted, "That any person or persons belonging to this town, that shall keep, or salt, or yard, any cattle in this town belonging to any other town, except milch cows or working oxen, from the first day of May next, until the last day of July, shall pay the sum of fifteen shillings per head, one half to the use of the town, and the other half to any person that shall complain and sue for the same." ¹] Also voted, that fifty pounds be expended on the highways; "to be in work, at six shillings per day till the 10th day of September, and five shillings per day till the 1st of December; four shillings a day for a yoke of oxen, and two shillings a day for a cart."

December 10, 1739. "Samuel Robinson and Benjamin Ruggles were appointed to take care that the law be duly executed in respect to killing of deer to the first Monday of March." ²

May 22, 1740. Voted, "To give three pence per head for old blackbirds, jays, and woodpeckers, and one penny per head for young ones; . . . that the Town Treasurer be ordered to receive the birds' heads as they shall be brought to him as abovesaid, and burn them or cut off their bills, and pay out of the Town's money to such persons as shall bring them in, according to the foregoing vote."

² The limitation of time, probably, had reference to the next annual town-meeting. Not only were deer found in the forest, but the smaller wild game, such as squirrels, rabbits, foxes, etc., and various kinds of birds, were so abundant as to be troublesome, and rival parties were frequently organized for their destruction. In the days of my boyhood, the chattering of gray squirrels was a familiar sound; and I have heard my seniors relate marvellous stories of the size and abundance of wild turkeys at an earlier period. Whether the race of beavers had become extinct before the settlement of the town, I know not; but on my father's homestead, distinct traces of a beaver-dam were visible not many years ago, below a meadow on Great Meadow Brook, nearly opposite to the house of Mr. Forster B. Aiken. Perhaps bears, and certainly wolves, endangered the public safety. In December, 1738, the General Court granted "the petition of Stephen Herrington, of Lambstown, praying to be allowed the premium for killing two wolves, which he took in his trap, but by reason of the wolves carrying the trap away, so that he could not find it in a fortnight, the wolves' ears were eaten off, so that eh could not obtain a legal certificate."

May 18, 1741. "Voted, That Land Bank Bills shall pay all town debts in this town.¹ It was put to vote to see if the town will free the Governor's sons' land from land tax, and it passed in the negative."

May 19, 1746. On the question whether "the town will allow Mr. Benjamin Smith any thing for his service in going to Boston to get town privileges," &c.,² it was "voted, that the town will acquit Benjamin Smith of the rates that was committed to James Robinson and Samuel Church, to gather, provided Benjamin Smith will acquit the town of all demands from the beginning of the world to this day." . . . "Voted, That Mr. Jonathan Warner, our Treasurer, shall have ten pounds, old tenor, to employ a Deputy to use his best interest to prevent a Province tax from coming this year, provided he find a man that will effect the matter, or have nothing for his trouble."³

March 9, 1747. "Voted, that the town will free Joseph Ruggles from mending highways, so long as he will maintain a good cart-way over Great Meadow Brook in the highway against his house."⁴

October 5, 1747. "Voted, that Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, are sufficient for grinding at the mill Capt. Hammond now tends for one year."⁵

March 7, 1748. On the question, whether "the town will raise money to maintain Hannah Maccoye, sent to this town for that intent," it was "voted to raise fifty pounds, old tenor, to maintain Hannah Maccoye."⁶

² This "service" was rendered in 1736. In September, 1739, the town had voted to pay fifteen pounds to Deacon Christopher Paige for similar service in 1738.

⁴ The house stood at the place marked

"O. Trow," on the R. Map. At an early day a grist-mill was erected here, and the dam was used as a road-way or bridge. It was voted, May 1, 1773, "to widen the bridge by Lient. Joseph Ruggles' mill, as wide again as it now is, and to raise it some higher." Not many years ago, the grade of the road was again changed.

⁵ This mill was at Gilbertville. Its former owner, John Wells, had deceased, and his widow had married Captain Nathaniel Hammond, who took charge of the mill.

March 6, 1749. Voted to oppose the "Petition¹ of the inhabitants of this town, living on the easterly side of Ware River, in which they pray to be set off to New Braintree and part of Brookfield, in order to be made a distinct township." August 11, 1749. "Chose Lieut. Constant Mirick to go to the General Court, to offer the reasons why the town is not willing the inhabitants living on the east side of Ware River should be set off with others as a town, or district, and there to do what he shall find necessary on that affair. William Andrewson appeared and entered his dissent against the proceedings of the meeting." October 8, 1749. "Voted, that the town be willing the inhabitants on the easterly side of Ware River be set off as a town or district."

September 30, 1754. "The question was put, whether the town be of the mind to have the Bill, published relating to an Excise by order of the Hon^{ble} House of Representatives of the 18th of June, passed into a law; and it passed in the affirmative."²

The meetings of the proprietors were held in Roxbury until 1754, in which year their second Clerk, Ebenezer Pierpont, Esq., deceased. By this time the number of resident proprietors had greatly increased, by purchase from the original associates and their heirs, and Hardwick became a more convenient place for the transaction of business. Accordingly, by virtue of "a warrant issued by the honorable Jacob Wendell, Esq., one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace through the Province," a meeting was held at the house of Mr. Joseph Ruggles, April 2, 1755, when Deacon Christopher Paige was elected Moderator, and Captain Paul Mandell, Proprietors' Clerk. Their subsequent meetings were in this town until May 19, 1761, when they had

² "The taxes at this time had become heavy, and the House were desirous of relieving, so far as they could, the polls and estates from this burden; and, to do this, contrived a plan for laying an excise upon wines and spirituous liquors consumed by the people. The Council refused to approve of it. Governor Shirley sent for the House into the Council Chamber, and there stated his objection to the measure, that it would be inconsistent with the natural rights of every private family to be subjected to keep and render an account of the quantity of excise liquors which they consumed in their private houses. The House immediately ordered the objectionable part of the Bill to be printed, and sent to every town for consideration. . . . The towns voted, some, that it was contrary to their liberties, and some, that it was not. The measure, however, was dropped for a short time, but passed, with some amendments, in December, 1754." Washburn's Hist. of Leicester, pp. 65, 66.

apparently closed their business. Their transactions, during these years, were almost entirely limited to the sale of their hitherto ungranted lands, the settlement of a controvercy with Greenwich in regard to boundaries, and a general adjustment of their financial affairs.¹

Until 1754 the town sent no representative to the General Court; but in that year Timothy Ruggles, Esq., was elected, and became at once a conspicuous member of the House. At that period representatives were paid by their several towns; and such towns as were not represented were subjected to fines. One of the first services demanded by this town of their representative, was to obtain a remission of a fine imposed for their former dereliction of duty. September 30, 1754. "Chose Timothy Ruggles, Esq., to petition the Great and General Court or Assembly of this Province, to get the Fine laid on our Town for not sending a Representative for the year 1752 remitted." He presented the petition, and urged these reasons: —

"That the Inhabitants of said Town less than twenty years before that time first began the settlement thereof, and in general went on said lands in poor and low circumstances, and by means of the exceeding roughness of said lands they are to this day obliged to expend yearly large sums in making and repairing their highways, and even this year are at the expense of a hundred pounds Lawful money for that purpose, and must be at the expense of some thousands of pounds upon their roads, before they will be brought to be as good as most of the roads in the Province are by nature, beside several large Bridges they are obliged to build and maintain; as also their crops of Indian corn having been for several years cut short to that degree that they have been obliged to buy and bring from the Towns upon Connecticut River near half the Corn necessary for their subsistence; as also at that time there were not much above eighty families in said Town, many of which were extremely poor; and before and ever since the Inhabitants of said Town are obliged to be at a

I made a full copy of all the records which remained in it, and returned the original to its former possessor. Since that time the volume has disappeared, and the most persistent search for it has hitherto been unsuccessful. If it still exists, its present custodian should forthwith place it in the office of the Town Clerk, agreeably to the vote passed in 1773.

great expense for the support of several poor and indigent persons; for which reasons your memorialist in behalf of said Town, most humbly prays for the remission of the aforesaid fine, &c.

TIMOTHY RUGGLES."

Some of these reasons, I suspect were somewhat highly colored, especially in regard to the number of paupers, and the general poverty of the inhabitants; but they were effectual, and the fine was remitted December 17, 1754.¹

During his residence here, from 1754 to 1774, Timothy Ruggles, Esq. (or, as he was generally styled, Brigadier Ruggles), was active in promoting the welfare of the town by introducing improved breeds of horses and neat cattle, and better methods for the cultivation of the soil. He also endeavored to promote its political importance by making it the shire town of a new county. Under his advice, doubtless, at a meeting held, May 16, 1763, "The town made choice of Timothy Ruggles, Esq., an agent to petition the Great and General Court, that the westerly part of the County of Worcester, and the easterly part of the County of Hampshire, be formed into a distinct County." This project failed. But in the previous year, through his influence, Hardwick was distinguished above other towns in the Province, by the establishment of a Fair,² after the English pattern. This Fair was considered so important, and of so great public interest,

"Be it enacted by the Governour, Council, and House of Representatives, that henceforth, there may be kept a Fair in said Hardwicke on the third Wednesday and Thursday of May, and on the third Wednesday and Thursday of October annually.

"And be it further enacted, that the said Town of Hardwicke be and hereby are enabled, at a meeting called for that purpose, to choose proper officers to regulate said Fair, until the annual meeting in March next, and to be chosen thereafter annually, in the month of March, during the continuance of this act.

"And be it further enacted, that no bargain and sale, made at any of the said Fairs, shall be deemed valid and effectual in the law, unless the same be made between sun-rising and sun-setting.

"This act to continue and be in force for the space of seven years from the first day of July next, and no longer."

This act was passed June 12, 1762. It seems to have been renewed after the expiration of seven years; the Fairs continued until 1775, when they ceased by special vote, not by limitation of time.

that its occurrence was duly predicted by the almanacs of the day, and "Hardwick Fair" had as conspicuous a notice as "General Election," or "Commencement at Cambridge." It attracted public attention and multitudes flocked to it from all the region round about.¹ It was holden twice a year, in May and October, when cattle and various articles of manufacture and merchandise were exhibited, bought, and sold. Wrestling, and other trials of strength and skill, were practised; and sometimes, it is said, pugilistic encounters were witnessed. It was uniformly under the direction of a superintendent, clerk, and from two to four constables, elected at the annual town meeting.² Drummers also were sometimes appointed. James Aiken was superintendent until 1771; after which, Thomas Robinson was elected until the Fair was discontinued, by vote of the town, in 1775. Its discontinuance was probably one of the effects of the intense political excitement which then prevailed. After the restoration of peace and quietness, the town twice petitioned, in 1785 and 1791, to have the Fair reëstablished, but the effort was unsuccessful.

¹ In anticipation of the great influx of strangers, ten persons obtained special license as innholders during the continuance of the Fair. The Records of the Court of Sessions, under date of September 23, 1762, contain this item: "The Court license the following persons to be innholders in the town of Hardwick during the times by law appointed for keeping the Fair in said town, viz., on the third Wednesday and Thursday in October next, and the third Wednesday and Thursday in May next, who recognized," etc. The persons named were Thomas Robinson, Challis Safford, Jonas Fay, Elisha Billings, Joel Carpenter, John Cooper, Daniel Wheeler, Jacob Fisk, Joseph Ruggles, and Joseph Warner. Although their expectations seem not to have been fully realized, half that number afterwards renewed their license.

² At a town-meeting, September 2, 1762, officers for the Fair were elected, to wit: James Aikens, Superintendent; Paul Mandell, Clerk; Thomas Robinson and Deacon John Cooper, Constables; (Deacon Cooper was excused and Jonathan Farr was elected in his place). "Appointed Capt. Paul Mandell to insert in the Public Prints when the Fair is to be holden in this town."

CIVIL HISTORY.

Emigration to Bennington, Vt., with Personal Notices. — Emigration to Barnard, Vt., with Personal Notices. — Perils encountered by the Pioneer Emigrants.

BESIDES the ordinary removal of inhabitants to which all towns are subject, there have been two organized emigrations from Hardwick, each forming the nucleus of a new town in Vermont. The first occurred in 1761; it was less in numbers than the other, but even more important in its results.

“‘The first settlement of Vermont, and the early struggles of its inhabitants not only in subduing a wilderness, but establishing an independent government,’ says Sparks, in his ‘American Biography,’ ‘afford some of the most remarkable incidents in American history.’ If this is true of the State in general, it is especially true of Bennington, the cradle of its infancy; and no less true of Bennington’s religious than of its secular life; for as it was the first town chartered, so its First Church was the first also in the territory afterwards Vermont. . . . On January 3, 1749, parties, many of them from Portsmouth, N. H., obtained a grant from the New Hampshire Governor, Benning Wentworth, Esq., in the name of King George II., of a township, six miles square, situated six miles north of the Massachusetts line and twenty miles east of the Hudson. According to the provisions of this charter these purchasers first divided off acre homesteads in the centre, to the number of sixty-four, for a village plot, and then divided the remainder into sixty-four equal parts, and cast lots for the same. Each original purchaser is believed to have sold his share without, perhaps, even seeing it, except upon paper, certainly to have never settled upon it, or improved it. . . . The township remained an unbroken wilderness for thirteen years, though men thus cast lots for it, and appropriated it to be some time a town under the name of Bennington, in honor of the Christian name of the New Hampshire Governor. Capt. Samuel Robinson, returning to his home in Massachusetts from one of the campaigns of the Continental army in the French War, mistaking his route, passed by accident this way ; and, impressed by the attractiveness of the country, resolved to obtain others to join him and come up and settle here. His resolution was carried into effect. Others agreed to accompany him. They searched out the owners of the land ; they purchased the rights of the original grantees, or of those to whom they had sold, and removed hither. . . . The first immigration had reached here June 18, 1761. It consisted of the families of Peter Harwood, Eleazar Harwood, Samuel Pratt and Timothy Pratt, from Amherst, Mass., Leonard Robinson and Samuel Robinson, Jr., from Hardwick, Mass. The party, including women and children, numbered twenty-two. During that summer and fall other families, to the number of twenty or thirty, came into town, among whom were those of Samuel Robinson, Sen., and John Fassett from Hardwick, Mass.”¹

It should be observed that the Harwoods and Pratts, here mentioned, were Hardwick families, who had resided a very short time in Amherst, and doubtless joined the emigrants under the influence of Captain Robinson. In addition to these, George Abbott and his son Timothy Abbott, John Pratt and his son Silas Pratt, John Roberts, and others, probably removed to Bennington at about the same time. The before mentioned persons, with Stephen Fay and his sons, who removed about five years later, were not only among the earliest inhabitants of the new town, but also among the most active and controlling spirits both in the town and in the State of which it became a portion ; and their children were not degenerate scions of the parent stock. Some notice of them may be found in the Genealogical Register, at the end of this volume ; but a brief and rapid sketch here also may be pardoned.

Samuel Robinson was apparently born to command. While he resided in Hardwick, for nearly thirty years, he was conspicuous for his activity in civil, military, and ecclesiastical affairs ; he almost constantly held some important town office ; commanded a company in the French War during five campaigns, from 1755 to 1759 inclusive ; assisted in organizing the First Church, and was afterwards one of its deacons ; and still later held the same office in the Separate Church, which also he assisted to organize. In Bennington, he “ was the acknowledged leader in the band of pioneers ; ”² the first justice of the peace in what is now the State of Vermont; an active participant in the bitter controversy between New Hampshire and New York in regard to jurisdiction; the agent of the settlers to represent them at New York and afterwards at London, where he died of small-pox, October 27, 1767, having partially accomplished the object of his mission. Of his children, Leonard fought bravely and effectively in the battle of Bennington, being a member of his brother Samuel's company; Samuel commanded a company in that battle, was afterwards colonel of militia, representative in the General Assembly, justice of the peace, and one of the judges of the Special Court which convicted Redding. He was one of the few persons who managed a correspondence with the British General Haldimand during the Revolutionary War, securing Vermont from invasion; ¹ Moses was a deacon of the church, town clerk, colonel of the militia, a member of the famous Council of Safety, chief justice of the Supreme Court, governor of Vermont, and senator in Congress; ² Silas was active and suffered nearly a year's imprisonment during the New York controversy, and bore arms in his brother Samuel's company at the Bennington battle; David fought in the same battle and in the same company, was afterwards major-general of militia, sheriff of the county twenty-two years, and United States marshal eight years; Jonathan, the youngest son of Samuel, Sen., was a lawyer, judge of the Supreme Court and of the Court of Probate, representative in the General Assembly, and senator in Congress. Such a family is not often found.

John Fassett was a deacon of the church, and captain of the first military company organized in Bennington; he was a representative in the first General Assembly of Vermont, and judge of probate. Of his children, John was captain of militia, representative in the General Assembly six years, a member of the Council fifteen years, judge of the Supreme Court, and chief justice of the County Court; Jonathan was representative two years; Amos was an assistant judge of the County Court; Benjamin was a commissary in the Revolutionary War, and afterwards colonel of militia. It is worthy of remark, that the father and his sons John and Jonathan held seats at the same time in the first General Assembly, in 1778.

Stephen Fay was a captain of militia, and landlord of the famous "Catamount Tavern" in Bennington. He was active in the controversy with New York, and in 1772 was sent with his son, Dr. Jonas Fay, as special agents to make known to Governor Tryon "the grounds of their opposition to government."¹ When open hostilities with Great Britain commenced, he was active in a civil capacity, and his house was the headquarters of the Committee of Safety. He was then too old to perform military service; but he was represented by four or five of his sons: John, the eldest son, was killed in the Bennington battle, August 16, 1777; Jonas was surgeon in the army, member and secretary of many conventions, notably of that which met at Westminster in January, 1777, and adopted the Declaration of Independence, of which he was the author, member and vice-president of the Council of Safety, member of the State Council, judge of probate five years, judge of the Supreme Court in 1782, and delegate to the Congress of the United States, in 1777, 1779, 1781, 1782, and 1783. His public services are mentioned more fully in the Genealogical Register; Benjamin "was the first sheriff in the county and State;"² Joseph was secretary of the Council of Safety and of the State Council, and secretary of state. He was also one of the managers of the negotiation with General Haldimand; David was a lawyer, state attorney, United States attorney, judge of probate, and judge of the Supreme Court of Vermont.

The comparative influence of the Hardwick element in the affairs of Bennington and of Vermont is indicated by the activity of its representatives in the pioneer work of the town and church, and in the long and bitter territorial controversy with New York; moreover, when the civil government of the State was organized, John Fassett was the first representative of Bennington in the General Assembly (two of his sons representing other towns at the same session); Jonas Fay was a member of the first Council; Joseph Fay was the first secretary of state; and Moses Robinson was the second governor, and also was the first senator in Congress after the State was admitted into the Union,—all Hardwick men. In 1781, while Vermont was refused admission into the Union, and was contending single-handed with New York and New Hampshire for jurisdiction over its own territory, to avoid invasion by the common enemy, a plan was adopted by a few leading individuals to deceive the British officers "by feigning or endeavoring to make them believe that the State of Vermont had a desire to negotiate a treaty of peace with Great Britain;" the proceedings were necessarily concealed from the public; the managers, however, signed a "certificate for the protection of Colonel Ira Allen," their agent in the negotiation: "We are of the opinion that the critical circumstances this State is in, being out of the union with the United States and thereby unable to make that vigorous defence we could wish for, — think it to be a necessary political manœuvre to save the frontiers of this State. Jonas Fay, Samuel Safford, Samuel Robinson, Joseph Fay, Thomas Chittenden, Moses Robinson, Timothy Brownson, John Fassett."¹ Of these diplomatic leaders, all except Safford, Chittenden, and Brownson, were Hardwick men. One more case may be cited: "A special term of the Superior Court was held at Westminster, Sept. 11, 1782, for the trial of the prisoners. The court consisted of Moses Robinson, chief judge; and Dr. Jonas Fay, John Fassett, and Paul Spooner, side judges,"² — all Hardwick men.

A second emigration commenced in the spring of 1775, under the leadership of Asa Whitcomb, which laid the foundation of Barnard, Vermont. That town "was chartered July 17, 1761, to William Story, Francis Barnard, and their associates. James Call chopped the first timber here, in 1774, but left in the fall. The settlement was commenced in March 1775, by Thomas Freeman, his son William, and John Newton. The same season, Lot Whitcomb, Nathaniel Paige, William Cheedle, and Asa Whitcomb, moved their families into town. Thomas Freeman, Jr., came into town June 7, 1775."³ All these were from Hardwick, with the possible exception of William Cheedle. They were very soon followed by many others. Asa Whitcomb had been appointed by the proprietors of the township as their agent to make sale of the land and bring forward the settlement. He first secured an energetic man, Thomas Freeman, as a leading pioneer, who removed in 1775 with at least four stalwart sons, (though yet in their minority), William, Thomas, Joshua, and Elisha, and his son-in-law, John Newton. He then induced many of his own relatives, both by blood and marriage, to embark in the enterprise of building a new town in the wilderness ; among whom were his brother, Lot Whitcomb ; his cousin, Joshua Whitcomb ; his brother-in-law, Solomon Aiken, with his sons James, Nathaniel, Solomon, and Elijah ; Steward Southgate, whose wife was sister to the wife of Whitcomb ; his nephews Nathaniel, Asa, and George Paige, and his nephews Seth, Robert, and Nathaniel Dean. Besides these were Timothy and Gideon, brothers of John Newton, and Thomas Martin Wright, who married their sister ; Joseph Byam ; Captain Benjamin Cox, with his sons George, Benjamin, and Ebenezer ; Prince Haskell, and his brother Nathaniel ; Captain Edmund Hodges ; Elkanah Steward and his son Samuel ; and Thomas W. White. A few of these persons were then minors, but all were in Barnard very soon after the emigration commenced, and all remained and reared families. Within ten years after the town was organized, it received further accessions from Hardwick : James Byram ; Shiverick Crowell, and his brother Nathaniel (their sister Salvina had married Nathaniel Paige) ; Aaron Fay, and his brothers Moses and Eliakim ; Jacob Lawton ; Sylvanus Washburn ; and perhaps others. How much the population was increased by arrivals from other towns I know not ; but the Hardwick men had almost all the important offices at the organization of the town. The first town meeting was held at the house of William Ceedle, April 9, 1778, by virtue of a warrant issued on the 4th of the same month, by " Thomas Freeman and Lot Whitcomb, Committee of Safety." The officers then elected were Thomas Freeman, Moderator ; Thomas W. White, Town Clerk ; Thomas Freeman, Asa Whitcomb, Solomon Aiken, Selectmen ; Captain Edmund Hodges, Thomas W. White, Captain Benjamin Cox, Assessors ; Thomas Freeman, Treasurer ; William Ceedle, Grand Juror ; Joseph Byam, Joseph Bowman, Constables ; Henry Curtis, John Newton, Surveyors of Highways ; Ebenezer Caul, Tythingman ; and " at a meeting of this Town, July 7, 1778, chose Asa Whitcomb, Justice Peace."

Although this emigration was not, like that to Bennington, a distinctively religious movement,¹ the pioneers evinced their regard for religion by erecting a meeting-house at an early day. I quote from the Town Records : " July 5, 1779. " Met agreeable to adjournment, and made choice of Capt. Hodges, Moderator. Voted, to build a meeting-house at the spruce tree where the town made the centre. Voted, to build a log meeting-house, and to meet at the centre the 15th of this month with axes, in order to peel bark and cut timber for the said house." When they had become more able to do so, they voted, March 18, 1782, to build a meeting-house, 40 × 30 feet, and 16 foot posts, with a convenient gallery.

In order to show the perils, as well as the hardships encountered by these emigrants, one fact is added: "On the 9th of August, 1780, this town was visited by a party of twenty-one Indians, who made prisoners of Thomas M. Wright, Prince Haskell, and John Newton, and carried them to Canada. Newton and Wright made their escape the spring following, and Haskell was exchanged in the fall. They suffered many hardships while prisoners and on their return; but they arrived safely at Barnard, and were all living in 1824 upon the farms from which they were taken."¹

American Revolution. — Taxation without Representation. — Stamp Act. — Congress at New York. — Brigadier Ruggles, its President, refuses to sign its Petitions; his Reasons therefor unsatisfactory to the Representatives, who reprimand him, but satisfactory to his Townsmen. — Riot in Boston. — The Town refuses, but afterwards consents, that the Damage may be paid “out of the Province Treasury.” — Brigadier Ruggles stands alone in Opposition to a Bill ostensibly designed to encourage Domestic Manufactures, and renders his Reasons publicly. — The Town instructs its Representative in 1773, to stand fast in Defence of its Chartered Rights and Privileges. — Final Departure of Brigadier Ruggles from Hardwick. — Form of Association prepared by him; his Letter of Explanation; he refuses to bear Arms against his Country, and retires to Nova Scotia. — Post of Honor assigned to him in an Act of Banishment. — His Death, Public Services, and Character.

IN this history of a small town, it may not be expected that all the causes of the American Revolution should be enumerated and discussed, or the various events recounted, which occurred during its progress. Some of those causes and events, however, should be mentioned, in which this town was more or less actively engaged; especially because its most eminent citizen was among the foremost actors on one side of the controversy, in its early stages, while the town itself, though for a few years apparently following his leadership, stood manfully and almost unanimously on the other side, when the struggle came to a crisis.

One very prominent question at issue, in the commencement of this political and ultimately sanguinary controversy, was whether or not the British Parliament had a legal right to impose taxes on the American Provinces without their consent. In the exercise of this pretended right of supremacy, among other methods for raising a revenue from the provinces, Parliament enacted a law, styled the “Stamp Act,” and directed that it should take effect November 1, 1765. It does not appear that the town took any action on this subject in town meeting; but the House of Representatives acted promptly and decisively. They sent a circular to the other Provinces, or Colonies, proposing concerted action:—

“Boston, June, 1765. Sir, the House of Representatives of this province, in the present session of the General Court, have unanimously agreed to propose a meeting, as soon as may be, of committees from the House of Representatives, or Burgesses of the several British colonies on this continent, to consult together on the present circumstances of the colonies, and the difficulties to which they are and must be reduced by the operation of the acts of parliament for levying duties and taxes on the colonies; and to consider of a general and united, dutiful, loyal, and humble representation of their condition to his majesty and to the parliament, and to implore relief. The house of representatives of this province have also voted to propose that such meeting be at the city of New York, in the province of New York, on the first Tuesday in October next, and have appointed, the committee of three of their members to attend that service, with such as the other houses of representatives or burgesses, in the several colonies, may think fit to appoint to meet them; and the committee of the house of representatives of this province are directed to repair to the said New York, on the first Tuesday in October next, accordingly; if, therefore, your honorable house should agree to this proposal, it would be acceptable that as early notice of it as possible might be transmitted to the speaker of the house of representatives of this province.

“SAMUEL WHITE, Speaker.”¹

Governor Hutchinson remarks, that “the delegates from Massachusetts Bay were James Otis, Oliver Partridge, and Timothy Ruggles. The two last named had the character of friends to government. Mr. Ruggles accepted the trust, expecting nothing would be required of him that was not expressed in the vote of the assembly, and left the house in order to prepare for his journey. He was afterwards informed that the house of representatives had passed a set of instructions to their delegates, in which they were required to insist upon an exclusive right in the colonies to all acts of taxation. He determined, thereupon, to excuse himself from serving; but, being urged by his friends, he changed his mind, and went on to New York.”²

The several committees assembled in New York “on Monday the 7th of October, 1765,” and exhibited their credentials. “Then the said committees proceeded to choose a chairman by ballot; and Timothy Ruggles, Esq., on sorting and counting the votes, appeared to have a majority, and thereupon was placed in the chair." On the next day (the day fixed for the meeting), "the Congress took into consideration the rights and privileges of the British American colonists, with the several inconveniences and hardships to which they are and must be subjected by the operation of several late acts of parliament, particularly the act called the stamp act; and after some time spent therein, the same was postponed for further consideration."¹ The Congress met from day to day until October 24, 1765, when it adjourned without day. During this time a Declaration of Rights was adopted, together with an address "to the King's most excellent majesty," a memorial to the House of Lords, and a petition to the House of Commons, of Great Britain; in all which the Congress professed allegiance to the King, but protested against the recent enactments of Parliament. To the House of Commons it was said that "it is with the most ineffable and humiliating sorrow that we find ourselves of late deprived of the right of granting our own property for his majesty's service, to which our lives and fortunes are entirely devoted, and to which, on his royal requisitions, we have been ready to contribute to the utmost of our abilities. We have also the misfortune to find that all the penalties and forfeitures mentioned in the stamp act, and divers late acts of trade extending to the plantations, are, at the election of the informers, recoverable in any court of admiralty in America. This, as the newly erected court of admiralty has a general jurisdiction over all British America, renders his majesty's subjects in these colonies liable to be carried, at an immense expense, from one end of the continent to the other. . . . By this means we seem to be, in effect, unhappily deprived of two privileges essential to freedom, and which all Englishmen have ever considered as their best birthright, — that of being free from all taxes but such as they have consented to in person or by their representatives, and of trial by their peers."² For these and similar reasons an earnest appeal was made for the repeal of the objectionable and oppressive laws.

President Ruggles refused to affix his official signature to these documents, for reasons which he afterwards formally presented to the Massachusetts House of Representatives. By their printed journal it appears that on the 26th of January, 1766, the House then being in session, "the following letter was signed by the Speaker and directed to be forwarded to Brigadier Ruggles, viz., Sir, the House of Representatives have this day resolved to take into consideration the services of their committee at the late Congress at New York, and some things having been mentioned in general relating to your conduct which the House think proper to inquire into, — they direct your attendance on Thursday the 6th day of February ensuing." The subsequent proceedings were published in the printed journal as follows: February 6, 1766. "The House, according to the order of the day, entered into the conduct and services of the committee at the late Congress at New York; and after a debate, the question was put, whether the reasons offered by Brigadier Ruggles for his not signing the petitions prepared by the late Congress at New York be satisfactory to this House? It passed in the negative. Then the question was put, whether the reasons offered by Brigadier Ruggles for leaving the late Congress at New York before they had completed their business,¹ be satisfactory to this House? It passed in the negative. Resolved, unanimously, that the account given by James Otis and Oliver Partridge, Esquires, of their conduct at the late Congress at New York, is satisfactory to this House." February 12, 1766. "Resolved, that Brigadier Ruggles, with respect to his conduct at the Congress at New York, has been guilty of neglect of duty, and that he be reprimanded therefor by the Speaker." February 13, 1766. "Brigadier Ruggles appearing in the House, Mr. Speaker said to him as follows, viz., —

"Brigadier Ruggles, the House last evening voted, that with respect to your conduct at the late Congress at New York, you were guilty of neglect of duty, and thereupon ordered, that you should receive a reprimand from the Speaker of this House. Therefore

"Sir, in discharge of my duty as Speaker of this House, and in pursuance of their order, I do reprimand you accordingly. Sir, it gives me very sensible pain, that a gentleman who has been heretofore in such high estimation in this House, should fall under their publick censure.

"I hope, Sir, that by your future conduct, you will not only regain the good opinion this House have heretofore entertained of you, but also the good opinion of all those whose displeasure you may have fallen under on this occasion."

A vote was then passed by the House permitting the publication in their Journal of the reasons which he offered in justification of his conduct; but, February 19, 1766, "Brigadier Ruggles (according to order) laid upon the table his reasons for his conduct at the Congress at New York, which being read, after a debate, the question was put, whether the paper offered as containing his reasons be printed in the Journal of the House? It passed in the negative." Having thus been denied the privilege before promised to him, he caused his Reasons to be published in the "Boston Post Boy and Advertiser," May 5, 1766:—

"Brigadier Ruggles's Reasons for his dissent from the Resolutions of the Congress at New York, as given into the House, February 19, 1766.

"The Honourable House having on my motion been graciously pleased to indulge me with adjoining the Reasons in justification of my conduct to a publication of the Proceedings of said Congress, ordered by the House to be inserted at the end of the Journals of the present Sessions, first laying them before the House, — I beg leave to offer the following:—

"First. My instructions from this honorable house, conceived in the following words, viz., 'It is the expectation of the house that a most loyal and dutiful address to his Majesty and his Parliament will be prepared by the congress, praying as well for the removal of the grievances the colonies labor under at present, as for the preventing others for the future; which petitions, if drawn up as far as you shall be able to judge agreeable to the mind of this house, you are empowered to sign and forward.' The petition agreed upon by the congress to be presented to his majesty not being conceived in terms clearly enough expressive of that duty and loyalty which are due to the best of sovereigns, and consequently not agreeable to my above instructions from this house, left as a mere matter of judgment and discretion, if I had signed it I must have acted in direct opposition to those instructions, and thereby have exposed myself not only to the censures of this house, but to the reproaches of my own conscience, a tribunal more awful to me than this (however great) by which I have been condemned.

"2dly. That it is more regular, constitutional and conformable to the constant practice of the colonies to have their petitions and remonstrances to the King and Parliament of Great Britain signed by the Speaker of their House.

“3dly. That the signing said addresses by the committees of the several colonies which attended the congress, and who were empowered to sign the same, could by no construction come up to a general address from the colonies, as the committees from the colonies of South Carolina, Connecticut, and New York, were not empowered, and therefore could not sign, and the colonies of Nova Scotia, New Hampshire, Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia, did not send committees to the congress, and some had no regular appointment, so that in this respect it was but a very partial signing; and therefore it was more agreeable to the instructions of this house to their committee, after having, conformable not only to the spirit but to the very words of their instructions, ‘to unite in sentiments and agree upon such representations as may tend to preserve our rights and privileges,’ to return the same to the house for their approbation; especially as we knew the house was then sitting, and as I then apprehended, and in fact would have been the case, little or no time would have been lost.

“4thly. A matter of so great importance to the colonies and of so delicate a nature as the open and avowed claim of an exclusive right of taxation (however true) to be asserted in addresses to the King and Parliament for relief from an Act made by this very Parliament was a measure I could not bring myself to adopt, as at my appointment to this service, upon motion made, I could not obtain an explanation on that point, nor did I think it was then the sense of this house; I therefore thought it my duty, and most respectful to the house to report the draughts agreed upon for their acceptance.

“5thly. In my apprehension those addresses would have had greater weight, and would have been more favorably received by the King and Parliament, had they been authenticated by the suffrages of the various houses of representatives and burgesses throughout the continent, and signed by their respective speakers.

“As to the charge of leaving the congress before the business was completed, I beg leave to say, that after the draughts were completed, and the petition to his Majesty was laid before me, such difficulties arose in my mind as that in its present form I could not bring myself to sign; and the reasons for reporting the draughts to the several assemblies operating so strongly on my mind I made some exceptions to the gentlemen of the congress on the address to his Majesty and offered some general reasons for the expediency of reporting the draughts to our respective assemblies, in which I was seconded by divers members, and which occasioned a long and warm debate; upon which it was determined by a vote that the address to his Majesty, which was at that time in a fair draught, together with those to the Lords and Commons, should be laid on the table the next morning, in the form they had before passed the congress and been entered upon the journal, to be signed by such of the members as thought proper. I then acquainted the congress that I proposed to go out of town early the next morning; and after the congress was adjourned to the next morning I took my leave of the members, which was on Thursday evening the 24th October, when I concluded all the business of the congress was entirely finished, except the bare signing, which, for the reasons given, I had refused.

“MR. SPEAKER, This honorable House have adjudged my reasons insufficient to support my conduct; and I feel the weight of their indignation. I have, Sir, more than once trembled under a sense of my own insufficiency to support the dignity of the high trust, with which my country unasked has honoured me; and to answer their just expectations in the discharge of them. Their candour has heretofore estimated my services rather by the integrity of my heart than the clearness of my head; this uprightness they have not only been pleased to accept, but bountifully to reward. When this house honoured me with this appointment, in undertaking it I promised myself the same indulgence. I have exercised the same freedom of judgment, I have attended the duty with the same diligence, I have been actuated with the same love to my country and its liberties, I have acted with the same singleness and uprightness of intention, and with the same ardent desire to serve the publick weal, which I have ever made the rule of my conduct: But alas! I meet with a very different reward.”

Before printing these reasons, Brigadier Ruggles submitted them to his immediate constituents at a town meeting, March 3, 1766; and it is not surprising that “after Brigadier Ruggles’ reading the reasons he exhibited to the General Court for not signing the petitions drew at the late Congress at New York to his Majesty &c. the town voted [that they were] in their opinion sufficient to vindicate his conduct.” They did not lose their confidence in him as a patriot, and a true friend to his country as well as to his king; and for four years longer, continued to elect him as their representative in the General Court.

The publication of the Stamp Act produced great excitement in Boston, and some grossly violent deeds of the populace were the natural result. In August, 1765, by hanging him in effigy, breaking into his house, and destroying part of his furniture, some of the inhabitants had induced Mr. Secretary Oliver to promise that he would not act as Distributor of Stamps; and on the evening of the 26th of the same month they attacked the house of Lieutenant-governor Hutchinson, who had rendered himself extremely obnoxious by his subserviency to the British ministry, and “destroyed, carried away, or cast into the street, every thing that was in the house; demolished every part of it, except the walls, as far as lay in their power; and had begun to break away the brick-work. The damage was estimated at about twenty-five hundred pounds sterling, without any regard to a great collection of public as well as private papers in the possession and custody of the Lieutenant-governor.”¹ The Governor recommended that the General Court should provide compensation to the sufferers, but the court declined to act. A year later, however, the odious Stamp Act was repealed, and a demand was made by the British government that the loss should be made good. The General Court, after long debate, enacted a resolve, granting compensation to the sufferers, and at the same time a free pardon to all “who had been guilty of any crimes or offences against law, occasioned by the late troubles.” This act was disapproved by the King, but the money was paid and no prosecutions of offenders followed.²

Meanwhile, before the final settlement of this affair, this town expressed an opinion:—

“At a town-meeting in Hardwick duly warned the 15th day of August A. D. 1766, first chose Deac. Joseph Allen, Moderator. 2d, Voted to give the following instructions to Timothy Ruggles, Esq., the present representative of said [town], respecting the indemnification of the late sufferers by riots and tumults in the town of Boston.—First. We reflect upon the disorders that from time to time have been perpetrated to the great terror of the good people of that town, in evil example to others, and the great loss and damage that some of them have sustained, with the utmost abhorrence, hereby declaring our greatest readiness to do every thing in our power that justice be done to those unhappy sufferers, as well as the persons concerned in the perpetration of those horrid crimes.—Secondly. That at any sessions of the General Court, while you are a member thereof, you use your utmost endeavors that the persons concerned in those crimes be discovered and discountenanced by all proper and lawful means, that they and their accomplices be obliged to make good all damages to the sufferers. — Thirdly. In case of their inability, that you use your endeavors that those damages be made good by the town of Boston, as we have been informed that numbers of the inhabitants were spectators of these horrid scenes, without interposition to prevent them. — Fourthly. You are not to [consent to] the moneys being paid out of the Province Treasury, to make good those losses, unless at the same time it be resolved by the House that it shall be added to the taxes of the town of Boston, and collected accordingly. — Fifthly. That you take due care that the damages be justly stated and estimated, and no more be voted to any person [than] the loss he really sustained.”

The town acted once more on this subject. At a town-meeting, November 28, 1766, under a warrant “to consider of a Bill pending in the House of Representatives of this Province, entitled ‘An Act for granting compensation to the sufferers, and of free and general pardon, indemnity and oblivion, to the offenders, in the late riots,’ — Voted, that, as it appears to the said town to be his Majesties most gracious intention that compensation should be made to the sufferers in said Bill mentioned, that Timothy Ruggles, Esq., the present Representative of said Hardwick do vote for the substance of said Bill, and that he use his influence to obtain an Act of the General Court, which [he] shall think has the most proper tendency to prevent future disturbances. As to the other parts of said Bill, we leave it to his discretion to act as he may think proper and best for the interest of the Province.”

Among the measures adopted by the “Sons of Liberty,” in this controversy with the British government, was substantially the non-consumption of foreign goods. This was designed to produce a twofold effect; it would prevent the government from obtaining any revenue under the form of duties, and would tend to create dissatisfaction among the English manufacturers, and enlist them against the oppressive acts of Parliament. For this purpose, a preamble and two resolutions, so carefully and guardedly drawn that they might not have attracted notice under other circumstances, were reported by a committee consisting of the Speaker, Samuel Adams, Samuel Dexter, Ebenezer Thayer, and John Hancock, and adopted by the House of Representatives, February 26, 1768, by a vote of eighty-one in the affirmative against a single negative, to wit: "Whereas the happiness and well-being of civil communities depend upon industry, economy, and good morals, and this house taking into consideration the great decay of the trade of the province, the scarcity of money, the heavy debt contracted in the late war, which still remains on the people, and the great difficulties to which they are by these means reduced;

"Resolved, That this house will use their utmost endeavors, and enforce their endeavors by example, in suppressing extravagance, idleness, and vice, and promoting industry, economy, and good morals, in their respective towns.

"And in order to prevent the unnecessary exportation of money, of which this province has been of late so much drained, it is further Resolved, That this house will by all prudent means endeavor to discountenance the use of foreign superfluities, and to encourage the manufactures of this province."

Brigadier Ruggles requested liberty to enter upon the Journal of the House his reasons for dissent; but his request was refused. He therefore caused them to be printed in the "Boston Chronicle," March 7, 1768:—

"Province of Massachusetts Bay, Feb. 29, 1768. Mr. Speaker, The honorable house of representatives of this province, on the 26th instant, having resolved that they will use their utmost endeavors, and enforce the same by example, in suppressing extravagance, idleness, and vice, and promoting industry, economy, and good morals in their respective towns. And in order to prevent the unnecessary exportation of money, of which the province has of late been so much drained, they further resolved that they would by all prudent means endeavor to discountenance the use of foreign superfluities, and to encourage the manufactures of this province.

"The passing said resolutions being determined by yea and nay, the representative of the town of Hardwicke being the only one who answered nay to the question put for passing said resolutions, begs leave to explain himself upon his dissenting answer, and says, that he had no objection to the resolution of endeavoring to suppress extravagance, idleness, and vice, and promoting industry, economy, and good morals, but was pleased with the appearance of such necessary reformation; nor has he any objection to the encouraging any manufactures¹ which do not interfere with those of the mother country, but on the contrary might be beneficial to both that and this country. But as it is generally supposed that the true interest of this province consists in the cultivation of a good harmony with their mother country, the improvement of the land, and the encouragement of a legal trade, it is humbly apprehended it cannot be for the interest of this people to encourage manufactures in general, for the following reasons:—

“1. Because in all countries, manufactures are set up at the expense of husbandry, or other general employment of the people; and if they have not peculiar advantages over husbandry, they will, by discouraging the latter, do the country more harm than good.

“2. That in this country, manufactures are so far from having peculiar advantages that they lie under insurmountable difficulties, of which thinness of people, and the consequence of it, high price of labor, are the chief; and therefore they can never balance the mischief they will do by taking the hands off the husbandry and fishery.

“3. That at all times it behoves us to avoid setting up any business which may be detrimental to the mother country, as the preservation of a good understanding between Great Britain and her colonies is essential to the welfare of both.

“4. That at the time when we are petitioning for redress, to give particular encouragement to manufactures will look like a threat against and a defiance of Great Britain, and will bring a resentment against the province, as it is said the like proceedings have already done against the town of Boston.

“5. That if by these and other means, an actual breach should be made between Great Britain and her colonies in general, or this in particular, whoever gets the victory, we are undone. Wherefore he humbly begs leave to enter his dissent to the said resolution, and to pray that it may be entered in the Journal.

“TIMOTHY RUGGLES.

“In the House of Representatives 29th Feb. 1768. The honorable Timothy Ruggles, Esq., offered this paper to the house.

¹ Domestic manufactures were encouraged by the town; and it was voted, 17th November, 1774, “that the hatter’s shop stand on the ground where it is now built, provided we have a good workman, and one that minds his business.”

And the question being put whether the same shall be entered on the journals of the house, past in the negative.

“ Attest SAMUEL ADAMS, Clerk.”

The resolutions to which Brigadier Ruggles dissented were doubtless consistent with the intention cherished by many, though not yet openly avowed, — to dissolve all political connection with the mother country, and to become independent; but he was right in describing them as inconsistent with an honest desire for “the preservation of a good understanding between Great Britain and her colonies,” and as tending to produce “an actual breach” between them. And although rich and abundant blessings in due time resulted from that “breach,” his prediction of its immediate disastrous results was substantially accurate. The new-born nation came out of the conflict financially “ruined;” it was utterly bankrupt, and was compelled to repudiate its debt to its own citizens, and to refuse payment of its “bills of credit,” which it had issued as money to defray the expense of the long war. The inability of the colonists to become successful rivals of Great Britain in general manufactures was also correctly stated. They might make and wear homespun cloth, if they chose to do so; but they could not manufacture the finer goods, except at a cost greatly exceeding that of the imported articles. The causes of this inability, assigned by Brigadier Ruggles, long remained operative. It was nearly half a century before general manufactures became prosperous in this country, and even then only because they were sustained by a subsidy, or artificial aid, called “protection,” in the form of a high tariff of duties on foreign manufactured goods; indeed a full century elapsed before they could successfully compete in foreign markets with similar goods manufactured in Europe.

Up to this time, and for two years afterwards, the inhabitants of Hardwick evidently hoped for a peaceful solution of the controversy between the Province and the British Parliament, and manifested their approval of the method pursued by Brigadier Ruggles for the attainment of that result, as in 1770, for the fifteenth time, they again elected him as their representative in the General Court. They also associated with him, Daniel Oliver,¹ a young lawyer whom he had introduced into practice here, and who was known to agree with him in politics. About this time, however, they seem to have lost confidence in the measures heretofore adopted, though they still desired a reconciliation with Great Britain, rather than a separation. In 1771 and 1772 they sent no representative; but in 1773 they elected Paul Mandell, a man of less dignity than Brigadier Ruggles, but of different politics, and equally resolute in their maintenance.

May 19, 1773: At a town-meeting, it was "Voted, That relative to the Book¹ sent from Boston, that our rights and privileges are infringed upon.

"Chose a committee of seven men, viz., Capt. William Paige, Stephen Rice, Daniel Warner, Thomas Robinson, Asa Whitcomb, Ebenezer Washburn, and Ens. Edward Ruggles, to draw up instructions for our representative, and lay them before the town on the 14th day of June next, at one o'clock afternoon."

June 14, 1773. The committee reported instructions, which were adopted: —

"To Capt. Paul Mandell, Representative for the town of Hardwick. We esteem it of very great importance that our natural and constitutional rights, as men, as Christians, and as subjects, be preserved inviolate; so any alarm of their being unjustly arrested from us, — more especially as they are privileges that were purchased by the blood and treasure of our worthy and renowned ancestors, and handed down as a free and good right of inheritance to us, their posterity, — torn away by an oppressing hand, fills us not only with fear, concern and grief, but also warms our breasts, and will ever engage us to join with our aggrieved brethren, not only of this, but also with those of our neighboring colonies, in pursuing every lawful and prudent method whereby we may obtain redress, which we look upon to be our duty and interest at a time thus melancholy and distressing. Beholding innovations that have been already made on our natural and constitutional rights, the perplexities in which our public affairs are involved, the heavy burdens under which we together with by far the greatest part of these American Colonies are groaning on ac-towns in the province and to the world, as the sense of this town, with the infringements and violations thereof that have been, or from time to time may be made; also requesting of each town a free communication of their sentiments on this subject."

count hereof, and as yet unheard complaining of, give us great reason to look forward to that distressing day when the plan of Despotism which we fear the enemies of our invaluable rights have concerted shall be accomplished, which no sooner than it should take place must involve us and our posterity in a state of slavery, and we and they viewed in no other point of light than machines of mere arbitrary power and lawless ambition; the thought of which will not suffer us any longer to conceal our impatience, secrete our sentiments, or neglect using all lawful and constitutional measures to quiet our fears, redress our grievances, and prevent if possible that [which], should it take place, would of consequence, involve us and our posterity in a state of abject slavery. As, therefore, we, the inhabitants of the town of Hardwick, have made choice of you, Sir, to represent us in the Great and General Court of this Province, this present year, do repose confidence in you, and expect you will exert yourself in every proper and constitutional way for the securing and maintaining our rights and privileges, and for the supporting our ancient happy form of government. Although the situation of our affairs with respect to the state of the colonies, and this in particular, has of late and still does wear a dark and gloomy aspect, in our opinion threatening the ruin of our happy constitution, [we] however rejoice that we are not as yet denied the privilege of choosing some person from among us, to represent us in the Great and General Court of this Province; and although the representative body have not heretofore had that regard paid to them which we earnestly wished for, and had just reason to expect from the order of happy constitution (which has been greatly discouraging to us in choosing any person to represent us, fearing lest that the original purposes designed would fail of being answered hereby), yet having a respect to and looking upon ourselves under indispensable obligations to do all we can to maintain and defend that good and orderly government by which the people of this province have been long distinguished, — we send you forth, and recommend to your vigilance, wisdom, and integrity, the important concerns of this aggrieved and oppressed people; taking it for granted that a regard to your own honor and interest, as well as a regard to the honor and welfare of those who have chosen you to represent them, will make you truly attentive to every thing that shall tend to secure us in a free and full enjoyment of all our constitutional rights, carefully guarding against and vigorously opposing (as you would never betray your constituents nor prove unfaithful to your trust) every thing and every attempt that shall naturally tend to destroy our ancient privileges; and that you will never give up that right into the power of others, which the law of God, nature, and nations hath invested us with. And as we are of opinion that the most likely and effectual way to gain the Royal ear, and obtain a redress of our grievances, is by petitioning our most gracious Sovereign in all proper and constitutional ways, and at all times proving ourselves loyal and dutiful subjects, so we particularly recommend this to your serious consideration, hoping you will always be ready to join with others in this and all other measures that shall be likely to relieve us in the most easy and happy manner, and most effectually secure our invaluable rights and privileges, and restore that mutual harmony and confidence between the British nation and the American colonies, which we look upon to be of the utmost importance and necessity to secure the emolument and welfare of both; and in this way we hope (under the smiles of heaven) our natural rights as Christians and subjects will be fixed on such a sure basis as that all future attempts to invade or destroy them, will prove entirely fruitless and abortive."

These instructions, probably drawn up by Ebenezer Washburn the village school-master and poet (one of the committee), though not very concise, nor wholly grammatical, with some circumlocution and repetitions, clearly enough express two ideas, which were, probably, uppermost in the minds of the inhabitants: (1.) Loyalty to the King, notwithstanding their dissatisfaction with the proceedings of the Parliament, — even as American citizens now preserve sincere loyalty to the country, however much they may disapprove the proceedings of the dominant majority in Congress for the time being; and hence they still desired a reconciliation, and a permanent union with the mother country on just and honorable terms; and (2.) a determination to unite with the other towns in the Province in resisting the parliamentary encroachments on their rights and privileges, in the most effectual manner. Although no distinct reference is made to resistance by force of arms, it is clearly enough implied:

In August, 1774, Brigadier Ruggles took his final leave of this town, for whose material prosperity he had labored so earnestly and successfully during the last twenty years, and whose political guide and leader he had been acknowledged until recently.

Although he had now forfeited the favor of the Sons of Liberty, by opposing their revolutionary proceedings, he had secured and retained the approbation of the King by his loyalty. He was this year designated as one of the thirty-six members of the Council, appointed by mandamus, for the government of the Province (of whom twelve declined the office, and nine soon resigned), and was one of the fifteen who did not shrink from the responsibility of the difficult and hazardous position, and was sworn into office August 16, 1774.

It was the current tradition among his contemporaries, that when he left Hardwick to take his seat in the Mandamus Council, a multitude assembled at the bridge, near the old Furnace, to prevent him from crossing. His brother, Captain Benjamin Ruggles, was a leader and the chief speaker. After using other persuasions and expostulations in vain, Benjamin, with much solemnity, assured his brother, that if he persisted in proceeding to Boston, he would never be permitted to return. The Brigadier's warlike spirit was roused. "Brother Benjamin," said he, "I shall come back, — at the head of five hundred soldiers, if necessary." "Brother Timothy," was the reply, "if you cross that bridge, this morning, you will certainly never cross it again — alive." The General waved his hand, and proceeded at a deliberate pace; the crowd gave way, and he crossed the bridge, — and crossed it for the last time. He never returned; and the two brothers saw each other no more in this world.

I anticipate the order of events a few months, to close my account of Brigadier Ruggles' connection with the revolutionary contest, so far as it had any immediate reference to Hardwick. At the last session of the first Provincial Congress, in Cambridge, December 10, 1774, "the committee appointed to take into consideration the letter and papers enclosed, received from the committee of correspondence of the town of Hardwick, reported; which was read and accepted, and ordered to be published in the public papers, and also the papers on which the said report is founded. The report is as followeth, viz: — Whereas it appears to this Congress, that one or more members of the lately appointed unconstitutional council in this province, now residing in Boston, has sent to the town of Hardwick a paper, purporting [to be] an association to be entered into by those persons who falsely assume the name of friends to government, calculated to counteract the salutary designs of the Continental and Provincial Congresses, to deceive the people into agreements contrary to the welfare of this country, and tending in its consequences to hinder an amicable accommodation with our mother country, the sole end of these Congresses, and the ardent wish of every friend to America: ¹ it is therefore recommended by this Congress, to the several committees of correspondence in this colony, that they give notice to the Provincial Congress, that shall meet in this province on the first day of February next, and the earliest notice to the public, of all such combinations, and of the persons signing the same, if any should be enticed thereto, that their names may be published to the world, their persons treated with that neglect, and their memories transmitted to posterity with that ignominy, which such unnatural conduct must deserve.” ²

The order of Congress, for the publication of these proceedings, not having been immediately carried into effect, Brigadier Ruggles caused the “Association” to be published in the “Boston Evening Post,” December 26, 1774, with a prefatory letter: —

“To the Printer of the Boston News-Paper: As Messrs. Edes and Gill, in their paper of Monday the 12th instant, were pleased to acquaint the public that ‘the Association sent by Brigadier Ruggles, &c., to the town of Hardwicke, &c., together with his Son’s certificate thereof, and the resolves of the Provincial Congress thereon, must be referred till their next,’ I was so credulous as to expect then to have seen their next paper adorned with the form of an Association which would have done honor to it, and if attended to and complied with by the good people of the province, might have put it in the power of any one very easily to have distinguished such loyal subjects to the King, as dare to assert their rights to freedom, in all respects consistent with the laws of the land, from such rebellious ones as, under the pretext of being friends to liberty, are frequently committing the most enormous outrages upon the persons and properties of such of his Majesty’s peaceable subjects who, for want of knowing who to call upon (in these distracted times) for assistance, fall into the hands of a banditti, whose cruelties surpass those of savages: — But find-gunpowder, and fire-arms, and the payment of all taxes to a treasurer appointed by themselves. See their Journal, pp. 45-64. The town of Hardwick expressed the same sentiments, and promptly adopted the measures recommended by the Congress.

ing my mistake, now take the liberty to send copies to your several offices, to be published in your next papers, that so the public may be made more acquainted therewith than at present, and be induced to associate for the above purposes. And as many of the people for some time past have been arming themselves, it may not be amiss to let them know that their numbers will not appear in the field so large as was imagined, before it was known that independency was the object in contemplation; since which, many have associated in divers parts of the province, to preserve their freedom and support Government; and as it may become necessary in a very short time to give convincing proof of our attachment to Government, we shall be much wanting to ourselves if we longer trample upon that patience which has already endured to long-suffering, and may, if this opportunity be neglected, have a tendency to ripen many for destruction who have not yet been guilty of an overt act of rebellion, which would be an event diametrically opposite to the humane and benevolent intention of him, whose abused patience cannot endure forever, and who hath already by his prudent conduct evidenced the most tender regard for a deluded people.

“We the subscribers being fully sensible of the blessings of good Government on the one hand, and convinced on the other hand of the evils and calamities attending on Tyranny in all shapes, whether exercised by one or many, and having of late seen with great grief and concern the distressing effects of a dissolution of all Government, whereby our Lives, Liberties, and Properties are rendered precarious, and no longer under the Protection of the Law; and apprehending it to be our indispensable duty, to use all Lawful means in our power, for the defence of our Persons and Property, against all riotous, and lawless violence, and to recover, and secure the advantages which we are intitled to, from the good and wholesome Laws of the Government; Do hereby associate and mutually covenant, and engage to and with each other as follows. “In witness of all which we hereto subscribe our Names this

In a letter written by Lord Percy, at Boston, in October, 1774, a copy of which is in possession of Rev. Edward G. Porter, of Lexington, it is stated that a body of “Loyal American Associates” had been organized for the defence of the Government, of which “Brig. Hon. Timothy Ruggles” was “Commandant,” and Abijah Willard, James Putnam, and Francis Green were captains; but it does not appear that they were ever called into service. It has been said that after hostilities commenced, and the British army evacuated Boston, Brigadier Ruggles went to New York, and served in the army; but I have not seen any satisfactory proof that he ever bore arms against his country.

On the contrary, the uniform tradition among his relatives and townsmen, while his contemporaries were still living, was, that he utterly refused to take an active part in the conflict of arms, on the one side or the other. He had eaten the King's bread, and he would not lift up his heel against him; he had repeatedly sworn allegiance, and he would not violate his oath. And just as firmly he refused to aid in the effort to crush his kindred and his fellow countrymen by brute force. He retired to Nova Scotia, and devoted himself to agriculture on a tract of land granted to him in consideration of his services and his losses.

It may be added, that he was highly distinguished in an act, passed in September 1778, forbidding the return of refugees, providing that if any such should return they should be forthwith sent out of the jurisdiction, and if they returned a second time without permission, they should "suffer the pains of death without benefit of clergy." The preamble of the act commences thus: "Whereas, Thomas Hutchinson, Esq., late governor of this state, Francis Bernard, Esq., formerly governor of this state; Thomas Oliver, Esq., late lieutenant-governor of this state, Timothy Ruggles, of Hardwick, in the county of Worcester, Esq." Then follow the names of more than three hundred persons, arranged alphabetically in the several counties and towns, including the late Secretary and Treasurer, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and other Judges, members of the Mandamus Council, and at least one Baronet, Sir William Pepperell. Brigadier Ruggles alone was selected from the mass of offenders, and associated with the former governors and lieutenant-governor, as the most conspicuous group. He deserved this distinction, for he was confessedly their most powerful supporter for several years before their government was overturned and terminated.¹

sion on the members. Otis rose after him, and with the fullest tone and most impassioned manner, that seemed to arrest the very breathing of the House, began: 'Mr. Speaker, the liberty of this country is gone forever! and I'll go after it!' He immediately turned around and walked out of the chamber." Life of James Otis, Jr., p. 355.

In the same connection it may be added that the following paragraph in the Boston Chronicle, October 10, 1768, probably refers to Brigadier Ruggles. In reference to the report that Governor

While he remained in Hardwick, General Ruggles contributed more than any other person to the agricultural prosperity of the town, by improved methods of tillage, the introduction of choice breeds of cattle and horses, and the culture of engrafted fruits.¹ In the performance of his various public duties, he reflected honor on his constituents. As colonel and as brigadier-general in the French War, as representative and as speaker of the House, as president of the Congress at New York, and as chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, he was equal to his position and adorned it.² He closed his long and eventful life at Wilmot, near Annapolis, N. S., August 4, 1795, aged nearly 84 years, leaving behind him the well-earned reputation of loyalty to his king, love of his country, and strict honor, faithfulness, skill, and energy in the performance of every duty incumbent on him.

To this estimate of his character I do not recollect to have seen any objection until recently. But a respectable writer in Bernard might be appointed Governor of Virginia, the writer says: "If his Excellency accepts of the above offer, it is said his Honor the Lieut. Governor will be appointed to succeed him; and that a certain Honourable gentleman, a Brigadier of the Colony Troops in the late war, during which he distinguished himself, and who is equally esteemed for his probity and firmness, will succeed the Lieut. Governor."

¹ After his removal to Nova Scotia, he seems to have abandoned politics and to have devoted himself entirely to agriculture. In an obituary notice, published in a Halifax newspaper immediately after his death, it is said that "At the conclusion of the late war, General Ruggles came to this Province, and with a degree of philosophy rarely to be met with at the age of 74 [his age was 64 in 1775] sat himself down in the wilderness, and began to cultivate a new farm, which he carried on with wonderful perseverance and success. The idea that his advanced age would not admit him to reap the fruit of his labor never damped the spirit of improvement by which he was in a most eminent degree actuated; and the district of country in which he lived will long feel the benefits resulting from the liberal exertions he made to advance the agricultural interests of the Province. It may not be without its use to remark that for much the greatest part of his life General Ruggles ate no animal food, and drank no spirituous or fermented liquors, small beer excepted; and that he enjoyed to his advanced age almost uninterrupted health."

² In person, General Ruggles is said to have been somewhat more than six feet in height, and well proportioned. When arrayed in the costume then fashionable, surmounted by the formidable wig and cocked hat, his aspect must have been imposing and majestic. And in manner he was equally dignified. President Adams (who was his kinsman), in contrasting him with Gridley, the Attorney General, in 1759, says, "Ruggles' grandeur consists in the quickness of his apprehension, the steadiness of his attention, the boldness and strength of his thoughts and expressions, his strict honor, conscious superiority, contempt of meanness, &c. People approach him with dread and terror. Gridley's grandeur consists in his great learning, his great parts, and his majestic manner; but it is diminished by stiffness and affectation. Ruggles is as proud, as lordly as Gridley, but he is more popular; he conceals it more; he times it better; and it is easy and natural in him, but is stiff and affected in Gridley. It is an advantage to Ruggles' character, but a disadvantage to Gridley's." Life and Works, ii. 67.

the "History of Worcester County," published in 1879, while he bears frank testimony that "though living in style, he was temperate in his habits, prudent and sagacious in the management of his affairs, and capable of filling any position to which he might be raised," yet on the same page, speaking of the ill-fated daughter, Mrs. Spooner, he makes the astonishing statement, that "the father, with all his talents and public spirit, was a man of low moral principle, and it is believed that he set his children an example of conjugal infidelity."¹ I doubt not that this writer "believed" his statement to be true; but to me it is utterly incredible. I was born, and resided for the first twenty-four years of my life, within a few rods of Brigadier Ruggles' homestead; and during that period I often heard his character discussed by his townsmen who had personally known him, and had opposed him politically. I have also read much concerning him in contemporary newspapers, and in authentic history. I have heard and I have read most bitter denunciations of his political opinions and conduct. But never, until now, have I known him to be characterized as a "man of low moral principle." And as to his domestic relations, although an unhappy incompatibility of temper was notorious, and was the subject of free conversation among those who personally knew the parties, I do not remember to have heard the slightest suspicion of "conjugal infidelity" on the part of either husband or wife. On the contrary, there are unmistakable indications that his townsmen had full confidence in his high "moral principle," and in the general uprightness of his conduct.

Equally destitute of truth, I am confident, are the stories which have been current concerning the outrageous conduct of his townsmen. I have seen no evidence that they ever treated him with personal disrespect, or maimed his cattle, or wantonly destroyed his property. Mob law was never countenanced in Hardwick.

Before taking final leave of this eminent citizen, the insertion of a few anecdotes, illustrative of his grim humor and plainness of speech, may be pardoned.

It is related that while he was a young lawyer an old woman entered the court-house, at recess, and desired a seat. Ruggles gravely pointed to the judges' bench, which she gladly accepted. When the Court came in and sternly questioned him, he replied that he considered the seat to be very convenient for old women.

Under the Provincial Charter, "the General Sessions of the Peace was composed of all the justices within the county, who commonly attended and decided the matters presented for adjudication by vote. . . . General Ruggles, the Chief Justice, in stern derision of the constitution of this Court, on one occasion, reprimanded a dog who had taken his seat beside his master, for appearing on the bench before he had been qualified as a Justice of the Peace, and directed him to go and be sworn before he came to vote there.”¹

The famous bull story rests on a slight foundation. That a bull chased the Brigadier into his house, and was there shot after having demolished a valuable looking-glass, is probably true; but the remainder of this oft-told tale is so utterly inconsistent with the Brigadier's high sense of honor, that it may without hesitation be pronounced apocryphal and unworthy of repetition.

Other anecdotes have been preserved by tradition, which I do not recollect to have seen in print. Among these may be mentioned that which describes one of his boyish pranks while he was a student in Harvard College. A sign had been removed from some store or tavern, and conveyed to his room, by him or by some of his associates. Search was made for it in the evening, but the door was bolted, and the sign was placed on the fire. When the footsteps of the tutors were heard approaching, Ruggles began to pray, very audibly, and in his prayer repeated the language found in Matthew xvi. 4: “A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it but the sign of the prophet Jonas.” In due time the sign was consumed, the prayer ceased, and the door was opened to admit those who had scrupulously abstained from interrupting the devotions of the students.

The account of another youthful extravagance indicates that some of the son's facetiousness was inherited from the father. Having purchased a horse, and agreed to pay for it on the next Election day, he wrote a promissory note, in which, instead of Election day, he inserted the words Resurrection day. When Election day arrived and payment was demanded, he insisted that the note had not yet matured, and called for the reading of it; he would pay when it became due. The father, overhearing the conversation, exclaimed, “Timothy, if you owe that man anything, pay him. You will have enough else to attend to at the Resurrection, besides paying for old horses.”

There is yet another horse story : The father, Rev. Timothy Ruggles, had a favorite horse which became sick. The son was requested to give his opinion in the case. After due examination, he said, "The difficulty is plain enough, father; the horse has the same disease which troubles the larger portion of your parish; he has been very severely priest-ridden."

Two military anecdotes must close this list, already perhaps too long.

Before the attack on Ticonderoga, in 1758, Brigadier Ruggles earnestly objected to the order of battle proposed by General Abercrombie, and suggested another, which involved much greater personal hazard to himself. Abercrombie, however, with true English obstinacy, persisted in his own plan, and was repulsed with disastrous loss. When they met, on the next morning, to the General's formal salutation the Brigadier responded, "Good-morning, General Abercrombie; I hope your terrible defeat yesterday may be sanctified to you."

"On the morning of the battle of Bunker Hill, General Gage said to him, that the rebels would disperse at the sight of his cannon; that he should not be under the necessity of discharging a gun; 'without discipline, without officers, and under the disadvantage of being engaged in an unjust cause,' continued he tauntingly, 'it is impossible for them to withstand our arms a moment.' Ruggles replied with warmth, 'Sir, you know not with whom you have to contend. These are the very men who conquered, Canada. I fought with them side by side; I know them well; they will fight bravely. My God! Sir, your folly has ruined your cause.'"¹

CIVIL HISTORY.

Committee of Correspondence. — County Convention. — Courts of Law obstructed. — New Organization of Militia, and Officers elected. — Minute Men. — Alarm List. — Provincial Congress. — Constables indemnified. — Contribution to Boston Sufferers. — Tories treated with Neglect, disarmed, confined, and advertised as Public Enemies. — Temporary State Government organized. — Few Tories in Hardwick. — Sharp Controversy with One of the Number ; settled by Appeal to the General Court. — The Conflict succeeded by Peace. — Anecdote.

At a meeting, on the 22d of August, 1774, the town “ Chose a committee of fifteen men for a Committee of Correspondence, nine of whom being met shall have power to act, to correspond with the Committees of other towns within this Province respecting the important matters relating to our civil and political rights and privileges, as may be necessary from time to time, and to agree to such measures as may be thought most proper to be taken in order to frustrate and disappoint the purposes of wicked and designing men to deprive us and our posterity of our just rights and privileges ; and that said Committee shall have power from time to time, as they shall think necessary, to appoint some person or persons from among themselves to attend upon any Convention of members from the Committees of any other towns within this Province, to consult upon matters relating to our civil rights and privileges, and that said person or persons, so delegated, shall have power to agree with the majority of such Convention in any method that they may think proper to come into, to answer the above purposes ; and that the town will pay the expenses of those persons, and their horses, that may attend upon such convention. And furthermore, the town chose a committee of three men, viz. : Capt. Paul Mandell, Mr. Stephen Rice, and Lieut. Jonathan Warner, as a Committee to meet the Committee of Correspondence at Worcester, on Tuesday the 30th instant.”

The Committee of Correspondence, elected in Boston, November 2, 1772, was the first in the Province, and was a device of the sterling patriot, Samuel Adams. "This inaugurated the system of local committees of correspondence. They multiplied and widened under successive impulses, until they constituted the accredited organs of the party that founded the Republic of the United States."¹ The inhabitants of Hardwick did not so soon respond to the message from Boston, nor so promptly as some other towns elect their Committee of Correspondence; but in due time, and after careful deliberation, they heartily joined in the movement which induced Governor Hutchinson to say: "Thus, all on a sudden, from a state of peace, order, and general contentment, as some expressed themselves, the province, more or less from one end to the other, was brought into a state of contention, disorder, and general dissatisfaction; or, as others would have it, were roused from stupor and inaction to sensibility and activity."² The power exercised by this committee was not absolutely unlimited, because, from time to time, they reported their proceedings to the town, for approval. But in the general confusion which prevailed until the adoption of the Constitution in 1780, they exercised to a considerable extent both judicial and executive authority; and from their known character we may be certain that the individuals first elected did not perform their duty negligently. This committee consisted of "Capt. Benjamin Ruggles, Capt. Constant Merrick, Capt. Paul Mandell, Deac. Joseph Allen, Deac. William Paige, Deac. John Bradish, Lieut. Jonathan Warner, Mr. Daniel Warner, Mr. Stephen Rice, Ens. Ezra Leonard, Ens. Timothy Newton, Mr. Thomas Robinson, Mr. Seth Paddleford, Mr. Josiah Locke, and Lieut. Joseph Safford."³

The committee of three, namely, Paul Mandell, Stephen Rice,

Elisha Billings, Thomas Wheeler, Isaac Fay, Denison Robinson, Timothy Newton, and Zebadiah Johnson. — 1779: David Allen, Samuel Dexter, Aaron Barlow, Ephraim Cleaveland, Jr., James Paige, Jr., Daniel Warner, Ezra Leonard, Elisha Billings, John Hastings, Timothy Paige, John Haskell, Thomas Robinson, Timothy Newton, Jonathan Warner, and Ephraim Pratt. — 1780: Daniel Egery, Oliver Allen, Isaac Fay, John Haskell, and James Wing. Further elections were rendered unnecessary by the establishment of a regular government.

and Jonathan Warner, elected August 22, 1774, and increased, September 22, 1774, by the election of John Bradish, to "meet the Committee of Correspondence at Worcester," faithfully performed their duty, and from time to time reported to the town the proceedings of the Convention. That Convention met at Worcester, August 9, 1774, organized, and adjourned to the thirtieth day of the same month, in order that, as "a considerable number of respectable towns in this county have not yet chosen committees, and by that means may not have received the letters notifying this Convention," such towns might receive notice and be duly represented. At the appointed time, the Convention re-assembled. Rev. Ebenezer Chaplin, then of Sutton, and afterwards of Hardwick, one of the members, officiated as chaplain at its various sessions until its final dissolution, May 31, 1775. Under the form of recommendations, this body exercised substantial legislative authority; and their fellow citizens yielded a ready obedience to whatever was required. Among the earliest recommendations were the following, adopted August 31, 1774:—

"Resolved, that it is the indispensable duty of the inhabitants of this county, by the best ways and means, to prevent the sitting of the respective courts under such regulations as are set forth in a late act of parliament, entitled an act for regulating the civil government of the Massachusetts Bay.

"Resolved, that in order to prevent the execution of the late act of parliament, respecting the courts, that it be recommended to the inhabitants of this county to attend, in person, the next inferior court of common pleas and general sessions, to be holden at Worcester, in and for said county, on the sixth day of September next.

"Resolved, that it be recommended to the several towns that they choose proper and suitable officers, and a sufficient number, to regulate the movements of each town, and prevent any disorder which might otherwise happen; and that it be enjoined on the inhabitants of each respective town, that they adhere strictly to the orders and directions of such officers.

"And whereas, the courts of justice will necessarily be impeded by the opposition to the said acts of parliament, therefore, Resolved, that it be recommended to the inhabitants of this province in general, and to those of this county in particular, that they depute fit persons to represent them in one general provincial convention, to be convened at Concord, on the second Tuesday of October next, to devise proper ways and means to resume our original mode of government, whereby the most dignified servants were, as they ever ought to be, dependent on the people for their existence as such; or some other which may appear to them best calculated to regain and secure our violated rights. . . .

“Resolved, that it be recommended to the several towns that they indemnify their constables for neglecting to return lists of persons qualified to serve as jurors.”

The convention then adjourned to September 6, when it again met and “voted, as the opinion of this convention, that the court should not sit on any terms,” . . . and “that the body of the people in this county now in town assemble on the common.” Not only were the courts prevented from sitting, but the judges and officers of the courts were required to promise that they would “stay all such judicial proceedings,” and would not attempt to put the parliamentary “act into execution.”¹ On the same day, the Convention “voted, that it be recommended to the military officers in this county that they resign their commissions to the colonels of the respective regiments:—voted, that the field officers resign their offices, and publish their resignations in all the Boston newspapers:—voted, that it be recommended to the several towns of the county, to choose proper officers for the military of the town, and a sufficient number.”

At a subsequent session, September 20, 1774, it was “voted, as the opinion of this convention, that the sheriff adjourn the superior court appointed by law to be held this day, and that he retain such as are, or may be, committed as criminals, in his custody, until they have a trial.” The Convention then recommended a more thorough reorganization of the militia:—

“As the several regiments in this county are large and inconvenient, by the increase of its inhabitants since the first settlement of said regiments, therefore, voted, that the county be divided into seven distinct regiments, in the following manner, to wit:— . . . Fourth. Brookfield, Western, Braintree, Hardwick, Oakham. . . .

“Voted, that it be recommended to the several towns in this county, to choose proper military officers, and a sufficient number for each town, and that the captains, lieutenants, and ensigns, who are chosen by the people in each regiment, do convene on or before the tenth day of October next, at some convenient place in each regiment, and choose their field officers to command the militia until they be constitutionally appointed; and that it be recommended to the officers in each town of the county, to enlist one third of the men of their respective towns, between sixteen and sixty years of age, to be ready to act at a minute's warning; and that it be recommended to each town in the county, to choose a sufficient number of men as a committee to supply and support those troops that shall move on any emergency.

“Voted, that it be recommended to the company officers of the minute-men, to meet at Worcester, on the 17th of October next, at ten o'clock of the forenoon, to proportion their own regiments, and choose as many field officers as they shall think necessary.”

On the same day the Convention made provision for a political emergency, by recommending a Provincial Congress, which exercised almost unlimited power for the next year: “Resolved, that it be recommended to the several towns and districts, that they instruct their representatives, who may be chosen to meet at Salem, in October next, absolutely to refuse to be sworn by any officer or officers, but such as are or may be appointed according to the constitution, or to act as one branch of the legislature in concert with any others, except such as are or may be appointed according to the charter of this province; and that they refuse to give their attendance at Boston, while the town is invested with troops and ships of war: And should there be any thing to prevent their acting with such a governor and council as is expressly set forth in the charter, that they immediately repair to the town of Concord, and there join in a provincial congress with such other members as are or may be chosen for that purpose, to act and determine on such measures as they shall judge to be proper to extricate this colony out of the present unhappy circumstances.”¹

How promptly and heartily the inhabitants of Hardwick responded to these recommendations may be seen in their recorded votes. At a town-meeting, September 16, 1774, — “The town made choice of officers to regulate the soldiers that went to Worcester. — Voted, to accept the Resolves of the Committee of Correspondence, which was laid before the town at that time.¹— Chose Deac. Joseph Allen, Capt. Paul Mandell, Stephen Rice, Capt. William Paige, and Ebenezer Washburn, to draw up a covenant that may bind them to abide by whatever the majority of the town think proper to vote.” Six days later, the town “voted to accept the covenant drawn up by a committee chosen for that purpose.”²

September 22, 1774, only two days after the recommendation of the measure was adopted by the County Convention, a town meeting was held under a warrant, of which one article was, “to see if the town will make some consideration, as an encouragement to a certain number of persons, as the town may think proper, to serve as minute-men, upon any sudden invasion, for the defence of our country.” At this meeting all the officers of the two militia companies having resigned, new officers were elected by the town, to wit: for the South Company, Captain, Jonathan Warner; Lieutenant, Elisha Billings; Ensign, Elijah Warner: for the North Company, Captain, Paul Mandell; Lieutenant, Stephen Rice; Ensign, Josiah Locke, who being transferred to the company of minute-men, Ensign Timothy Newton was elected in his stead: for the company of minute-men, Captain, Jonathan Warner; Lieutenant, Simeon Hazeltine; Ensign, Josiah Locke. And it was “voted, that if there should be an invasion, and the minute-men should march for our relief, they should be supported by the town.” The minute-men were also offered pay for the time which they devoted to drilling and instruction. But this they were too patriotic to allow, while others were not paid. They proposed at a town meeting, January 2, 1775, “that if the town in general would provide themselves with arms, and be equipped as they be, and endeavor to acquaint themselves with the art military, it would be satisfactory to them, without any other pay.” Whereupon the town voted, “that all between sixinces, for the non-consumption of British goods. This, we apprehend, will have a tendency to convince our brethren in Britain that more is to be gained, in the way of justice, from our friendship and affection than by extortion and arbitrary power. . . . Such an agreement, if strictly adhered to, will greatly prevent extravagance, save our money, encourage our manufactures, and reform our manners.”

teen and seventy years of age, be equipped with arms and ammunition equal to the minute men, by the first day of February next;” also voted, “that all above forty years of age meet at the training field on Monday next at nine o’clock in the forenoon, to choose their officers.” When thus assembled, they organized two companies of “alarm men.” Of one company, Deacon Joseph Allen, then sixty-seven years of age, was elected Captain; Lieutenant Joseph Safford, First Lieutenant; and Lieutenant Daniel Fay, Second Lieutenant; and of the other, Deacon William Paige, aged fifty-one years, who had been a captain in the French war, was elected Captain; Mr. Thomas Robinson, First Lieutenant; and Ensign Ezra Leonard, Second Lieutenant. Thus while this town contained not much more than twelve hundred inhabitants, five military companies, averaging about fifty men each, were prepared for service, before the first blood was shed in the contest; — one for action in any sudden emergency; two for more regular service, in such detachments as circumstances might require; and two of old men, to defend their hearthstones at the last extremity, and to sacrifice their lives, if necessary, in defence of their families.¹

One more recommendation of the County Convention met a ready response at this town-meeting September 22, 1774: “Chose Mr. Stephen Rice to represent the town at the Provincial Congress to be held at Concord.” The town had previously elected Paul Mandell as their representative for this year in the General Court. He was desired and empowered to act in the Provincial Congress, if the House of Representatives should be dissolved by the Governor. Instructions to him, drawn up by Captain William Paige, Lieutenant Stephen Rice, and Dr. John Paddleford, were reported and adopted at a town-meeting, September 30, 1774: “To Capt. Paul Mandell; Sir, As we have chosen you to represent us in the Great and General Court to be holden at Sato the laws of the province in that case made and provided. So that we have reason to believe that the Tory Covenant or Association, sent into this town by Brigadier Ruggles, will have little or no effect amongst us, nor will any other means used by our enemies to divide or divert us from pursuing the measures which we think will have a tendency to recover and secure to us and our posterity our just rights and privileges.” Massachusetts Spy, February 2, 1775.

lem, on Wednesday, the fifth day of October next ensuing, we do hereby instruct you to adhere firmly, in all your doings as a member of the House of Representatives, to the Charter of this Province granted by their Majesties King William and Queen Mary, and that you do no act that can possibly be construed into an acknowledgement of the validity of the British Parliament for altering the Government of the Massachusetts Bay; and that you acknowledge no other than the honorable Board of Councillors elected by the General Court in their sessions last May as the only constitutional and rightful Council; and that you pay no regard or act in any manner whatever with the Council appointed by Mandamus from his Majesty. And as we have reason to believe that a conscientious discharge of your duty will produce your dissolution as a house of representatives, we do hereby empower and direct you to join with the members who may be sent from this and the other towns in this province, and to meet with them at a time to be agreed on in a general Provincial Congress, to act upon such matters as shall then come before you in such a manner as may appear most conducive to preserve the liberties of North America."

The anticipated emergency occurred. The House of Representatives was dissolved by the Governor, and the Provincial Congress "convened at Salem on Friday the seventh day of October A. D. 1774," organized by electing Hon. John Hancock, chairman, and Benjamin Lincoln, Esq., clerk, and "adjourned to the court-house in Concord, there to meet on Tuesday next;" and on the next Friday "adjourned to the court-house in Cambridge, there to meet on Monday next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon." A recess was taken from October 29 to November 23, and the Congress was dissolved December 10, 1774. Among the recommendations by this Congress were these:—

October 21, 1774. "Resolved that this Congress do earnestly recommend to the people of this province an abhorrence and detestation of all kinds of East India teas, as the baneful article of a corrupt and venal administration for the purpose of introducing despotism and slavery into this once happy country; and that every individual in this province ought totally to disuse the same. And it is recommended, that every town and district appoint a committee to post up in some public place the names of all such in their respective towns and districts, who shall sell or consume so extravagant and unnecessary an article of luxury."

October 29, 1774. "Whereas, it has been recommended by this Congress, that the moneys heretofore granted and ordered to be assessed by the general court of this province, and not paid into the province treasury should not be paid to the Hon. Harrison Gray, Esq., for reasons most obvious: — Therefore Resolved, that Henry Gardner, Esq., of Stow, be, and hereby is, appointed receiver general. . . . And it is hereby recommended to the several towns and districts within this province, that they immediately call town and district meetings, and give directions to all constables, collectors, and other persons who may have any part of the province tax of such town or district in their respective hands or possession, in consequence of any late order and directions of any town or district, that he or they immediately pay the same to the said Henry Gardner, Esq., for the purposes aforesaid. And it is also recommended that the several towns and districts, in said directions, signify and expressly engage to such constable, collector, or other persons as shall have their said moneys in their hands, that their paying the same to Henry Gardner, Esq., aforesaid, and producing his receipt therefor, shall ever hereafter operate as an effectual discharge to such persons for the same.”¹

At a legal meeting, November 17, 1774, the town, by vote, approved the proceedings of the Provincial Congress, generally; and in particular ordered the constables to pay the public moneys to the Receiver-General instead of the King’s Treasurer, and agreed to indemnify them for so doing; appointed a committee “to post up in some public place the names of those persons who shall hereafter sell or consume Bohea or Indian Tea;” and “made choice of the following men as a committee to observe the conduct of all persons in this town, touching the observation of the determinations of the Provincial Congress, viz., Deac. Joseph Allen, Col. Jonathan Warner, Thomas Haskell, Deac. William Paige, Thomas Robinson, Col. Paul Mandell,² and John Paige.”

Four days afterwards, “The town met according to adjournment, Nov. 21, 1774, and 1st, Voted to reconsider the former votes respecting officers for the south side of the town, and proceeded to an entire new choice. 2^d, Voted, and chose Samuel Billings, Jr., for their Captain ; Elijah Warner, for their Lieutenant ; and Isaiah Hatch, for their Ensign.”¹

January 2, 1775. Pursuant to a recommendation of the Provincial Congress, in regard to “the persons suffering in the towns of Boston and Charlestown, under the operation of certain acts of the British parliament,” that the people generally should “contribute liberally to alleviate the burdens of those persons, who are the more immediate objects of ministerial resentment, and are suffering in the common cause of their country,” the town ordered that collections should be made for that benevolent purpose. That Congress having voted to dissolve on the tenth day of December, 1774, and recommended the election of delegates to a second Provincial Congress, to sit from February 1, “until the Tuesday next preceding the last Wednesday of May next, and no longer,”² the town at this meeting, “chose Col. Paul Mandell to attend at the Provincial Congress at Cambridge, on the first day of February next, and sooner if occasion requires.” Also, “Voted, to accept the resolve of the Committee, in having no dealings with the Tories, except grinding for them.”³

After the commencement of actual hostilities, those who were regarded as Tories were subjected to a more strict discipline. Not only were they treated with neglect and contempt, and excluded from all social or commercial intercourse, but they were disarmed and subjected to confinement, more or less absolute, as circumstances might seem to require. One person, at least, was committed to prison ; others confined to the limits of the town,

³ Grinding was a work of necessity, as “bread is the staff of life.” But in regard to all else, they seem to have been as exclusive as the blacksmiths of the county, who agreed, September 8, 1774, that they would not “do or perform any blacksmith’s work, or business of any kind whatever, for any person or persons whom we esteem enemies to this country, commonly known by the name of tories” . . . and “Resolved, that all lawful ways and means ought to be adopted by the whole body of the people of this province, to discountenance all our inveterate political enemies in manner as aforesaid. — Therefore we earnestly recommend it to all denominations of artificers, that they call meetings of their respective craftsmen in their several counties, as soon as may be, and enter into associations and agreements for said purposes ; and that all husbandmen, laborers, &c., do the like : and that whoever shall be guilty of any breach of any or either of the articles or agreements, be held by us in contempt as enemies to our common rights.” Journals of each Prov. Congress, p. 640.

or of their own farms; others, again, were published as unfriendly to the patriotic cause, and the public were cautioned to regard them as enemies.¹

April 24, 1775. "Voted, that the town are not satisfied with Jonathan Danforth's declaration of his being a friend to liberty. Voted, that Lieut. Timothy Ruggles² be put under guard, and also John Rion, until said Ruggles shall satisfy all the men that now live at Brigadier Ruggles' house for their labor, and see that they go out of town forthwith, and see that the arms and ammunition, now at Brigadier Ruggles' house, are delivered up; and then he is confined to his farm, and not to go out of it, excepting on Sabbath-days, fast days, or some other public days; and that he pays the guard for their trouble in taking care of him."

May 15, 1775. Voted, to take possession of the guns found at the house of Brigadier Ruggles, "and to return them when they think proper. Voted, that Lieut. Timothy Ruggles have liberty to go to Boston, and live there, if he pleases."

May 22, 1775. The town met "to elect one or more persons to serve for and represent them in a Provincial Congress, to be held at the meeting-house in Watertown, on Wednesday the

Whereas Deacon James Fay, Jonathan Danforth, Abner Conant, Joseph Ruggles, Jr., Israel Conkey, and Jonathan Nye, all of Hardwick, in the County of Worcester, have, by their conduct in various instances, manifested a disposition inimical to the rights and privileges of their countrymen,—therefore Resolved, that their names be published to the world, agreeable to the association of the Continental Congress; and that it be earnestly recommended to the inhabitants of this town, county, and colony, not to have any commercial connection with the said Fay, Danforth, &c., but to shun their persons and causes, and treat them with that contempt and neglect they deserve. And whereas the said Committee have thought it necessary that the said Danforth, Fay, &c., be confined to this town, and that they assemble not together more than two of them at a time (except at public worship and at funerals), therefore further recommend it to the good people of this colony, that (if the said persons or any one of them should depart out of this town without a permit from said Committee) they take up and confine or send them back again. Per order of the said Committee. SETH PADEFORD, Clerk of said Committee." New England Chronicle, August 17, 1775.

² Timothy Ruggles was son of the Brigadier; his brother, John, had previously fled to Boston, though he escaped with some difficulty, as appears by the report of a committee of Congress, concerning a prisoner named John Jones: "We find by said Jones' account of himself, that he went to Boston soon after the memorable Lexington battle, of the 19th of April last, in company with John Ruggles of Hardwick, who was ordered by a committee to the said town of Hardwick; and that said Jones was knowing to the proceedings of said committee against said Ruggles, before they set out together from Weston to take refuge in Boston; and that they left the common road, and went in the woods and difficult places, to pass the town of Roxbury." Journals of each Prov. Congress, pp. 315, 316.

thirty-first day of May instant, and to be continued by adjournment, as they shall see cause, until the expiration of six months from their being first convened on the thirty-first day of this instant May, and no longer; and to consult, deliberate, and resolve upon such further measures as under God shall be effectual to save this people from impending ruin, and to secure those inestimable liberties derived to us from our ancestors, and which [it] is our duty to preserve for posterity." The town elected three delegates, to serve by turns, one at a time, namely: Captain William Paige, for June and July; Captain Stephen Rice, for August and September; and Colonel Jonathan Warner, for October and November; but as the Congress dissolved on the 19th of July, to give place to the newly elected General Court, only one of these delegates took his seat. At the same meeting it was "Voted, that the following persons be looked upon as unfriendly to the common cause of liberty, viz., Richard Ruggles,¹ Jonathan Nye, Deac. James Fay, Gardner Chandler, and Ebenezer Whipple. Voted, that as Gardner Chandler² has now made some acknowledgments, and says he is sorry for his past conduct, they will treat him as a friend and a neighbor as long as he shall behave himself well."

The second Provincial Congress, believing that "the sword should, in all free states be subservient to the civil powers," and that such powers were then exercised only on sufferance, without due form of law, appealed to the Continental Congress May 16, 1775, for "advice respecting the taking up and exercising the powers of civil government, which we think absolutely necessary for the salvation of our country; and we shall readily submit to such a general plan as you may direct for the colonies; or make it our great study to establish such a form of government here, as shall not only most promote our advantage, but the union and interest of all America." In answer to this appeal, the Continental Congress, June 9, 1775, "Resolved, that no obedience being due to the act of parliament for altering the charter of the colony of Massachusetts Bay, nor to a governor and lieutenant-governor who will not observe the directions of, but endeavor to subvert, that charter; the governor and lieutenant-governor are to be considered as absent, and their offices vacant. And as there is no council there, and the inconveniences arising from the suspension of the powers of government are intolerable, especially at a time when General Gage hath actually levied war, and is carrying on hostilities against his majesty's peaceful and loyal subjects of that colony; that in order to conform, as near as may be, to the spirit and substance of the charter, it be recommended to the Provincial Congress, to write letters to the inhabitants of the several places which are entitled to representation in assembly, requesting them to choose such representatives; and that the assembly, when chosen, should elect counsellors: which assembly and council should exercise the powers of government, until a governor of his majesty's appointment will consent to govern the colony according to its charter." Accordingly, the third Provincial Congress, now in session, issued letters, June 20, 1775, requesting the selectmen of the several towns to cause the inhabitants to assemble and "elect and depute one or more freeholders resident in the same town, according to the numbers set and limited by an act of the general assembly, entitled an act for ascertaining the number and regulating the house of representatives, to serve for and represent them in a great and general court or assembly, to be convened, held, and kept, for the service of the said colony until the end of the day next preceding the last Wednesday of May next, if necessary, and no longer, at the meeting house in Watertown, upon Wednesday the nineteenth day of July next ensuing the date hereof."¹ In accordance with this request, Capt. Stephen Rice was elected, July 15, 1775, a member of this House of Representatives, — the first which derived its authority directly and absolutely from the people.

October 10, 1775. "Voted, that Lient. Timothy Ruggles be set at liberty. Voted, That the late proceedings of the Committee of Correspondence with respect to the Tories are satisfactory to the town." Precisely what these "proceedings" were does not appear on record; but it may safely be assumed that they were less "satisfactory" to the Tories than to the town. The number of Tories in Hardwick was not large. Indeed it is remarkable that Brigadier Ruggles, whose services to the colony had been so conspicuous, and to the town so important and beneficial, should have secured so few political adherents outside of his family circle. The more active and troublesome of them soon left the town. Those who remained, with a single exception, seem to have submitted unresistingly to the discipline adjudged necessary by the Committee of Correspondence, and to have conformed to the new state of affairs so entirely as to secure the respect and confidence of the most ardent Sons of Liberty. And even Jonathan Danforth, the most unmanageable and pugnacious of the whole number, finally obtained the same boon, though he secured it "through much tribulation." Several documents relative to him are preserved in the records and archives of the Commonwealth, which have not heretofore been published, and from which I shall quote somewhat freely, as they perhaps include, and certainly illustrate, some of the "proceedings of the Committee of Correspondence with respect to the Tories" at that time and afterwards.

"Worcester, ss. To the Sheriff of the County of Worcester, or to the Keeper of the Common Goal in said County. Greeting. In the name of the Government and People of the Massachusetts Bay in New England: You are required to take into safe custody, and commit to said Goal, Jonathan Danforth of Hardwick, a person inimical and dangerous to the States of America, there to remain in safe keeping till he shall be liberated and discharged by due course of law. Given under my hand this 4th day of December Anno Domini 1776. WILLIAM PAGE (by order), Chairman of the Committee of Correspondence for Hardwick." ¹

"To the Honorable Council of the State of the Massachusetts Bay: We, the Committee of Correspondence, Safety, and Inspection, for the Town of Hardwick do show, — That we have committed to the common goal in Worcester Jonathan Danforth of this town for the several crimes following, viz., (1.) That he, being collector for said Hardwick, refused to pay to the Treasurer of the State, Henry Gardner, Esq., the public monies he had in his hands, according to a resolve of Congress. (2.) But being compelled to answer for said money, he produced other men's security and took a receipt of the Committee, which receipt afterwards he gave to Harrison Gray, Esq., on the account of which one of the said Committee was seized by said Gray and contained [detained?] to his great loss and damage. 3. Afterwards he was published in the public papers, and confined to the town as an enemy to the United States; but notwithstanding, he broke through his confinement, and went to New York and other places, which we apprehend was to confer with and give information to our enemies. 4. Concealing the goods of Richard Ruggles, a fugitive, when sought for; and when part was found with him, solemly declared there was all he knew of ; but afterwards others were found in a certain wood, which he confessed he put there. 5. And also absconded from said town of Hardwick for many months, conferring with our enemies, to the great uneasiness and worry of the inhabitants of said town. — For these and many other reasons which we are ready to show, if called to it, I have committed the said Danforth, as above stated. By order of said Committee, WILLIAM PAIGE, Chairman. Worcester Dec. y^e 5th 1776.”¹

“ To the Honorable Council for the State of Massachusetts Bay, in Council assembled, Dec. y^e 6th 1776 : Jonathan Danforth of Hardwick, in the County of Worcester, now a prisoner in the common Goal in said county, humbly shows, — That, some time in the month of July last, he left the town of Hardwick aforesaid and went to North Yarmouth in the county of Cumberland, and let himself to the Hon. Jeremiah Powell, one of this Honorable Board, and lived with him until the sixth day of November last, when he returned home to Hardwick, bringing proper credentials with him from the said Mr. Powell that, during the time he had lived with him, he had behaved well : that, during his absence, the Committee of Correspondence &c., for said Hardwick seized upon the estate of your petitioner and leased the same out, although he had left a proper person on it, to take care of it and his family in his absence ; that, some little time after your petitioner’s arrival home, the Committee aforesaid seized him, and in a most ignominious manner put him under guard and charged him with having been, in his absence, with the British troops, and made out a mittimus, signed by one William Paige, their chairman, directed to the Sheriff of the County, ordering him to be committed to goal as a person inimical and dangerous to the States of America, and at the same time forbidding the Sheriff to take any bail, although your petitioner could have procured ample security for his good behavior, and he is confined in the goal aforesaid among prisoners of war, thieves, &c., and must remain there, unless your Honors interpose in his behalf. Since civil government has taken place among us, and civil magistrates are appointed for the due execution of the laws, your petitioner apprehends that Committees cannot lawfully grant mittimuses for the commitment of any person ; but the late law of this State directs that if any person is supposed [suspected?] of being inimical to the States of the United Colonies, upon complaint made by Committees, &c. to a Justice of the Peace, the Justice is to examine the matter of complaint, and upon due proof being made to bind the offender to the next Court, and to his good behavior in the meantime; which law your petitioner is willing to submit to. Therefore [he] prays your Honors to direct the Sheriff that, upon your petitioner's giving bond, &c. agreeable to the direction of the law, he may be liberated; and as in duty bound shall pray :

“JONATHAN DANFORTH.”¹

This petition was referred, December 7, to a committee, and no further notice of it is found on the records of the General Court; but it elsewhere appears that the petitioner “was set at liberty by the Judges of the Superior Court.” Then followed a sharp and troublesome contest between him and the committee, the details of which, as well as the antecedent transactions, are set forth in the following petition:—

“To the Honorable the Council and House of Representatives for the State of the Massachusetts Bay: The petition of the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, for the town of Hardwick, humbly sheweth,—That whereas Jonathan Danforth of said town has in many instances, in our opinion, been aiding and assisting the unnatural enemies of the United States of America, therefore we, the said Selectmen and Committee, shall endeavor to inform the Honorable Court of the said Danforth's conduct, from the time of the date of the Resolve of the Provincial Congress requiring every town in this State to appoint Committees to call their Constables to account for the outstanding monies in their hands, and also the transactions of the Town, Selectmen, and Committee, aforesaid, with the said Danforth.

“In the first place, with regard to the said Danforth, when the said town's committee, agreeable to a Resolve of the Provincial Congress of the State (the said Danforth being constable for said town), proceeded to call him to an account for said outstanding monies, the said Danforth then absolutely refused to give any account respecting said monies, when requested, till after being compelled thereto by said town, agreeable to said Resolve,—who thereupon gave his note for said monies, for which they gave him a receipt. And further, the said Danforth made a humble acknowledgment for his past conduct, and solemnly engaged for the future that he would not oppose, but assist all in his power the people of this Town and State in every thing that is not contrary to the constitution of this state and the laws of the same ; and that he would religiously stand to all the covenants of the town, which he had signed ; and that he would stand or fall with the people. But instead of performing his engagement, he immediately returned said receipt to Harrison Gray, by which means the gentleman who gave his receipt on the back of the Province-Warrant, in behalf of the town, was arrested for said monies, to his damage ; and also did his endeavor to discourage the people from taking up arms to fight against the King of Great Britain ; and whenever the inhabitants of said town met together for the purpose of raising men for that purpose, he would appear to ridicule them in a contemptuous way and manner ; and did actually conceal the household furniture of Richard Ruggles, who has actually joined our unnatural enemy, and, being suspected, he delivered up a part, and point-blank declared he knew nothing about any more ; but on further evidence being obtained against him, he confessed in an open town-meeting that he had concealed some other articles in a certain hill, which was afterwards actually found on said hill. And also the said Danforth, notwithstanding the restrictions which were laid on him by the Committee, in obedience to a Resolve of the Provincial Congress requiring them to take effective measures to prevent suspected persons from executing their wicked designs, in open contempt of their authority went to New York, or elsewhere, and purchased a large quantity of Bohea Tea and brought [it] into town, and immediately absented himself ; by which circumstances the Committee was led to suspect that he had actually gone and joined our cruel enemies, he having previously disposed of all his stock and part of his household furniture, and part thereof he conveyed away privately and concealed in the woods, as his wife afterwards informed us, and also carried away all his valuable writings ; and when he returned back to town informed the Committee of his coming, and also gave hints that he was ready to give an account for his past conduct ; the Committee soon after gave him an opportunity therefor ; and when various questions were asked him by said Committee respecting his conduct, he refused giving any direct answer thereto. Furthermore, he endeavored to and actually did, in a clandestine manner, make conveyance of his real estate, in order as was supposed to secure it from being taken as a forfeited estate. Finally, his whole conduct, ever since the time first mentioned in this petition, has been to insult and act in contempt against the Resolves of the Continental Congress, the covenants and engagements entered into by the town, and the orders of said Committee agreeable to said Resolves and Acts of the Great and General Court of this State, unless compelled thereto.

“ In the second place, we shall endeavor to inform the Honorable Court of the transactions of the Town, Selectmen, and Committee, with said Danforth, from time to time. Viewing him as an enemy to the rights and liberties of this country, they thought themselves in duty bound,—in pursuance of a Resolve of the Provincial Congress in the year 1775, recommending it to Selectmen and Committees in all and every town in this State to take effectual steps to put it out of the power of such persons to obstruct by any means whatever the measures that shall be taken for the common defence,—to publish his name to the world as an enemy, and lay him under restrictions not to pass over the bounds of the town without license first obtained from said Committee. They also proceeded, in the year 1776, to enter a complaint to a Justice of the Peace, viewing him, agreeable to a Resolve of the Continental Congress, as a person that ought to be withdrawn from, and have no commercial intercourse with, to grant a warrant to take the forementioned Tea, and to have it stored, which was accordingly done. They also proceeded, agreeable to an Act of the Great and General Court in April 1776,—requiring Committees to make returns of the names of all such persons who had in any manner acted against or opposed the rights and liberties of the United States of America, together with their respective crimes, and evidences or depositions,—to make return of said Danforth’s name, with depositions accordingly. They also proceeded,—some time after the said Danforth had fled and left the town as before mentioned, in the opinion of said Committee and every true friend and well-wisher to [the] rights and liberties of America, to join our unnatural enemies, or elsewhere, for protection, agreeable to a Resolve of the Great and General Court of this State in 1776, empowering Committees to take immediate possession of all such persons’ estates, and to lease out all such real estate for the space of one year,—to take possession of all such personal estate as could be found belonging to said Danforth, and to lease out said real estate, and returned an inventory thereof to Court, agreeable to said Act. They further proceeded, after said Danforth had returned to town (he being absent from the fore part of July till late in the Fall, the same year), to bring him under examination, as before mentioned, he giving no direct answers to questions asked him, it was our candid opinion, — referring to a Resolve of the Continental Congress, recommending it to Committees that the most bold, impudent, and dangerous, enemies of this kind ought to be confined, — that it was not for the safety and welfare of the good people for him to go at large ; therefore the said Committee, with the advice of the principal men and Judges of the Inferior Court for the County of Worcester, having no particular Act at hand pointing out the method for commitment, proceeded to commit him to Worcester Goal, having first laid the case before the town at a full town meeting assembled, and having a very unanimous vote therefor. After said Danforth had remained in goal for some time, he was set at liberty by the Judges of the Superior Court, the Committee not knowing that he was to be brought upon trial at that time, and consequently had no opportunity to be heard. And on his returning home, the inhabitants of the town being very uneasy, thinking it not safe for the matter to remain in such a situation, — and in conformity to an Act of the Great and General Court, recommending it to Committees that any persons that were found to be enemies to the liberties of the people, that they enter complaint against such persons, and have them brought before proper authority for examination and trial, — thought it advisable to proceed with him agreeable to said act ; and when coming to trial, and producing sufficient evidence against him, as we supposed, yet he was after all very unexpectedly set at liberty, without any punishment or paying damages ; by which means he has taken encouragement to proceed against said Town and Committee by endeavoring to take advantage of law, and has interceded with some magistrate to grant him a writ, by which means he has recovered the tea before mentioned, and has summoned the officer, who served the warrant to take the tea, to make his appearance at the next Quarter Sessions to be holden at Worcester, to answer for his default ; and is further endeavoring to take advantage of the Town and Committee, in an insulting and impudent manner, by threatening to commence divers law-suits against them for their proceedings against him and his estate as before expressed.

“ And whereas this town in a particular manner has had the hard fortune to suffer greatly by being infested with villains of this kind, beyond what has been undergone by many towns in this State, it must give your petitioners great uneasiness to see one which we think in no case ought to have the advantage of law suffered to disturb the town, and, if it were in his power, involve the whole land in ruin and misery. Your petitioners therefore humbly pray the Honorable Court would take the matter into their wise consideration, and point out some effectual method to bring the matter to a speedy issue. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray. Dated at Hardwick, the 18th of February 1778.

“Signed per order, WILLIAM PAIGE, Chairman” (of the Committee of Correspondence.)¹

June 3, 1778. “In the House of Representatives, on a petition of the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence of the town of Hardwick, setting forth that Jonathan Danforth of said Hardwick hath conducted in an inimical manner towards this and the other United States, &c., and has commenced two actions at law, one against Timothy Paige, the other against Thomas Robinson, both of said town, which actions are to be tried at the next Inferior Court of Common Pleas to be holden at Worcester on the second Tuesday of June instant: Resolved, that the petitioners serve Jonathan Danforth of Hardwick with a copy of their petition and the order thereon, that cause may be shewn, if any there be, on the second Tuesday of the next setting of the General Court, wherefore the prayer of said petition should not be granted; and notice be given to said Danforth fourteen days at least before the second Tuesday aforesaid; and that all processes brought against the inhabitants of said Hardwick by said Danforth be stayed in the meantime. In Council. Read and concurred. Consented to by fifteen of the Council.”²

At the time appointed, the following depositions (and several others) were presented, and are still preserved; the first, here inserted, was dated September 26, 1778, and taken by Paul Mandell, Esq.; the others were taken at the house of Eliakim Spooner in Hardwick, September 14, 1778, by John Mason, Esq., of Barre.

“I, Uriah Higgins, of Hardwick, of lawful age, testify and say, that, in the month of December 1775, I was at Albany, and see Jonathan Danforth of said Hardwick purchase about half a barrel of Bohea Tea, which he brought to Hardwick for sale, as I took it.

“ I, Gamaliel Collings, of Hardwick, yeoman, of lawful age, doth testify and saith, that at Worcester, in the year 1776, at the Inferior Court held there, I was in company with Deac. William Paige of Hardwick, one of the Committee of Correspondence, [who] had Jonathan Danforth of said town in possession as a suspected person of treason against these States. Deacon William Paige not knowing what method to commit said Danforth, and said Paige asking Judge Moses Gill in what manner he should proceed with said Danforth, the said Judge Gill replying that the Committee had authority to commit to goal any person that the Committee should think was an enemy to their country. Further saith not. GAMALIEL COLLINGS.

“ Question put by the Committee to said Collings : Did Judge Baker give any advice respecting said Danforth ? Answer : Yes ; after said Danforth was committed to goal, I heard Judge Baker say that there had not been much law in the land, only the law of the Committees, and that the Committees had a right to commit any person for treason, till further order of the Court.”¹

“ I, Jonathan Warner of Hardwick, being of lawful age, testify and say, that, agreeable to a Resolve of the Provincial Congress directing the several towns to call on their constables for the outstanding moneys in their hands, Jonathan Danforth being one of the constables, said Danforth being at my house, the question being asked him where he would pay the money he had in his hands, his answer was, he would not pay the money to Hardwick or their Committee ; he was not accountable to them for said money ; he either would see them damned first, or he would be damned before he would pay the money ; and said, I swear, before I will pay the money to Henry Gardner, Esq., he would pay the money to Harrison Gray. In May 1775, after the Battle of Lexington, the people of Hardwick met for the purpose of raising men ; said Danforth, instead of appearing with his arms like a good soldier, he rode his horse round the companies in an insulting manner. And further saith not. JONATHAN WARNER.”²

“ I, Thomas Robinson of Hardwick in the County of Worcester, of lawful age, testify and say, that in the month of November, 1774, being one of the Committee of the town of Hardwick appointed to examine the constables concerning what public monies they had not paid in, Jonathan Danforth, being one of the constables, refused to give any account to said Committee, which refusal he repeated in public town-meeting ; upon which, being told by the deponent that he must account for the monies as required, or he should be given up to the people, he replied, 'damn you all.'¹ In the spring of the year 1775, the whole militia being together, consisting of divers companies, the said Danforth, instead of bearing arms, rode amongst us, to the no small disturbance of the companies. Further saith not.

“THOMAS ROBINSON.

“Quest. put by said Danforth to said Robinson, whether the riding of said Danforth in the spring of the year 1775, among the militia was before the Lexington Battle? Ans. Yea.”²

“We, Elijah Warner and Denison Robinson, both of Hardwick, being of lawful age, testify and say, that in the month of February 1775, or thereabouts, being in Boston in company with Daniel Warner, each of us having a team, the above named Daniel Warner was arrested by Harrison Gray, Esq., and, as we understand, in consequence of Jonathan Danforth returning the Province Warrant after the said Daniel Warner had given his receipt thereon to said Danforth in behalf of the town; the said Danforth having been previously compelled by said town to pay the outstanding money in his hands to Henry Gardner, Esq., or give security to the town for the same, as directed by [the] Provincial Congress. And further saith not.

“Quest. put by the Committee to the above named persons: How did you know that Daniel Warner was arrested on the receipt on the Province Warrant? Ans. ¹ Perhaps this was the time when some individuals attempted to seize Mr. Danforth as he left the meeting-house. Instead of then “giving him up to the people,” Mr. Robinson caught him by the shoulder and conducted him to the pound, which then stood on the westerly side of the Common. He then addressed the multitude, endeavoring to persuade them to disperse quietly; and at length assured them, that however much he disapproved the offending individual's conduct, he would not see him abused, but would defend him to the last extremity.

Being a man of giant form and strength, and known to be fearless and resolute, no one cared to attack him; and he succeeded at last in conveying his charge to a place of greater security, and finally to his home in safety. Mr. Danforth told me in his old age, that he verily believed he should have been killed at that time, if Mr. Robinson had not protected him. This was probably the nearest approach to the execution of “lynch-law,” which occurred in this town during that period of high excitement.

"I, Stephen Gorham, of Hardwick in the County of Worcester, of lawful age, testify and say, that, in the Fall of the year A. Dom. 1774, after Jonathan Danforth was dismissed from being a minute-man, he asked me if I was going to take up arms against King George. I told him, yea, if he was going to fight against me. Then said Danforth said, we should be all styled Rebels, and often repeated it. And further saith not. STEPHEN GORHAM."²

"I, Ebenezer Lawrence, Jr., of Hardwick in the County of Worcester, of lawful age, testify and say, in the year 1775, in conversation about Bunker Hill Fight, he told me they would have Cambridge within a month; and said Danforth told me, that if I was you, I would not stir one step to help; and said Danforth advised me to stay at home about my business. Furthermore saith not. EBENEZER LAWRENCE, JR."³

"I, Job Dexter, of Hardwick in the County of Worcester, being of lawful age, testify and say, that at a certain time, 1776, as I was in conversation with Jonathan Danforth of said Hardwick, and discoursing about secreting the estate of Richard Ruggles, he said he was a damned fool for discovering to the Committee where any thing of the said Richard Ruggles' estate was; for they had no more business with it than the Devil had. And further saith not. JOB DEXTER."⁴

"I, James Paige, of Hardwick, of lawful age, testify and say, having in May, 1776, a considerable discourse with Jonathan Danforth, he God-damned the Committee, and the Selectmen, and the whole town, repeatedly. And further saith not.

"JAMES PAIGE.

"Quest. put by said Danforth to said Paige: Did not you tell me that the Committee would have my estate, if I did not behave better? Ans. I do not remember it now. Quest. Was I in a passion when I discoursed with you? Ans. Yes. Quest. Did you ever hear me say any thing against any authority except in the town of Hardwick? Ans. No."⁵

General Court, on the 9th of October, 1778, entered their decision on record:—

“In the House of Representatives. Whereas it appears to this Court that Jonathan Danforth, late of Hardwick (now of Barre), since September, 1774, from time to time hath behaved in a very insolent and abusive manner towards the said town of Hardwick, and especially towards the Committee of said town, in their executing the duties of office, particularly in his unreasonable turbulent obstinacy in accounting for public monies in his hands, when properly called thereto; his endeavoring to conceal the goods and effects of persons fled to the enemy; his discouraging and insulting speeches and behavior to and among the good people of said town, when pursuing the orders of government, &c.; which line of conduct he continued till about July, 1776, when he, in a sudden and secret manner absconded, having first secretly conveyed away his most valuable effects; all which gave the strongest presumptive evidence that he was actually fled to the enemy, with others, his friends, that was known to be gone thither. Under these circumstances the Committee of said town proceeded agreeable to the Resolves of the General Court, and in behalf of the Government took possession of his estates that could be found, as a Refugee’s estate. That, in about four or five months after, said Danforth returned; and without applying to this Court for restoring his estates, taken as aforesaid, is harassing said Committee with expensive and perplexing law-suits, and is threatening to bring many more, not only to their damage, but also to the disturbance of the good and liege people of this State. Wherefore it is become absolutely necessary for this Court to interpose in this matter:

“Therefore, Resolved, that the two actions brought by the said Jonathan Danforth, one against Timothy Paige, for replevying a quantity of tea, the other against Thomas Robinson, for the recovering of a certain house, claimed by said Danforth, which are mentioned in the petition of the Selectmen and Committee of the said town of Hardwick, addressed to this Court, and are now pending in the Inferior Court of Common Pleas for the county of Worcester, shall be, and they are hereby, declared utterly null and void; and all further proceedings thereon shall cease forever; and that the said Danforth shall be, and he hereby is, utterly disqualified and disabled forever from bringing any other action or actions against said Committee, or either of them, or any other person, either in his own name, or in the name of any other in his behalf, for the recovery of damages done or supposed to be done in consequence of the proceedings of said Committee or town of Hardwick, dealing with him, the said Danforth, as a person inimical to the common cause, without leave first had and obtained from the General Court. And whereas it doth not appear to this Court that the said Danforth has been guilty of actually joining our unnatural enemies, or giving information to or supplying them, but rather the contrary is supposed: therefore, Resolved, that the said Committee be, and they hereby are, directed and ordered to acquit and release to the said Danforth all the estate by them taken as the estate of said Danforth, the inventory whereof is lodged in the Secretary's office. In Council, Read and concurred. Consented to by fifteen of the Council." ¹

This decision rendered substantial justice to both parties: it justified the Committee, and protected them from further annoyance or harm; on the other hand, while Mr. Danforth was held to have deserved what he had already suffered, in consequence of his intemperate and exasperating opposition to the patriotic movement, yet as he had not actually held correspondence with the enemy, nor been guilty of any treasonable act, his liberty and property were restored. He soon returned from Barre, and for nearly half a century resided here in quietness and tranquillity, performing faithfully the duties of a good and loyal citizen, and enjoying the confidence and esteem of his townsmen. Yet he never entirely forgot his early conflicts. A characteristic story was related of him by his pastor, the Rev. John Goldsbury. In 1831, when he was eighty-eight years old, Colonel Stephen Rice, a member of the Revolutionary Committee of Correspondence, died, at the age of ninety-five. Soon afterwards, Mr. Goldsbury called on Mr. Danforth, who recounted some of his early trials and sufferings. Among other grievances, he said the Committee of Correspondence prohibited him from leaving his own farm, except to go to meeting on Sundays, and to attend funerals. "One day," said he, "a member of the Committee informed me there was to be a funeral, and inquired whether I wished to be present; I told him I always liked to go to funerals, and I hoped I might live to attend the funerals of the whole Committee; and I have done it; I have seen every divil of them under ground; Rice was the last of them."

CHAPTER VIII.

CIVIL HISTORY.

Declaration of Independence recorded by the Town Clerk. — Paper Money. — Heavy Taxes. — Financial Distress. — Stay Law. — Scale of Prices. — Abortive Attempts to make Paper equal with Gold. — Protest against a proposed Bill for refunding the Public Debt. — Scale of Depreciation. — The Town approves the Articles of Confederation of the United States, and almost unanimously rejects a Form of Constitution proposed by the General Court. — Eccentricities of the Town Clerk. — Delegates elected to a Constitutional Convention. — The proposed Constitution accepted, but various Important Amendments suggested. — Subsequent Constitutional Conventions.

SOON after the Declaration of Independence was adopted on the memorable 4th of July, 1776, the Town Clerk entered a full copy on the Town Records, "to remain as a perpetual memorial thereof." Thenceforth all professions of loyalty to the King, and desire for an amicable agreement between Great Britain and her colonies disappear from the Records. The last recorded warrant, "in his Majesty's name," bears date February 25, 1775; no warrants for the town-meetings, held April 24, July 5, and September 28, of that year, are recorded. The warrants, dated May 15, 1775, and February 14, 1776, required the constable to warn the inhabitants "agreeable to the Constitution," that is, the charter, which was frequently so designated; and that which was dated September 26, 1776, demanded the same service "agreeable to the government and people of this State." This is the earliest instance of such use of the word "State," which I have discovered on the Town Records. From this time the town promptly and energetically bore its full share of the burdens assumed by the State, in the maintenance of national independence.

To defray the enormous expenses of the war, paper money was issued by the several States and by the United States, which soon depreciated in value, and which ultimately became valueless, and was utterly repudiated. Heavy taxes were imposed by the State, and burdensome debts assumed by the towns in addition to the large sums raised by local taxation. General distress followed, such as, a few years later, resulted in open rebellion. As early as 1776, "the people were so pressed with public claims, that they were unable to meet private demands. Laws were made for their relief by suspending legal processes for the collection of debts. The paper money depreciated; and the soldiers and their families suffered much by it. A committee was appointed to meet others from Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New Hampshire, to adopt measures for preventing the depreciation of the bills, and a spirit of monopoly and speculation which prevailed, the committees had two meetings, but it was found impossible to remedy the evil."¹ Again, in March, 1777, it is said, "the expenses and debts of the State were such, at this period, as to require another large emission of paper, and a tax of £100,000. The amount of bills was £125,000; but these depreciated as soon as issued, and the taxes were not easily collected. This was a time of very great distress and suffering."² Among the "measures for preventing the depreciation of the bills" was one which had many times before been unsuccessfully adopted; namely, definite prices were fixed for various kinds of labor and merchandise, with the hope that by such uniform prices the uniform purchasing value of the bills might be maintained. The scale of prices prescribed in Hardwick was very minute, and may seem tedious; yet it is not without interest, as exhibiting the various articles of traffic and consumption, at that period, and their relative value. It seems to have been adopted not long before March 17, 1777, on which day the town granted nine shillings each to Thomas Robinson and John Bradish, "for setting prices on articles in this town."

"At a meeting of the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence for the town of Hardwick, agreeable to an Act of the Great and General Court respecting the stating and affixing prices upon labor, victualling, clothing, and other articles hereafter enumerated:

Notwithstanding this effort to sustain it, the value of paper money continued to depreciate, and larger sums were required in exchange for labor and for the necessaries of life.¹ A law was subsequently enacted, imposing a heavy penalty on any person who should demand or receive a higher price in bills of credit than in gold or silver for his merchandise; but this measure was equally unsuccessful. Before proceeding to this extremity, however, the General Court, on the 13th of October, 1777, passed "An Act for drawing in the bills of credit of the several denominations, not on interest, which have at any time been issued by this Government, and are still outstanding, and for prohibiting the currency of said bills and the bills of any one of the United States after a certain time.

"Whereas, many inconveniences have arisen from the frequent and large sums of money and the various kinds, emitted for carrying on the present war, and it has become necessary for the welfare of this State that the whole sum, not on interest, now outstanding in bills of credit emitted by this State, small change of less than a dollar only excepted, should be called in and sunk, by exchanging them for Treasurer's notes for sums not less than ten pounds, on interest, to be paid annually, at the rate of six per cent per annum.

"Be it therefore enacted by the Council and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the Treasurer of the State be and hereby is authorized and empowered to receive into the public Treasury the whole and every part and parcel of the bills of public credit emitted by this State, not on interest, (small change, less than a dollar only excepted), and in lieu thereof to give to the possessor or possessors his note or obligation for any sum not less than ten pounds, until he shall have exchanged or redeemed the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand pounds, in the form following," [namely, a note, payable March 1, 1781], "and for the remaining sum now outstanding as aforesaid, his note or obligation, in the form following," [namely, a note payable March 1, 1782. Provision was made for the payment of these notes by taxes to be reasonably assessed.]

"And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the possessor and possessors of the bills of public credit of this State are hereby called upon and directed to bring the same to the Treasurer on or before the first day of January, 1778, from whom they shall be entitled to receive in exchange for all such bills, so delivered in, a Treasurer's note as aforesaid, for any sum not less than ten pounds, upon interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, which interest shall be paid annually.

"And for the more speedy accomplishing the good intentions of this Act, and preventing the evils arising from large emissions of various kinds of bills, — Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the possessor or possessors of said bills shall neglect to offer the same to be exchanged by the said first day of January, 1778, all right or claim to the redemption or exchange of said bills shall cease and determine.

"And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons within this State shall offer to pass, after the first day of December next, in any kind of payment whatsoever, any of the bills of public credit emitted by this or any of the United States, except bills on interest emitted by this State, and such as are under the denomination of one dollar, every person so offering or passing any such bill shall forfeit and pay for each offence the sum of five pounds," etc. Provision was made for extension of time to constables, or collectors of taxes, and to soldiers serving in the army.¹

This method of funding the public debt, strongly resembling a forced loan, and withdrawing suddenly nearly the entire currency of the country, drew from the inhabitants of Hardwick almost the only protest to be found on their Records against the proceedings of the General Court, during the Revolutionary period. At a town-meeting, November 24, 1777, a committee, consisting of Joseph Allen, William Paige, and David Allen, reported a remonstrance, which was adopted:—

“State of Massachusetts Bay. To the honorable the Council and House of Representatives in General Court assembled. A remonstrance and petition of the town of Hardwick, regularly assembled. Taking into consideration the late Act made for calling in all the bills of public credit of this State not on interest, so sudden, and putting them on interest (excepting those that are under a dollar), this town look upon said Act to be attended with many grievances, considering the circumstances of the public affairs at this day, which necessarily raises the public charges exceeding high, had there been no vile oppressors risen up, whose covetous and sordid measures have almost doubled the same, by which multitudes of the poorer sort of people have been and will be reduced to poverty. (1.) To us it appears the manner of calling in said bills puts another great advantage into the hands of men, who of all others should be guarded against; for these very men have taken advantage of the times, and engrossed by cruel oppression great estates, and many of them from little or nothing; and instead of suffering by this sore expensive war, rise upon the ruins of their fellow-men. (2.) It appears to us very extraordinary, when the bills are emitted for various sums, promising to receive them into the treasury for the sums specified, and now declare they will not receive them, unless to the amount of ten pounds. Where then is the public faith? (3.) We look upon it cruel and oppressive, when compared with former acts which made the money a lawful tender till the last instant, and the next day a fine to offer it; and the possessor who is then obliged to take it is exposed to have it die in his hands. Therefore, for these and other reasons which may be given, we see no way how the greater part of the poorer sort of people will ever be able to pay their public charges. We well remember what cruel and oppressive acts has been endeavored to be enforced on the good people of these United States, by the King and Parliament of Great Britain; but we hope and trust we never shall be oppressed in like kind by our own Legislature. Therefore we bear our testimony against said Act, and desire a speedy repeal thereof. As in duty bound shall ever pray.”

Similar remonstrances from other towns were presented; and the General Court yielded so far to the public demand as to postpone the time at which bills of credit should be repudiated, if not offered in exchange for treasury notes, to April 1, and again to June 1, and a third time to December 1, 1778.¹ Still, the value of paper-money continued to depreciate. Once more an effort was made to check the evil, by a general establishment of prices. A convention for that purpose assembled at Concord in October, 1779, at which Timothy Paige was a delegate from Hardwick. A scale of prices was adopted, and the people were exhorted to conform to it in all their pecuniary transactions. But this experiment, like all others of the kind, proved ineffectual; all whose income was a fixed sum, like the clergy, and the officers and soldiers in the army, suffered severely; and the whole community shared in the suffering. No man knew, when he received paper-money, whether he could dispose of it at half its present rate. It depreciated so rapidly² that it was almost impossible for even the imagination to keep pace with it. Some idea of the magnitude of this evil may be formed from a vote of the town, July 28, 1780: "Voted, to give to each soldier, one thousand pounds, which is esteemed equal to twelve pounds in silver money." One dollar in silver was equal in value to eighty-three dollars and thirty-three cents in paper.

During this period of sore financial distress, in addition to the unavoidable anxieties and calamities of war, an attempt was made to establish a firm and stable government, in place of that which had been violently overturned. The delegates of the several colonies agreed on articles of confederation and union, the more effectually to protect themselves against the common enemy, and submitted the same to their constituents for approval. At a town-meeting, January 12, 1778, "after reading the Articles of Confederation and perpetual Union of the United States of America, the town voted, unanimously, to give their Representatives of the Great and General Court instructions to vote to confirm the same."

At about the same time the General Court resolved itself into a Constitutional Convention, and prepared a Constitution for Massachusetts; this, however, did not meet the popular approval, but was rejected by a decisive vote. In this town, the inhabitants met, April 6, 1778, "to hear a Constitution and Form of Government read, for the State of Massachusetts Bay, agreed upon by the Convention of the State, Feb. 28, 1778, to be laid before the several towns and plantations in said State for their approbation or disapprobation." At an adjournment of this meeting, April 20, 1778, the proposed Constitution was referred to a committee, and it was "voted to adjourn this meeting to Monday the 11th day of May next at 2 o'clock afternoon, and met accordingly, and proceeded as follows. (1.) Accepted the report of the committee by a great majority. (2.) A motion was made to have the whole Constitution put to vote, all at a lump; ¹ it was accordingly done, and passed in the negative. (3.) Voted, that the report of the Committee should be sent to the General Assembly by the Town Clerk. N^o of voters at said meeting, 156; N^o of voters for said Constitution, 16; N^o of voters against it, 140."

This first effort having failed, the General Court passed a Resolve, February 19, 1779, requiring the several towns to determine "whether they choose, at this time, to have a new Constitution or form of Government made," and "whether they will empower their Representatives for the next year to vote for the calling a State Convention, for the sole purpose of forming a new Constitution." At a town-meeting, May 11, 1779, to act on these questions, the record is, "N^o of voters at said meeting 81, and all voted in the affirmative." A large majority of voters in the State expressed the same desire, and the General Court directed that delegates should be elected in the several towns to meet in Convention. This town elected William Paige, Jonathan Warner, and John Hastings. The Convention met at Cambridge, September 1, 1779, and continued in session, by several adjournments, until March 2, 1780, when having agreed on a Constitution, it was "Resolved that this Convention be adjourned to the first Wednesday in June next, to meet at Boston." It was ordered that printed "copies of the Form of Government" be sent to every town and plantation, and "if the major part of the inhabitants of the said towns and plantations disapprove of any particular part of the same, that they be desired to state their objections distinctly, and the reasons therefor." The selectmen were requested to make return of the result on the first Wednesday in June; and it was "Resolved, that the towns and plantations through this State have a right to choose other delegates, instead of the present members, to meet in Convention on the first Wednesday in June next, if they see fit."¹ The Convention re-assembled June 7, 1780, and remained in session until the 16th of the same month, when it was finally dissolved.

. . . and to make report to the town as soon as may be, for their acceptance." On the next day, "the above committee laid before the town a scandalous petition, and it was put to vote to see if the town would accept of said petition, and it passed in the negative." To this record the clerk added a marginal note: "a ridiculous article in the warrant, that cost the town a whole day to act upon it." Other specimens of Mr. Washburn's official humor may be found under dates of June 14, 1780, and March 5, 1787.

The town held four meetings, May 1, 8, 22, and 25, 1780, to act on the proposed Constitution. At the second meeting, it was "voted that there be no Governor appointed, by a majority of 27 against 15." At the third meeting, it was "voted, that if there be a Governor, that he be of the Christian Protestant Religion," instead of "the Christian Religion." At the fourth meeting, a committee, consisting of Joseph Allen, William Paige, Aaron Barlow, Thomas Robinson, and John Sellon, submitted a report, embracing several amendments to objectionable articles, with the reasons therefor; which report, with the proposed amendments, was accepted by a vote of 40 against 2. Some of the objections and amendments were as follows:—

"In the Bill of Rights, Article I, page 7, objected to and amended: it reads thus, — 'All men are born free and equal, &c., amended, — 'All men, whites and blacks, are born free and equal,' &c.; Reason: lest it should be misconstrued hereafter, in such a manner as to exclude blacks."² Article III. "Voted, That a person that does not attend the public worship of God at any place ought not to be taxed in the place where he lives. Every other article in the Declaration of Rights approved."

Article 1, page 15, objected to, because the two branches have a negative on each other; whereas it ought to be but for a given time, and at the expiration of said time, if non-agreed, that both houses meet, and by a majority decide the controversy."

"Article 2, objected to, because the majority of the court can't make a law, without being exposed to a negative by the Governor."

The qualification of voters was objected to, "because every male, being twenty-one years of age, must have an annual income of three pounds, or an estate worth sixty pounds, to be qualified to vote for a senator. Reason: That every male, being twenty-one years of age, ought to vote in all cases."

The mode of filling vacancies in the senate objected to: "Reason: The persons having the highest number of votes in the District ought to be the men."

The office of Governor was disapproved: "Provided, nevertheless, that if the inhabitants of this State shall see meet to choose a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and Council, they should by no means have power over the militia; but the militia shall be under the order and direction of the General Court; and that they or either of them shall not prorogue, adjourn, nor dissolve the General Court without their request; and that they by no means appoint any officers, either civil, judicial, or military."

It was further recommended by the committee, and the town voted its approval, to wit: —

"That the power of pardon always be in the hands of the Legislature:

"That the Justices of the Superior Court be appointed by the General Court:

"That the Justices of the Inferior Court be chosen by the people of their county, as the Registers now are:

"That all Justices of the Peace shall be chosen annually by the people in each town in which they dwell, by ballot:

"That the Register of Deeds for each town in this State be annually chosen by ballot:

"That the Judges of Probate for each town in this State be annually chosen by the people of each town, by ballot, to serve in that town only: ¹

¹ June 5, 1780. The town proposed a different amendment, "that each county should be divided into proper districts . . . because some counties are so large that by

“ That the captains and subalterns of the militia shall be elected by written votes of the alarm list and training band of their respective companies, of twenty-one years of age and upwards :

“ That the colonels and majors be chosen by their respective regiments, the brigadiers and brigade majors by their respective brigades, the adjutants and quarter-masters by their respective regiments, by ballot.”

Acting upon the suggestion of the Convention before mentioned, the town now “ voted to dismiss the former delegates to the Convention, and dismissed them accordingly ; and voted to choose one man to attend said Convention on the first Wednesday in June next, to be held in Boston, and made choice of Deac. William Paige for said delegate.”¹

Some of these proposed amendments were subsequently adopted, — such as universal suffrage, and election by plurality of votes. In the Declaration of Rights, the first article was interpreted to secure the freedom of the “ blacks ” in this State, nearly a century before universal emancipation resulted from a desperate attempt to extend and perpetuate the institution of slavery ; and the proposed amendment of the Third Article was adopted in 1833, since which time the maintenance of public worship has been voluntary, not compulsory. So far, the inhabitants of Hardwick were somewhat in advance of the age. In some other respects, they exhibited that excessive love of liberty which is unwilling to submit to any restraint, or to give the government sufficient power to execute its proper functions. The same spirit was manifested by a majority of the people here, as in almost all the towns in the western counties of the State, during the stormy period which followed ; and in 1788 it nearly prevented the adoption by Massachusetts of the Constitution of the United States, because it was supposed to invest the general government with too much power.²

reason of time and cost in travelling and attendance in the settling of estates, widows and orphans are put to great expense which might be lessened by the proposed amendment.”

² The town voted, August 21, 1820, “ that it was expedient that Delegates should be chosen to meet in Convention for the purpose of revising or altering the Constitution of government of this Commonwealth ; ” and on the 16th of the following October, Timothy Paige, Esq., and Dr. Joseph Stone were elected delegates. Four unsuccessful ballots were taken March 7, 1853, for the election of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention which met in that year, and the town was not represented therein.

CHAPTER IX.

CIVIL HISTORY.

The Shays Insurrection. — Public and Private Debts Excessive. — Debtors become Desperate, and forcibly resist Payment. — Demagogues stimulate the Popular Discontent, which results in Open Rebellion. — The Town proposes a Convention at Worcester in 1782, and elects Delegates. — Conventions in 1786. — Grievances. — General Warner discharges one of his Aids, on Suspicion of Disloyalty: he promptly responds to the Governor's Order for the Protection of the Courts at Worcester, but is unable to rally a Sufficient Force. — The Courts prevented from sitting at Worcester and Springfield in September and again in December. — Troops raised by Enlistment. — Hardwick Company. — Attack on the Arsenal at Springfield. — Defeat of Shays: he is pursued by Lincoln, in a Terrible Night's March from Hadley to Petersham, where the Insurgents are utterly routed. — Oath of Allegiance taken by many Hardwick Men. — Some of the More Active Partisans abscond. — One of the Most Prominent is arrested, convicted of Treason, and sentenced to be hung; but is fully pardoned, and receives Tokens of Public Approbation. — Other Pardons. — The Shays Cause Popular, having a Majority in Hardwick, and generally throughout the Western Counties; even in the House of Representatives a Majority favor it. — Its Advocates afterwards become Good Citizens, but never Friendly to a Strong Government.

THE Constitution was adopted by the requisite majority of citizens, but this did not relieve their financial distress; on the contrary, it was aggravated by the legal machinery thus provided to enforce the payment of public and private debts which had long been held in abeyance. The result was a forcible resistance to the constituted government, which, from the name of a prominent leader, was called the "Shays Insurrection," or "Rebellion." Its immediate cause is succinctly stated by its historian: —

"The citizens were then left free indeed, and in full possession of the valuable objects which they had fought to obtain. But the price of those objects was high, and could not but be attended with the usual consequences of great exertions, when founded on the anticipation of public resources. Their private state debt, when consolidated, amounted to upwards of 1,300,000£., besides 250,000£., due to the officers and soldiers in their line of the army. Their proportion of the federal debt was not less, by a moderate computation, than one million and a half of the same money.¹ And in addition to this, every town was embarrassed by advances which they had made, to comply with repeated requisitions for men and supplies to support the army, and which had been done upon their own particular credit. The weight of this burden must strike us in a strong point of view, if we compare it with the debt before the war, which fell short of 100,000 £., and with still more force, perhaps, if we consider that by the customary mode of taxation, one third part of the whole was to be paid by the ratable polls alone, which but little exceeded ninety thousand.² True it is, that a recollection of the blessings which this debt had purchased must have operated, in the minds of a magnanimous people, to alleviate every inconvenience arising from such a cause; but embarrassments followed which no considerations of that nature could be expected to obviate.”³

In this emergency, the people very naturally resorted to those agencies which proved so effectual in the Revolutionary period, — town-meetings, namely, and county conventions. These assemblies, like those of the former period, found more and more grievances as they sought relief from the principal burden. The government removed some of these alleged grievances by legislative enactment, and uniformly manifested a forbearing and forgiving spirit. The public discontent, nevertheless, increased, being fomented and stimulated by political demagogues, until it culminated in absolute rebellion and resort to arms. After the rebellion was overpowered by superior military force, some of the persons who had been actively engaged in the field became fugitives from justice, and fled from the State; the large majority of them received a full pardon, on surrendering their arms and taking the oath of allegiance; a small number were fined, or imprisoned, or both; and a few of the leaders were convicted of treason and sentenced to be hung, but not one of the number was executed for the crime of treason only. I do not propose to recite all the details of this unhappy conflict; but some of the

² The whole was more than a hundred and thirteen dollars for each tax-payer, and one third was almost forty dollars for each ratable poll. In addition to this enormous public debt, a large portion of the people were hopelessly indebted to their fellow-citizens, who were becoming clamorous for payment and attempting to enforce it by legal process, involving heavy costs.

³ Minot's Hist. of Insurrections, etc., pp. 5, 6.

events, in which this town or its individual inhabitants had an active agency, should be mentioned.

The first trace of opposition to the due course of law, which appears on our records, is found under date of January 8, 1782, when, upon petition of sundry persons "with regard to the numerous law-suits that are or may be commenced,¹ — fearing that the dangerous consequences thereof, unless some measures be speedily adopted to prevent it, will reduce us to poverty and distress," the town "Voted to address the General Assembly on the subject," and chose William Paige, Ebenezer Washburn, and Daniel Warner, to prepare the address. Two months later, what seems to be the initial movement for a county convention had its origin here, to wit: The town met March 4, 1782, under a warrant "to take into consideration a petition which is as follows: the petitioners taking into consideration our public affairs, and the great demands from the public for money by taxation, and the multiplicity of law-suits, and a scarcity of money, which renders it entirely out of the power of the good people of this State to comply with the above demands, they therefore desire that a town-meeting be called, to consider the articles following: 1. To see if the town will choose a committee, to write circular letters to other towns in the county of Worcester, to meet in convention, in the town of Worcester, at the house of Mr. Brown, innholder in said Worcester, and choose a member or members for said convention. 2. To see if the town will petition the General Court for a redress of grievances." The town "voted to choose a committee to write circular letters to the other towns in this county, agreeable to the warrant, and made choice of Ichabod Dexter, Col. Winslow,² and David Allen, for said committee. Voted to adjourn to the 18th of March, at one o'clock afternoon, and then met and chose Capt. Ichabod Dexter, Capt. Daniel Egery, and Nathaniel Haskell, members to meet in convention at Worcester on the second Tuesday of April next."

Apparently in response to this invitation, "on the 14th of April of that year, the delegates of twenty-six towns of the county assembled in convention, and attributing the prevailing dissatisfaction of the people to want of confidence in the disbursement of the great sums of money annually assessed, recommended instructions to the representatives to require immediate settlement with all public officers entrusted with the funds of the Commonwealth; and if the adjustment was delayed or refused, to withdraw from the General Court and return to their constituents; to reduce the compensation of the members of the House, and the fees of lawyers; to procure sessions of the Court of Probate in different places in the County; the revival of confessions of debt; enlargement of the jurisdiction of justices of the peace to £20; contribution to the support of the continental army in specific articles instead of money; and the settlement of accounts between the Commonwealth and Congress. At an adjourned session, May 14, they further recommended, that account of the public expenditures should be annually rendered to the towns; the removal of the General Court from Boston; separation of the business of the Common Pleas and Sessions, and inquiry into the grants of lands in Maine in favor of Alexander Shepherd and others."¹ The convention then adjourned until August; and July 1, 1782, on the question "whether the town will join any further in the county convention, which now stands adjourned in the town of Worcester," it was "voted that they look upon it expedient that they join further in the abovesaid county convention." At the appointed time, however, very few delegates assembled, and the convention was dissolved without further action.

The measures adopted by the General Court produced temporary quiet. No further disturbance occurred in this county for nearly four years, except that a convention met in 1784, at the request of the town of Sutton, in which, however, it does not appear that Hardwick was represented. This convention was comparatively orderly, but prepared a formidable list of grievances, in the form of a petition to the General Court. Early in 1786 the agitation was recommenced, with additional energy. The first concerted action of this town, which appears on the record, bears date January 25, 1786. Under a warrant "to see if the town will give their Representative some instructions with regard to the present difficulty that the inhabitants of the Commonwealth labor under, for the want of a circulating medium, that he use his influence in the General Court that some mode might be adopted for their relief," it was "Voted, to instruct their Representative to use his influence in the General Court to have a Bank of Paper emitted, and chose a committee for that purpose, viz., Capt. John Hastings, Capt. Ichabod Dexter, David Allen, Thomas Wheeler, and Deac. William Paige.”

“The want of a circulating medium,” or the lack of money, for the payment of debts and taxes, was the most pressing burden which then rested on the people; and how to remove it was the problem to be solved. Hardwick recommended the issue of paper money by the government. Other towns expressed the same desire. Resort was had to county conventions, by which the list of grievances was rapidly enlarged, and the measures proposed for relief were multiplied. The historian of the Insurrection selects one of those conventions, as presenting probably a more full statement of the whole difficulty than is elsewhere to be found:—

“At a meeting of delegates from fifty towns in the county of Hampshire, in convention held at Hatfield in said county, on Tuesday the 22^d day of August instant [1786], and continued by adjournments to the twenty-fifth, &c. Voted, that this meeting is constitutional. The convention from a thorough conviction of great uneasiness subsisting among the people of this county and Commonwealth, then went into an inquiry for the cause; and, upon mature consideration, deliberation, and debate, were of opinion that many grievances and unnecessary burdens, now lying upon the people, are the sources of that discontent so evidently discoverable throughout this Commonwealth. Among which the following articles were voted as such, viz. (1.) The existence of the Senate. (2.) The present mode of representation. (3.) The officers of government not being annually dependent on the representatives of the people, in General Court assembled, for their salaries. (4.) All the civil officers of government not being annually elected by the representatives of the people in General Court assembled. (5.) The existence of the Courts of Common Pleas and General Sessions of the Peace. (6.) The fee table, as it now stands. (7.) The present mode of appropriating the impost and excise. (8.) The unreasonable grants made to some of the officers of government. (9.) The supplementary aid. (10.) The present mode of paying the governmental securities. (11.) The present mode adopted for the payment and speedy collection of the last tax. (12.) The present mode of taxation, as it operates unequally between the polls and estates, and between landed and mercantile interests. (13.) The present method of practice of the attornies at law. (14.)

The want of a sufficient medium of trade, to remedy the mischiefs arising from the scarcity of money. (15.) The General Court sitting in the town of Boston. (16.) The present embarrassments on the press. (17.) The neglect of the settlement of important matters depending between the Commonwealth and Congress, relating to monies and averages. (18.) Voted, that this convention recommend to the several towns in this county, that they instruct their representatives to use their influence in the next General Court to have emitted a bank of paper money, subject to a depreciation; ¹ making it a tender in all payments, equal to silver and gold, to be issued in order to call in the Commonwealth's securities. (19.) Voted, that whereas several of the above articles of grievances arise from defects in the constitution, therefore a revision of the same ought to take place. (20.) Voted, that it be recommended by this convention to the several towns in this county, that they petition the Governor to call the General Court immediately together, in order that the other grievances complained of may by the legislature be redressed. (21.) Voted, that this convention recommend it to the inhabitants of this county, that they abstain from all mobs and unlawful assemblies until a constitutional method of redress can be obtained."² Votes were also passed directing the transmission of these proceedings to the county conventions of Worcester and Berkshire, and "to the press in Springfield for publication;" and also directing the chairman to call another county convention, if he should consider it expedient.³

One week earlier, August 15, 1786, a similar convention met in Worcester, by adjournment from the previous May, which enumerated a similar list of grievances, and further adjourned to the last Tuesday in September. I find no record that Hardwick elected a delegate to this convention; but it seems evident that one of its members was Major Martin Kinsley, an aid-de-camp of Major-General Warner; for, at a meeting, May 16, 1787, the town "voted to Mr. Kinsley for his attendance at the county culating medium" having no permanent value, is almost an hundred years old.

convention, last fall, the sum of £2. 17. 5.” Probably this indication of disloyalty to the government induced General Warner to remove him from office,¹ and to appoint in his stead Captain Artemas Howe of New Braintree, who was commissioned aid-de-camp August 28, 1786. The change was not made too soon; for within a few days the General had need of aids in whose fidelity he could implicitly confide. In anticipation of the outbreak at Worcester, he received this official order: —

“Boston, September 2^d, 1786. Sir, I have received information that the Court of Common Pleas and Court of General Sessions of the Peace have, by a large concourse of people, in a riotous and tumultuous manner, been prevented from setting at Northampton, in the county of Hampshire, on the day appointed by law for that purpose. It is possible some people, not considering the great criminality and dangerous consequences of such unwarrantable proceedings, may attempt to prevent the Court setting at Worcester on the fifth instant. It is of the utmost importance that every lawful exertion should be made by every friend to the present Constitution of Government to suppress all such riotous proceedings. You are therefore hereby directed to aid the Sheriff of the county of Worcester, if he should request it, by furnishing him with such a number of the militia belonging to your Division as he may judge sufficient to suppress any such disputation within this county, and as I have not only not had the usual formality of a court martial, but have even been kept in the secret for (I suppose) some months since his son-in-law has been commissioned, and finally have come to the knowledge of it only by common report, I take the liberty in this public manner to call upon the worthy General, and desire him, or whoever it may concern, to inform me and the public with regard to the cause or propriety of the procedure. I do not wish to trouble the public with this appeal to their impartiality on account of any particular fondness I have for holding a commission of the worthy gentleman, or any other authority; but because I conceive that any man, who has been in commission and will peaceably suffer himself to be kicked out, discovers as great a meanness as the person who attempts to do it. I am with due respect, &c., M. KINSLEY. Hardwick, Nov. 24, 1786.” Worcester Magazine, December, 1787.

¹ Three months later, Major Kinsley published an appeal to the public, of which it does not appear that General Warner took any notice whatever: — “To the impartial public. As it is a matter of public notoriety that I have lately been superseded in the office of aid-de-camp to the Hon. General Warner, without a resignation of my commission on my part, or the usual (and heretofore indispensable) formality of a Court Martial on his; and as it is now a matter of popular conversation and public dispute, whether or not it is in the power of a Major General to remove any officer who has been duly commissioned; or whether every officer, so commissioned, must not by the militia law of this Commonwealth, and by the established military custom throughout the civilized world, be officially arrested and formally tried before a regular court martial, purposely appointed, and properly authorized and empowered for that special purpose: I say, as this has got to be a matter of public

attempt; and from your well known attachment to justice, peace, and good order, I am persuaded you will exert yourself to the utmost to prevent all such riotous proceedings. You have herewith enclosed a copy of the instruction which was sent to Mr. Sheriff Greenleaf. By his Excellency's command, with the advice and consent of the Council. Major General Warner."¹

The response was prompt and loyal:—

"Hardwick, September 3^d, 1786. May it please your Excellency. I have this instant had the honor to receive your express, by which I am required to give such aid and assistance to the High Sheriff of the county of Worcester as shall be necessary to suppress any riots, or tumultuous proceedings in the people at the sitting of the Courts to be holden at Worcester on the 5th instant. Your Excellency may rest assured that every effort in my power shall on all occasions be exerted for the due regulations and support of government;—particularly on this occasion I shall use all the influence in my power to prevent and suppress any riotous and unwarrantable proceedings in the people; and I have accordingly issued orders to several of the Colonels within my Division to hold themselves in readiness in case they should be wanted, which is more than probable will be the case, as the people in general are grown very clamorous, and have not patience to wait for a regular redress of their real or supposed grievances. I am, sir, with all due respect, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant. JONATHAN WARNER.

"His Excellency, J. Bowdoin, Esq."²

This letter was soon followed by another:—

"May it please your Excellency. Agreeably to what I wrote you in my last, I exerted myself to have the militia in as good a state of readiness as was possible, for the support of government. But notwithstanding the most pressing orders for them to turn out and to appear at Worcester, equipped as the law directs, there did appear universally that reluctance in the people to turn out for the support of government as amounted in many instances to a flat denial; in others, in an evasion or delay,³ which amounted to the same thing;—that finally the insurrections of the people for the purpose of stopping the Court were not to be resisted by all the efforts of government. This statement of the affair at Worcester, however painful and disagreeable to relate, is the plain truth; and I can only leave it with the superior wisdom and discretion of your Excellency and the honorable Council to determine what shall be most expedient to be done at this unhappy crisis. I have the honor to be, with all due respects, your Excellency's most humble servant.

“JONATHAN WARNER, M. G.

The anticipated resistance to legal transactions at Worcester occurred during the first week in September. “The Courts of Common Pleas and General Sessions of the Peace being by law to be holden at Worcester, a body of insurgents to the number of 300 and upwards posted themselves at the Court-house in that place. The judges were admitted to the door, where a line of bayonets prevented their entrance. The chief justice remonstrated with the rioters on the madness of their conduct; but the court were obliged to retire to an adjacent house, where they opened agreeably to law, and adjourned to the next morning. The violence of the mob, however, soon obliged the Court of Common Pleas to adjourn without day, and the Court of Sessions to adjourn to the 21st of November following.”² The insurgents “were under the command of Capt. Adam Wheeler of Hubbardston, though, when charged with being their leader, he disclaimed both the office and the responsibility. His lieutenant was Benjamin Converse³ of Hardwick. Other principal officers were Capt. Hazeltine of Hardwick, and a Capt. Smith of Shirley. Only 100 of the men were under arms. The remainder carried bludgeons.”⁴ Benjamin Convers acted not only as lieutenant, but also as adjutant. A demand for adjournment of the Court, signed by him, has been preserved:—

“To the Hon^{ble} Court of Common Pleas and Court of General Sessions of the Peace for the county of Worcester, and to all the Justices of the Peace in said county. The Petition of the Body of People now collected for their own common good and the good of the Commonwealth, to your honors humbly showeth: That we

the command of Job Shattuck of Groton and the afore-mentioned Capt. Smith. . . . On the following day . . . they were reinforced by a company of ninety men from the counties of Hampshire and Worcester, under the command of Adam Wheeler and Benjamin Converse.”

are informed that the Body of People that were collected on the ground in Worcester yesterday did by their Committee prefer a petition to your honors, requesting the Court of Common Pleas and Court of General Sessions of the Peace to be adjourned or dissolved, and your honors by your answer to the people then collected agreed to adjourn the Court of Common Pleas; notwithstanding the people from different parts of the said county generally appearing and collected on the ground this day for the purpose aforesaid do not consent to the answer that the said Court have given, therefore by their committee of the body now collected request that your honors do adjourn the Court of General Sessions of the Peace. And as in duty bound will ever pray. Worcester, Sept. 6, 1786. The above petition signed in behalf of the Body of People now present, and request answer in 30 minutes from the time of preferring. Signed at the request of committee.

BENJⁿ CONVERS, Adjutant.”¹

The “Body of People,” having compelled the courts to adjourn, dispersed at the close of the second day, without committing essential violence to the peaceable citizens of Worcester. Their next riotous assembly in this vicinity was at Springfield on the twenty-sixth day of the same month, when they succeeded in preventing the regular session of the Superior Court. This was selected by the government, in the subsequent trials, as the first overt act of treason on the part of the insurgents; the forcible interruption of the Courts of Common Pleas and of Sessions being apparently regarded as minor offences. As John Wheeler² was convicted of treason on proof of his participation in this affair, I insert an account of it by the historian of the insurrection:—

“It was determined by the insurgents to prevent their doing business at Springfield, if possible; and the Governor, on the other hand, took measures to obviate their designs. Accordingly he ordered the Court House to be taken into possession by 600 men, under the command of Major General William Shepard. This party were well officered and equipped, and contained the most respectable characters for abilities and interest in the county of Hampshire. On the day of the Court’s sitting, the insurgents also appeared, equal if not superior in numbers, but vastly inferior in officers and arms. They were headed by one Daniel Shays, who had been a captain in the late continental army, but had resigned his command for reasons quite problematical. They were highly incensed at government's taking possession of the Court House previously to their arrival. They sent a request to the Judges, that none of the late rioters should be indicted; but received a very firm reply, purporting that the Judges should execute the laws of the country agreeably to their oaths. In the confusion, however, necessarily attending two such large bodies of armed men, who, before they retired, amounted to more than 2,000, the court could transact but little business. On Wednesday, the panel of jurors not being filled, those jurymen who appeared were dismissed. On the next day, which was the third of their sitting, the court adjourned, after resolving that it was not expedient to proceed to the county of Berkshire. The mortification which the insurgents suffered from the Court House being preoccupied by the militia, led them to several bold measures. At one time they marched down upon the militia with loaded musquets, and every preparation was made for an engagement; but they were dissuaded from an attack, as it was said, at the instance of their commander."¹ After thus confronting each other for four days, both parties retired, and Springfield once more had rest.

About two months later, another struggle was imminent at Worcester. "Orders were issued to Major General Warner, to call out the militia of his division, and five regiments were directed to hold themselves in instant readiness to march. Doubts however arose, how far reliance could be placed on the troops of an infected district. The sheriff reported that a sufficient force could not be collected. The first instructions were therefore countermanded, a plan having been settled to raise an army whose power might effectually crush resistance, and the Judges were advised to adjourn to the 23^d of January following, when the contemplated arrangements could be matured to terminate the unhappy troubles."² The following correspondence refers to this transaction:—

"Worcester Dec. 1st, 1786. May it please your Excellency. The Insurgents in this county, and a number from the county of Hampshire, under the command of Daniel Shays, not exceeding two hundred and fifty or three hundred men, proceeded on the 29th instant³ as far as Shrewsbury" . . . most of whom "marched out of Shrewsbury, on their return home. received this day, I learn that Shays met a reinforcement from the county of Hampshire, and a number from this county, at which time Shays ordered his men to halt ; and I have the greatest reason to believe, by the best intelligence I have been able to obtain, their intention now is, to prevent the setting of the Court of Common Pleas in this town next week. On the 29th instant the party from Hampshire marched through Hardwick ; upon observing the movement, I issued orders to the Commanders¹ of the Regiments in the upper part of this county to march, and I proceeded on to this town, in order to obtain intelligence. On the Insurgents proceeding homeward, I issued orders to the militia that had marched, to return home, and hold themselves in readiness to march on the shortest notice to Worcester." General Warner adds that he had ordered all the regiments in the county to be ready in like manner, but expresses grave doubts how many would obey his orders, saying, " I believe not a number sufficient to repel the force of the Insurgents in this county, exclusive of those which will probably collect from the counties of Hampshire and Berkshire. If it should be the opinion of your Excellency, that the Court of Common Pleas in this county should be protected the week ensuing, I conceive it will be necessary to send on a formidable force from the lower counties, and perhaps some pieces of artillery, as I am credibly informed the Insurgents have obtained some. I shall wait your further commands, which will be executed without delay. In the mean time, I am, with esteem, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant, JON^t WARNER, M. G. His Excellency James Bowdoin, Esq. N. B. I forward this by Major Asa Coburn, by express."²

To this report of proceedings, the Governor replied : —

" Dec. 3. Sir, You are hereby directed to issue your orders to the militia that you may have ordered to march to the town of Worcester for the support of the Court of Common Pleas and Court of Sessions that are to set there on Tuesday next, not to proceed upon that business, any former orders that you may have received to the contrary notwithstanding. The above orders are given from a suggestion in your letter, that the Court could not be supported without some aid from the counties this way ; however, if, contrary to your expectation, your militia should have turned out in such numbers and with such spirit as fully to convince you that the Court can be effectually supported, you will not be influenced by them. By advice of Council. Sir, Your humble servant, J. B. Maj. Gen. Warner." ¹

The militia did not turn out in such numbers as to support the Court; but the insurgents held possession of the Court House and of the town for about a week. On Sunday evening, December 3, a party which had quartered at Grafton entered Worcester, "under the command of Abraham Gale of Princeton, Adam Wheeler of Hubbardston, Simeon Hazeltine of Hardwick, and John Williams, reported to be a deserter from the British army and once a serjeant of the continental line. They halted before the Court House, and, having obtained the keys, placed a strong guard around the building, and posted sentinels on all the streets and avenues of the town, to prevent surprise. Those who were off duty, rolling themselves in their blankets, rested on their arms on the floor of the court room." ² The Court, being thus excluded from the Court House, was opened in a tavern, and adjourned to the 23d of January, as directed by the Governor. The insurgents, however, remained in Worcester through the whole week, suffering much from a severe snow-storm, which commenced on Monday evening, and were finally dismissed on Saturday, in the midst of another furious tempest, in which it is said that "some were frozen to death," and many others narrowly escaped the same fate. Separate companies from the towns of Ward, Holden, Spencer, Rutland, Barre, Hubbardston, Petersham, and Belchertown, are mentioned by historians; and, although not specially named, it can scarcely be doubted that several inhabitants of Hardwick accompanied Captain Hazeltine, who was one of the active leaders.

Three weeks later, December 26, the session of the court at Springfield was prevented; and it was understood that the Court of Common Pleas would not be permitted to hold its adjourned meeting at Worcester on the 23d of January. The government now adopted more vigorous measures to sustain its authority, and organized an army of 4,400 infantry, besides four companies of artillery, all under the command of Major-General Benjamin Lincoln. On the 4th of January, orders were issued to Major-General Warner to detach 1,200 men from the seventh division, and to organize them into two regiments, for this service. ³ He re-

General Lincoln's force was concentrated at Worcester on the 22d of January, and the court held its session the next day without molestation. "Detachments of insurgents collected at Rutland, New Braintree, Princeton, Sterling, and Sutton, but, intimidated by the military, hovered at a distance, while the courts proceeded. On the 25th of January, General Lincoln hastened westward for the relief of Shepard, and of the arsenal at Springfield, invested by Shays and Day. Major-General Warner was left in command at Worcester, with a regiment of infantry, a corps of artillery, including Capt. Treadwell's company, two field pieces, and a party from the legionary battalion of volunteer cavalry."¹ With this force General Warner protected Worcester, and dispersed large bodies of insurgents at New Braintree, and at the barracks in Rutland. Meanwhile, General Shepard, with about a thousand men, had taken post at Springfield, for the protection of the arsenal. On the 25th of January Shays approached with a still larger force. General Shepard "sent one of his aids with two other gentlemen, several times, to know the intention of the enemy, and to warn them of their danger. The purport of their answer was, that they would have possession of the barracks; and they immediately marched onwards to within 250 yards of the arsenal. A message was again sent to inform them, that the militia were posted there by order of the Governor, and of Congress, and that if they approached nearer they would be fired upon. To this, one of their leaders² replied, that that was all they wanted; and they advanced one hundred yards further. Necessity now compelled General Shepard to fire; but his humanity did not desert him. He ordered the two first shot to be directed over their heads; this, however, instead of retarding, quickened their approach; and the artillery was at last pointed at the centre of their column. This measure was not without its effect. A cry of murder arose from the rear of the insurgents, and their whole body was thrown into the utmost confusion. Shays attempted to display his column, but it was in vain. His troops retreated with precipitation to Ludlow, about ten miles from the place of action, leaving three of their men dead, and one wounded on the field."³

Two days later, General Lincoln arrived at Springfield, and immediately pursued the insurgents, who fled to Pelham, and he took post at Hadley. After vainly attempting to secure a cessation of hostilities, Shays withdrew from Pelham, and marched to Petersham, on the 3d of February. At eight o'clock in the evening of the same day, General Lincoln commenced that "indefatigable" march through Shutesbury and New Salem, which orders in the most peremptory manner, and made answer that that was all he wanted." Independent Chronicle, February 1, 1787.

he described in his report dated at Petersham, February 4 : — “ We arrived here about nine o’clock, exceedingly fatigued by a march of thirty miles, part of it in a deep snow, and in a most violent storm. When this abated the cold increased, and a great part of our men were frozen in some part or other ; but I hope none of them dangerously so, and that most of them will be able again to march in a short time.”¹ The surprise was complete. The insurgents fled, without attempting any defence, some to their homes, and others through Athol, beyond the limits of the State. This was a crushing blow to the insurrection. Although a guerilla contest was carried on a few months longer in the western counties, no large number was ever again gathered in opposition to the government. The immediate effect was described by General Warner in a report to the Governor : “ Worcester, Feb. 10th 1787. His Excellency J. Bowdoin, Esq. Sir, General Lincoln, on his leaving this county, left under my command the troops which were raised in my Division, with a request that I would discharge them as speedily as might be consistent with safety. I have hitherto conceived it expedient to keep the greater part of them in service, as many of the insurgents in this county retain an unsubdued and uncurbed spirit of rebellion and insolence. There has not, indeed, of late been any large collection of insurgents within this county ; but small numbers have been collecting in diverse parts of the county, to the annoyance and terror of the friends to order and regularity. Thoroughly to subdue this spirit appears to me to be of the highest importance. For this purpose I have kept detachments in such parts of the county as I have conceived would best tend to the accomplishment of the design. Numbers have been captured ; numbers have voluntarily submitted, and thrown themselves on the mercy of government ; and numbers there are, which still remain to be reclaimed. I have, in my proceedings with them, endeavored to conform to the proposals offered by Major General Lincoln, and approved of by the General Court, not having received any particular directions upon the subject. . . . I have the honor to be, with the highest esteem, your Excellency’s most obedient humble servant, JON^A WARNER, M. G.”²

It remained for the government to disperse the predatory bands which still infested various parts of the country, and to deal judiciously with the conquered insurgents. The first was accomplished with comparative ease, by means of an overpowering military force, but what disposition to make of the offenders was a problem difficult of solution. A previous offer of amnesty to non-commissioned officers and privates, who would lay down their arms and take the oath of allegiance, had been generally disregarded; but it was now renewed to such as would submit on or before the 21st day of March, and was accepted by large numbers, among whom were at least sixty inhabitants of Hardwick:—David Elwell, Frederick Wicker, Gideon Carpenter, Lemuel Willis, Ezra Winslow (“neither of the above three persons used any arms against the government, as they affirm”), David Pratt, Symonds Whipple, Samuel Sibley, Samuel Clifford, Thomas Elwell, James Paige, Jr. (p. 125); Ephraim Tucker, James Robinson, Adonijah Dennis, Samuel Dennis, Constant Mirick, James Pearce, Nathaniel Gleason, Silas Newton, Calvin Oakes, Isaac Robinson, Eleazar Dexter, John Dexter (“these took and subscribed the oath of allegiance before the Act of the General Court was received,” p. 126); Nathaniel Haskell, Samuel Hopkins, Joseph Robinson, Job Dexter, Gideon Brimhall, Timothy Newton, George Haskell, Abner Weston, Ebenezer Childs, Eli Freeman, Robert Prout, Zephaniah Spooner, Israel Roach, Thomas Clark, Benjamin Carpenter, James Rogers, Samuel Haskins, Jr., Aaron Johnson (sworn “on or before the 21st day of March, A. D. 1787,” p. 130); William Smith, Thomas Reed Smith (March 23, 1787, p. 161); Arthur Rawson (“physitian, declares he never took up arms against government, only acted as physitian”); Benony Shurtleff, Ebenezer Lawrence (“declare they never took up arms, but were only in some degree aiding and assisting,” March 25, 1787; p. 169); Jonathan Parkhurst, David Whipple, David Warren, Caleb Bryant, Experience Luce, John Gorham, Stephen Gorham, Joseph Gorham, Barzillia Flagg, James Wing, Ichabod Dexter (September 10, 1787, p. 209); Seth Taylor, John Harris, Nathan Wheeler (September 29, 1787, p. 216).¹

Several others in Hardwick, who had not taken up arms, were politically involved in this insurrectionary movement.² The Sheriff of Worcester County, in a letter to the Governor, says: “I take leave to transmit the names of a number of their principal leaders and commanders; their names are as followeth, viz., Adam Wheeler, Hubbardston, Benjamin Convers, Ichabod Dexter,¹ Samuel Dexter, Simeon Hayselton, and Seth Taylor, all of Hardwick, Oliver Watson, Spencer, Abraham Gale, Henry Gale, Norman Clark, all of Princeton, Abraham Holman of Templeton, all in the County of Worcester.”² And on the 19th of January, 1787, the Governor issued his warrant for the arrest of sundry persons in Worcester County, “deeming the safety of the Commonwealth to be inconsistent with their personal liberty;” among these were Benjamin Convers and Captain Simeon Hazeltine. The sheriff made return that he had arrested some of the persons named, adding that the said Convers and Hazeltine “are not to be found within my jurisdiction.”³ They and some others had been so actively and prominently engaged under arms, that they were not entitled to the amnesty offered, and dared not take the hazard of a trial for treason.

A more sad fate was reserved for one of the Hardwick insurgents. John Wheeler, a Revolutionary soldier, who enlisted under Captain Daniel Shays, in 1778, serving as sergeant, and afterwards as quartermaster sergeant, was lieutenant of Captain Edward Ruggles’ company at the outbreak of the insurrection. He attached himself to his former leader, and became his aide-de-camp. He was described to me by his contemporaries, many years ago, as a skilful, brave, and energetic officer, — much superior to his chief. He shared the excitements and perils of the contest until early in February, 1787, when he was taken prisoner.⁴ The papers, descriptive of his trial, conviction, sentence, and pardon, are preserved, and are here inserted: —

“And now in this present term, before the Court here come the said John Wheeler and Henry McCullock, under custody of the Sheriff of said County, and being set to the bar here in their proper persons, and forthwith being demanded concerning the premises in the indictment above specified and charged upon them, how they will acquit themselves thereof, they severally say that thereof they are not guilty, and thereof for trial severally put themselves on God and the country (Simeon Strong and Caleb Strong Esquires, having been assigned by the Court as counsel for the prisoners): a jury is immediately impanelled, viz., William Stebbins, Foreman, and Fellows, namely, Amos Baldwin, Jonathan Parsons, Gideon Searl, Phineas Chapin, Jr., Jonathan Clark, Daniel Fowler, Aaron Fisher, Simeon Chapin, Joshua Phillips, Martin Clark, and Moses Kellogg, who, being sworn to speak the truth of and concerning the premises, upon their oath say that the said John Wheeler is guilty, and that the said Henry McCullock is guilty. And now the Attorney General moves that sentence of death might be given against the said John Wheeler and Henry McCullock, the prisoners at the bar; upon which it is demanded of them the said John Wheeler and Henry McCullock if they have or know aught to say wherefore the Justices here ought not, upon the premises and verdict aforesaid, to proceed to judgment against them, who nothing further say unless as they before had said. Whereupon, all and singular the premises being seen and by the said Justices here fully understood, it

There were manifestly extenuating circumstances in favor of Mr. Wheeler, for within a few days a full and free pardon was granted to him, and to three others who were convicted at the same term of the Court:²—

“Commonwealth of Massachusetts. To the Sheriffs of our several Counties, and all others our loving and faithful subjects, to whom these presents shall come. Greeting.

“In testimony whereof we have caused our public seal to be hereunto affixed. Witness, JAMES BOWDOIN, Esq., our Governor and Commander-in-chief, at Boston, this thirtieth day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and in the eleventh year of the Independence of the United States of America. By his Excellency’s command, with the advice and consent of the Council.”¹

So “full, free, and ample” was this “pardon,” that Mr. Wheeler was not degraded from the office of lieutenant which he had held for three years; and on the first day of September, 1789, he was commissioned by Governor Hancock as captain of the same company, and remained in office until the 8th of June, 1794, when he died at the early age of 37 years. The government exercised similar forbearance and clemency in regard to Captain James Paige, Jr., who was so far involved in the insurrectionary movement as to be required to take the oath of allegiance, yet was permitted to retain his military position, and was promoted to the office of major, receiving his commission 19 December, 1791. Indeed, a strong sympathy with this movement pervaded not only the community but the government itself. A large proportion of the representatives approved it, and resisted active measures for its suppression. In the spring of 1787, its friends and supporters obtained a substantial victory in the Commonwealth, by the defeat of Governor Bowdoin, and the election of Governor Hancock, with a still larger proportion of the representatives. The authority of the government was nominally maintained; but its administration was rendered difficult by this disturbing element. The same spirit was visible in the convention called in 1788 to consider the proposed Constitution of the United States, and nearly prevented its adoption on the ground that it granted too much power to the general government. So powerful and so persistent was the opposition, that even with the hope of certain amendments to render it less objectionable, approval of the Constitution was secured by the meagre majority of nineteen, there being, on the final question, 187 yeas and 168 nays.²

Both before and after the collapse of the insurrection, a majority of the voters in Hardwick seem to have sympathized with it. They were officially represented in the county conventions, many of them took up arms, and their votes in town-meeting indicate their political preferences. Under a warrant for a meeting, January 8, 1787, "to take into consideration a petition from a number of the inhabitants of the town of Hardwick, praying that Capt. Shattuck and others lately imprisoned at Boston may be liberated, and that the Courts of Common Pleas and General Sessions may be suspended till a new election, and sundry other articles, and for the town to act thereon as they shall think proper," it was "voted to choose a committee to petition the General Court for the purpose expressed in the warrant, &c., and made choice of Major Kinsley, John Raymond, Ichabod Dexter, Capt. Hazeltine, and Doctor Rawson, for said committee, and they to make report at the adjournment of this meeting." At the adjourned meeting, January 29th, "the petition that the aforesaid committee had prepared was publicly read before the town and accepted. Voted that the petition be signed by the Town Clerk as the doings of the town. Voted to choose a committee to repair to General Lincoln's and Shays' army, in order to accommodate matters, if possible to prevent the shedding of blood; and chose Capt. [Daniel] Wheeler and Capt. [Daniel] Egery." At the annual meeting, March 5, 1787, the same spirit was in the ascendant. The record is characteristic of the eccentric town clerk; but there is no reason to doubt its literal truthfulness: "The town met and proceeded as follows: (1.) Chose Gen. Jonathan Warner, Moderator; and then, after quarrelling the remainder of the day, voted to adjourn the meeting to Monday the 2^d day of April next, at nine o'clock in the morning. Met accordingly and proceeded as follows: chose Sylvanus Washburn, Town Clerk; Major Martin Kinsley, Town Treasurer; Capt. Daniel Egery, Capt. Seth Peirce, Seth Johnson, Deac. Nathaniel Paige, and Daniel Billing, Selectmen; Sylvanus Washburn, Daniel Ruggles, and David Allen, assessors." The personal popularity of General Warner secured his election as moderator; notwithstanding his active support of the government; but Major Kinsley, whose sympathy and influence were manifestly on the other side, was elected treasurer in place of Colonel Paige, whose loyalty was never doubted. An entire change was made in the board of selectmen; the loyal incumbents were superseded by new men, all of whom, except, perhaps, Mr. Billings, were of different politics. And in the next month Major Kinsley was elected representative.

² This opposition was especially manifest in the western counties: there were in Worcester, 7 yeas, 43 nays; in Hampshire, 19 yeas, 33 nays; in Berkshire, 7 yeas, 15 nays. Among the nays appears the name of Martin Kinsley, the delegate from Hardwick.

In Hardwick, as elsewhere, there were doubtless some demagogues and political agitators, who took advantage of the general distress for selfish and sinister purposes; but most of this class soon left town. Of those who remained, the larger portion were, probably, as excusable in their resistance to the government now as they formerly were in resisting the authority of Great Britain. Goaded to desperation by the pressure of financial obligations which they could not cancel, they sought relief by the means which had previously been so effectual, namely, County Conventions, the obstruction of the Courts of Law, and at last an appeal to Arms. They made a sad mistake, not properly distinguishing between laws arbitrarily imposed on them by a foreign power, and laws enacted by their own representatives, and subject to amendment or repeal by the same authority. In subsequent years, they were peaceable, law-abiding citizens, trusted and honored by their townsmen, and steadfast upholders of government; yet, almost without exception, they maintained through life the political theory that the government should be clothed with no more power than is indispensable to its existence.

The proper "conclusion of the whole matter" seems to be this: Their financial distress furnished an excuse, approximating justification, to the insurgents. On the other hand, those who held fast their integrity in the midst of such wide-spread calamity, and supported the government in its terrible struggle to maintain the supremacy of law, deserve the highest honor for their loyalty and true patriotism.

BOUNDARIES. — It has already been mentioned¹ that the surveyor, in delineating the township, inadvertently included at the northeast corner four hundred acres² belonging to the “Braintree six thousand acres,” and three hundred acres at the southwest corner, being a part of the “Equivalent Lands,” which had been purchased by John Read, Esq.; in consideration of which, the General Court, in 1733, granted to the proprietors the tract of land between Ware River and the “Six Thousand Acres,” which now constitutes about one half of New Braintree. This grant, however, was only of temporary value. The inhabitants of that tract soon became weary of climbing the long hill to attend public worship and transact town affairs, and for this and probably other reasons, desired a separation. After some unsuccessful efforts their object was accomplished January 31, 1751, when that part of Hardwick which was east of the river, together with the “Six Thousand Acres” and a part of Brookfield, was incorporated as a separate district, which subsequently became a town, by the name of New Braintree.

Half a century later, the town was again curtailed in its dimensions. The movement commenced as early as August 25, 1788, when the town “Voted, that they have not any objection to the prayer of a petition being granted, which was presented to the General Court of this Commonwealth, at their last session, by a number of inhabitants in the northwesterly part of this town, praying to be incorporated, with a part of Petersham and Greenwich, into a distinct town by the name of Tolland." This petition was not granted; but on the eighteenth day of February, 1801, substantially the same territory was incorporated into a town by the name of Dana.¹

A small gore of unincorporated land was annexed to Hardwick, February 7, 1831, described as follows: "Beginning at the northwest corner of said Hardwick, and running N. 70° E., 5 rods, to the southerly corner of Petersham; thence S. 41½° E., 184 rods, on the line of Petersham, to the southeast corner thereof; and thence N. 37½° W., 186 rods, on the line of Hardwick, to the bound first mentioned."²

This gore was included in the large tract of land annexed to Dana, February 4, 1842, and described as follows: "Beginning at the southwest corner of Silas N. Johnson's land, on the line of said Hardwick and Dana; thence running S. 49° E., 204 rods, to the corner of Stephen Hillman's land; thence N. 31½° E., 543 rods, to Barre, Hardwick, and Petersham corner,"³ together with a part of Petersham. The portion of Hardwick thus annexed to Dana was estimated to be one seventy-fifth part of the whole town.

Many years ago, as indicated on the Ruggles map, several acres of land, measuring nearly seven-eighths of a mile in length, and about a quarter of a mile in width, were set off from Hardwick and annexed to Greenwich.

More important than any other, indeed more important than all others, was the last addition to the territory of Hardwick. On the east side of Ware River, between the towns of Hardwick, New Braintree, and Ware, was a tract of unincorporated land, called "Hardwick Gore." Though separated from Hardwick by the river, in many respects its inhabitants were more closely connected with this town than with the others; they voted here for state officers, their state tax was assessed here, and here they buried their dead. Attempts were made, from time to time, for the annexation of this Gore to the town. As early as March 2, 1807, the town "voted to postpone the taking of a vote upon the petition of the people in the Gore, so called, and choose a committee of three to see upon what terms the petitioners are willing to be annexed to the town of Hardwick." The desired object was not accomplished until a quarter of a century later, when the General Court enacted, February 6, 1833, "that the gore of land lying at the southeasterly part of the town of Hardwick, and adjoining said town, called Hardwick Gore, containing about two hundred acres, and described as follows: beginning at a monument in the pond above Anderson's mill, at a place where the westerly line of New Braintree leaves Ware River, thence on the said westerly line of New Braintree, south, fourteen degrees east, one hundred and twenty-two rods, to a stone monument: thence south, thirty-seven degrees west, two hundred and eighty-nine rods, to another stone monument, at the southwest corner of New Braintree and northeast corner of Ware; thence north, eighty-seven degrees west, thirty-six rods, to said Ware River; thence on the said River, northerly, four hundred and twenty-one rods, to the southeast corner of Hardwick; thence sixty-one rods, to the place of beginning, — together with the inhabitants thereof, be and the same is hereby annexed to the town of Hardwick, in the county of Worcester; and said inhabitants shall be liable to the same duties and entitled to the same privileges as the other inhabitants of the same town."¹

On this annexed territory, within the last twenty years, has grown up the larger part of the village of Gilbertville, now containing about half of the population of the whole town, and furnishing a convenient market for agricultural products. The annexation involved large disbursements by the town for schools, and for the construction of roads and a very expensive bridge; but the advantages derived from the increased value of taxable property, and the incidental stimulus given to farming and other industrial pursuits, appear to be fully equivalent to the outlay. The "George H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company" deserve high praise, not only for erecting one of the most beautiful meeting-houses in the Commonwealth, but also for the extraordinarily neat and substantial character of their tenements, and generally for their well-directed and constant efforts to beautify the village, and to make it a pleasant home for those whom they employ.

ROADS AND BRIDGES. One of the earliest tasks to be performed by pioneers is the construction of roads and bridges. This task in Hardwick was one of more than ordinary difficulty. The largest and most expensive bridges were those across Ware River; of which the earliest was that near the Old Furnace.

At a meeting of the proprietors, October 30, 1733, it was ordered that a committee should allot certain lands on the east side of the river, and "agree with the settlers for a price for the same; the produce of which to be laid out to build a good Cart Bridge over Ware River aforesaid against the highway lately laid out towards Brookfield; and the said committee to agree with persons to build the bridge, and take care that it be effected." This bridge has been several times renewed, and is a very important avenue. The present iron structure was erected in 1875. The "highway lately laid out towards Brookfield" was the road which, turning to the right, about a quarter of a mile east of the bridge, runs southeast to Ditch Meadow in New Braintree. It is referred to in the laying out of a highway, August 3, 1747, "from Eleazar Warner's,¹ through land of William Ayers and Josiah Barrett, to the road from Ditch Meadow to the Great Bridge, across the bridge, along the dug-way, across Moose Brook, in front of Nathan Carpenter's door, up the hill to land of Caleb Benjamin, through land of Zechariah Haskell, John Cooper, and John Roberts, to the highway² from Cornelius Cannon's to the Great Meadow Brook east of Joseph Ruggles's house."

Another bridge is here indicated. Cornelius Cannon resided on the east side of the river, opposite to the late residence of Mr. Reed S. Ruggles, marked "A. Rich" on the R. map. The town voted, May 14, 1744, "to build a horse-bridge over the River, near Cannon's." In my boyhood, vestiges of this bridge, and of a roadway leading to it, were visible; but the bridge itself had disappeared. A wooden structure was placed here in 1845, which was succeeded by the present substantial iron bridge in 1857.

Another bridge was early erected about half a mile above the crossing at Gilbertville. A reference to it is found under date of March 4, 1765, when the town "voted to Mr. Isaac Thomas the sum of £26. 13. 4., said Thomas having engaged to build a sufficient bridge over Ware River, near his iron-works, at the most convenient place, and to the acceptance of the town, and to be completed at or before the first day of September next." The form of this vote indicates that no bridge had been previously erected at that place. Mr. Thomas did not fulfil his contract, but sold his "iron-works" to Abraham Savage and Joseph Blake. The town, May 19, 1766, "voted to Mr. Savage and Mr. Blake £40. 0. 0., to enable them to build a bridge over Ware River near their works, . . . to be completed at or before the first day of November next." The treasurer's account for the same year exhibits a payment "to Lot Whitecomb, for building the bridge over Ware River, at Messrs. Savage and Blake's works, £40. 0. 0." This bridge was rebuilt in 1814, and probably again rebuilt at a later date.

the Common to Gilbertville, a few rods east of the present residence of Captain Orin Trow.

² This highway passed up the hill to the house of Mr. George Warner, marked "Mr. Bolster" on the R. map, and thence northerly to its junction with what afterwards became the turnpike, near Great Meadow Brook.

The bridge in Gilbertville was erected in 1871. It took the place of an ordinary structure, built a few years earlier, and was much more expensive than either of those before mentioned; but it was so thoroughly and firmly constructed that it may be expected to resist all the ordinary processes of decay and destruction for many years.

The construction and maintenance of highways in this town involved great expense from the beginning. Twenty years after the settlement commenced, it was represented in a petition to the General Court, heretofore quoted, that the inhabitants are "obliged to expend yearly large sums in making and repairing their highways, and even this year [1754] are at the expense of a hundred pounds, lawful money, for that purpose; and must be at the expense of some thousands of pounds upon their roads before they will be brought to be as good as most of the roads in the province are by nature." Not only was almost the whole township covered with a heavy growth of timber, but the surface of the ground was very uneven and hilly, thickly sprinkled with rocks and ledges. The hills and valleys run chiefly in a northerly and southerly direction; and the highways running across them from east to west are far from level. Between the Common and Muddy Brook, on the roads leading to Enfield and Greenwich, and on the old road to Greenwich Village, the hills are both long and steep. The old road from Mandell Hill to Ware River is yet visible, and affords a specimen of the difficulties originally encountered. Indeed a portion of it, near the Old Furnace, still open but disused, was said by teamsters, half a century ago, to be more difficult of ascent than any other hill between that point and Boston. This difficulty is now avoided by a comparatively new road, which, by a long detour to the north, ascends the hill more gradually. Relief has been obtained also on the old road (or turnpike) to Greenwich Village, by opening a new highway between Muddy Brook and the Common, which both diminishes the steepness of the ascent and shortens the distance. But notwithstanding these and other similar changes, the Hardwick roads generally remain hilly, and their maintenance requires much care and expense; and yet it should be said that in few if any towns, at the same distance from Boston, are the roads kept in so good condition. For more than a century a "highway tax" was annually assessed, which was "worked out" by the inhabitants and their teams, under the direction of "Surveyors of Highways;" but recently all the roads are placed under the supervision of a single person, who employs all necessary assistance. Thus far, the new system has given general satisfaction.

Shortly before the commencement of the present century, an effort was made to improve the great thoroughfares of public travel by the construction of turnpikes. The "First Massachusetts Turnpike," in the towns of Palmer and Western (now Warren), was chartered by the General Court, June 11, 1796, on petition of the veteran stage-driver Levi Pease and others. So popular did this movement speedily become, that at the end of nine years (June 15, 1805) there were sixty similar corporations in this Commonwealth. The incorporators were required to construct and maintain good roads for the convenience and advantage of the public, and were empowered to erect gates thereon, and to receive toll from all who passed through them with vehicle or beast, for their individual emolument.¹ Among the earliest was the "Sixth Massachusetts Turnpike," which passed through Hardwick. The indications are unmistakable that General Warner² was the leading spirit in this enterprise; and sixteen of the twenty-nine petitioners for the charter were Hardwick men. The petition so vividly describes the condition of the roads at that period that I insert it in full:—

"To the Honorable the Senate and the Honorable House of Representatives in General Court assembled, May, 1798.³ The subscribers, inhabitants of the counties of Hampshire, Worcester, Middlesex, &c., humbly shew, that the road leading from Hadley, through Amherst, Pelham, Greenwich, Hardwick, New Braintree, Oakham, Rutland, Holden, and Worcester, to the great road in Shrewsbury, which leads from New York to Boston, are at present very bad, and almost impassable for carriages, not from the negligence and inattention of the said towns through which they pass, but from the roughness of the country which is in many places uneven, hilly, and very rocky, and that they can never be properly repaired by the aforesaid towns without distressing them with a very great and unreasonable burden ;¹ but that with sufficient labor and expense they are capable of being very much improved ; and that as the route from Albany to Boston is in a direct line through the aforesaid towns, by a proper improvement the travelling to the western part of the County [country ?] may be greatly facilitated, and the distance very considerably curtailed. Your petitioners, therefore, from the fullest conviction of the importance of the measure to the trade and agriculture of the County [country ?] pray that your Honors would grant to the subscribers and such as may associate with them an Act of Incorporation, empowering them to make a good Turnpike Road from the town of Hadley in the county of Hampshire to the town of Shrewsbury in the county of Worcester, through the aforesaid towns, with all such powers, rights, privileges, and tolls, as the subject matter and the situation of the County [country ?] may render necessary. ought to be required of the inhabitants of said towns.” Mass. Special Laws, ii. 327.

June 22, 1799, omitting the names of some of the petitioners and containing several additional names. The provisions of this charter may be interesting to the younger portion of the present generation, who do not remember the period of turnpikes. Among other things, and principally, the corporators were authorized to construct "a turnpike road from the east line of Amherst . . . to the great road in Shrewsbury, . . . which road or turnpike shall not be less than four rods wide, and the path for travelling not less than eighteen feet wide in any place; . . . the said corporation may and shall be authorized to erect five turnpike gates¹ on the same, . . . and shall be entitled to receive of each traveller or passenger, at each of said gates, the following rate of toll, viz., for every coach, phaeton, chariot, or other four wheel carriage, drawn by two horses, twenty-five cents, and if drawn by more than two horses, an additional sum of four cents for each horse; for every cart or waggon, drawn by two oxen or horses, twelve and a half cents, and if drawn by more than two oxen or horses, an additional sum of three cents for each horse or ox; for every curricule, sixteen cents; for every chaise, chair, or other carriage, drawn by one horse, twelve and a half cents; for every man and horse, five cents; for every sled or sleigh, drawn by two oxen or horses, nine cents, and if drawn by more than two oxen or horses, an additional sum of three cents for every horse or ox; for every sled or sleigh, drawn by one horse, six cents; for all horses, mules, oxen, or neat cattle, led or driven, besides those in teams or carriages, one cent each; for all sheep or swine, at the rate of three cents for one dozen. . . . Provided, that nothing within this act shall extend to entitle the said corporation to demand or receive toll of any person who shall be passing with his horse or carriage to or from public worship, or with his horse, team, or cattle, to or from his common labor, or to or from any mill, or on the common or ordinary business of family concerns within the said town, or from any person or persons passing on military duty."² And it was "further enacted, that the first meeting of said corporation shall be holden at the house of Jonathan Warner, in Hardwick aforesaid, on the tenth day of September next, at ten of the clock very honest though somewhat eccentric man.

in the forenoon, for the purpose of choosing all such officers and establishing such rules as said corporation may think proper.”¹

The corporation, when organized, issued an “advertisement,” describing in strong terms the advantages which would accrue both to the public and to the stockholders from the execution of their design, and soliciting subscriptions:—“The Public are informed that a Company has been incorporated by a late Act of the legislature of Massachusetts, for the purpose of making a TURNPIKE ROAD from Amherst in the County of Hampshire to Shrewsbury in the County of Worcester, and that agreeably to the act of incorporation the Company have proceeded to lay out the road and make an estimate of the probable expense. The object of this association is to establish a direct line of communication from Boston to Albany, and to facilitate the travelling from Connecticut River to the Capital of Massachusetts. It is a well-known fact that the trade of this wealthy and flourishing part of New England has for many years past (in consequence of the roughness of the roads and the difficulty of communication with the town of Boston) been gradually diverted from our metropolis to Hartford and New York. To the mercantile interest of Boston this has become a very serious injury, and with their brethren in the country a subject of very serious regret. It is presumed, therefore, that an enterprise, the object of which is to remedy this evil, as well as to promote the convenience of the public, cannot fail to meet the approbation and encouragement of the citizens of Boston in particular, and the inhabitants of Massachusetts in general, even without the prospect of private emolument. But the proprietors, feeling themselves authorized, from a due attention to the subject, to state to the public a rational prospect of individual emolument to be derived from an interest in this undertaking, calculate with confidence upon receiving such pecuniary aid from the patriotic and liberal citizens of New England as will enable them to carry into immediate effect the object of their association. They therefore inform the public that the proposed Turnpike comprehends a distance of about forty-three miles, beginning at Shrewsbury, on the great post road from Boston to New York, passing through a fertile and flourishing country in the counties of Worcester and Hampshire, and terminating at Amherst, on Connecticut River, where it will connect with a turnpike already established from Northampton to the line of the State of New York. It is well ascertained that this is the most direct route from Boston to Albany, and will embrace the travelling from the western country and the most flourishing settlements on Connecticut River, within the States of Massachusetts and Vermont. From the best information, the proprietors of the turnpike from Northampton, with which this is to be immediately connected, have already realized from seven to nine per cent for their capital, and their income is rapidly increasing. From the difference in the face of the country, the proposed turnpike will be made with much less expense than the other, and the income of course proportionably greater. The expense has been estimated by a committee appointed for that purpose at twenty-five thousand five hundred and thirty dollars,¹ which sum is divided into ten hundred and twenty-one shares, at twenty-five dollars each. The first assessment is five dollars, which sum is to be paid on the delivery of the Certificate, and the future assessments made known by advertisements in the public papers. It is contemplated by the proprietors to engage in the business early in the ensuing spring, and if sufficient encouragement can be obtained to have the road completed in the course of the next season. Many wealthy and respectable inhabitants of the country are now earnestly engaged in the object, and solicit the co-operation of the commercial citizens of Boston, whose interest is so peculiarly concerned, and upon whose assistance the accomplishment of the work will perhaps ultimately depend. The shares are now offered for sale, and any person inclining to become interested in an enterprise which affords a fair prospect of private advantage and of great public utility may receive more particular information, and have an opportunity of purchasing until the 10th day of February next (at which time the sales will be closed), by applying to the following persons, viz.: Mr. John Marston, N. Patch, Boston; Nathaniel Paine, Esq., Worcester; Ebenezer Hunt, Esq., Northampton; John Dodds, Esq., or Mr. Lemuel Davis, Holden; Moses White, Esq., or Francis Blake, Esq., Rutland; Doctor Spencer Field, Oakham; Jonathan Warner, Esq., Hardwick; Thomas Powers, Esq., Greenwich; Major John Conkey, Pelham. Signed by order of the Corporation. JONATHAN WARNER, President.”²

in one summer; and cost about thirty-three thousand dollars.” Reed's Hist. of Rutland, p. 44.

² Mass. Spy, January 1, 1800.

The corporators and stockholders were disappointed in their hope of individual profit. The construction of the road involved an expense of about eight thousand dollars beyond the estimate, the payment of which absorbed all or nearly all the net income. By a statement signed "Jonas Reed, late Proprietors' Clerk," it appears that "the road being made and accepted, the Corporation for a little time took considerable toll; but it was appropriated to the payment of outstanding debts. The proprietors were under the necessity of taking their own money to pay themselves. New roads were made, toll evaded, and the shares had the same destiny as the old Continental money. The Corporation relinquished its Franchise, and on August 11, 1828, held its last meeting. The turnpike became a County road or common Highway."¹ But though the proprietors thus suffered loss, the towns through which the turnpike passed were doubtless benefited by its construction. It became a more direct and practicable thoroughfare, and the tide of travel was attracted to it, with the usual profitable results. In Hardwick, the turnpike followed substantially the county road from the Old Furnace to Greenwich village, except between the Common and the house of Mr. John W. Paige (marked "J. Gorham" on the R. map). The old road from the southwesterly corner of the Common ran westerly up the steep hill² until it intersected the present road to Ware, and then more northerly to its junction with the turnpike. Both ends of this old road, which was discontinued in 1808, remain visible to the present day, and its whole course may be traced with little difficulty.³ By the construction of the turnpike, the distance was shortened and the ascent of the hill rendered more easy.

About half a century later, May 24, 1851, a charter was granted to Charles A. Stevens, Jason Gorham, William Mixer, and their associates, to construct the Ware River Railroad from

² From a point near the middle of this steep ascent, a road diverged at right angles, and passed southerly towards Gilbertville to its junction with the present road (which was laid out in 1808 as a county road), about a hundred rods north of the house of Mr. Forester B. Aiken.

³ The northerly section of this old road was probably the westerly boundary of the "ten acres" which was granted by the proprietors, February 21, 1732-3, "to set a meeting house on, and for a burial place, and a training field." For this lot another was afterwards substituted, and half an acre in the northwest corner of the original "ten acres" was granted, March 10, 1761, to "those people called the Separate Society in Hardwick," who erected a meeting house thereon and occupied it a few years.

Palmer to the line of New Hampshire, to be constructed within two years.¹ Additional time for its construction was repeatedly granted by the General Court, but in vain. At length a new charter was granted, March 16, 1867, to George H. Gilbert, William Mixter, Orrin Sage, Charles A. Stevens, George S. Hill, and their associates, authorizing them, for the purpose of construction, to divide the road into four sections, viz.: 1. From Palmer to Gilbertville; 2. From Gilbertville to Barre; 3. From Barre to Templeton; and 4. From Templeton to the New Hampshire line; and also to "receive subscriptions for the building of each of said sections separately."² The time limited for its construction having expired, the charter was revived by the General Court, April 1, 1869, and the incorporators were authorized, May 22, 1869, to mortgage the road to secure the payment of bonds to be issued to defray the expense of construction.³ By an act passed March 15, 1870, the several towns through which this road was to pass were authorized to subscribe for stock, not exceeding in amount five per cent. of the assessed valuation of each town, by a majority of two thirds of the voters voting thereon by ballot.⁴ Accordingly, at a town-meeting, June 27, 1870, it was voted, "That the town of Hardwick subscribe for thirty thousand dollars of the capital stock of the Ware River Railroad Company, under and pursuant to the authority given by an Act of the Legislature of Massachusetts, at the late session thereof; such amount to be applied to the construction of the second section of the said Ware River Railroad, from Gilbertville to Barre." On this question, the votes were, Yeas, 113; Nays, 43. The road was soon afterwards constructed and put in operation.⁵ It proved unprofitable, however, to the proprietors, and the bondholders foreclosed the mortgage, and sold the property for a sum not exceeding the amount of the bonds. The General Court had already, April 21, 1873, authorized the purchasers at this sale to organize a new company under the old name, and to issue new bonds secured by mortgage.⁶ The new company was duly organized, and it is understood that the property yields a satisfactory income to the present stockholders. To the original subscribers, towns as well as individuals, the amount invested was entirely lost; nevertheless, to the towns and to many individuals the loss was fully balanced by the incidental benefit derived from the construction of the road. Both the agricultural and manufacturing interests of the town were promoted by the increased facilities of transportation; and the town was enriched rather than impoverished by the expenditure.

In the year 1870 the railroad fever raged violently in Hardwick. Not content with one road, involving an expense of thirty thousand dollars, the town pledged its credit for almost as large a sum, to aid in the construction of another, which promised even greater advantages, and which, if it shall ever be completed, will probably redeem this promise, substantially, in spite of its failure to perform the stipulated conditions. On the 10th day of May, 1870, the General Court incorporated Edward Denny and others (among whom was Constant Southworth of Hardwick), as the "Massachusetts Central Railroad Company," and authorized them to "locate, construct, maintain, and operate a railroad, with one or more tracks, commencing at some convenient point in the town of Williamsburg, thence running by the most convenient route through the towns of Northampton, Easthampton, Westhampton, Hatfield, Hadley, South Hadley, Amherst, Granby, Ludlow, Belchertown, Enfield, Greenwich, Ware, Palmer, West Brookfield, New Braintree, Hardwick, Dana, Petersham, Barre, Phillipston, Oakham, Hubbardston, Rutland, Princeton, Holden, Sterling, Boylston, West Boylston, Clinton, Lancaster, Northborough, Berlin, Bolton, Hudson, Stow, and Marlborough, or any of them, to Mill Village, thence over the line of the Wayland and Sudbury Branch Railroad Company, incorporated in the year 1868, to its terminus near the Stony Brook Station on the Fitchburg Railroad," with authority to become consolidated with the said Wayland and Sudbury Railroad and the Williamsburg and North Adams Railroad, and to use the tracks of intersecting railroads."¹ An inspection of the map will show that as far as to the easterly line of the county of Worcester, this roving commission embraced almost the entire territory between the Fitchburg and the Boston and Albany railroads; and, at one time or another, a large portion of it has been surveyed, and selected as "the most convenient route." Hardwick had its full share of these surveys, selections, and changes. After many ineffectual attempts had been made to find a feasible route across or near the Common, it was determined to follow the valley of Ware River, either upon or parallel with the Ware River Railroad, from the northeast corner of the town to a point near Gilbertville, and thence to sweep around westerly and northerly almost or quite to Southworth's Mills in the northwest part of the town, near Greenwich. Upon the westerly portion of this route large sums of money were expended, in deep excavations of rocky hills, high embankments across valleys, and abutments for bridges, which may hereafter be a study for antiquaries; but the work was at length abandoned, to the grievous disappointment of Mr. Southworth and others who had actively labored in behalf of the road, and a new route was adopted, extending down the River Valley to Ware Village, thus entirely avoiding the highlands in Hardwick. Whether this will be the permanent location of the road, and how soon the proposed work may be completed, are problems yet unsolved.

By the act of incorporation, the several towns on the line of the railroad were authorized to subscribe for its stock, to an amount not exceeding five per cent. of their respective taxable valuation. Encouraged by the hope that the several portions of the town would be benefited by accessible stations, at a town-meeting held November 8, 1870, it was "voted by one hundred and thirty-four (134) yes, to ninety (90) no, by ballot, that the Treasurer of the town of Hardwick be and he is hereby authorized and directed to subscribe immediately, in the name of the town of Hardwick for two hundred and eighty-one shares of one hundred dollars each, of the capital stock of the Massachusetts Central Railroad Company, agreeably to the terms of their charter, being 260 of the Acts of 1869. Provided, that this subscription be made upon the following conditions, to wit: that the said Road shall be located, and a contract be made with responsible parties to construct the Railroad of said Company from Northampton, through and by the way of Greenwich and Hardwick, north of the Dugal¹ Hill, so as to make a continuous line to Stony Brook Station on the Fitchburg Railroad; and further provided, that the town shall not be liable to any amount till not less than three millions of dollars, including this subscription, shall have been made to the capital stock of said company. And provided further, that a depot for freight and passengers be established in the vicinity of the Old Furnace, Hardwick, and another in the most convenient locality between Gilbertville and the centre of Hardwick. And provided further, that this subscription shall not be valid, unless the whole capital stock of three million dollars be subscribed by responsible parties within six months from the first day of January next." It is questionable whether any of these conditions have ever been fulfilled by the Railroad Company. It is certain that some of them have not been fulfilled, and have become impossible of performance, unless the strange doctrine be held, that a location of the road north of Bugle Hill, and the stating of a place for a depot between Gilbertville and the centre of the town, was a substantial fulfilment of the conditions, notwithstanding the road was never constructed, and the location was utterly abandoned. Nevertheless, on the presumption that the Company would comply with the conditions in good faith, the town paid forty per cent. of its subscription, amounting to $11,240 ; but on the 5th of November, 1872, it was "voted, that the money on the subscription of the town of Hardwick to the capital stock of the Massachusetts Central Railroad be withheld until the definite location of the depots of said Railroad in the vicinity of the Old Furnace Village, Hardwick, and between the Common in said Hardwick and Gilbertville, and until the depot in the vicinity of the Old Furnace Village be located within the limits of the town of Hardwick."¹ During the controversy which ensued, the Railroad Company proposed to sell the stock belonging to the town ; whereupon at a town-meeting, August 3, 1878, "voted and chose Hon. William Mixter an agent of the town of Hardwick to agree with the Directors of the Massachusetts Central Railroad Company, that if the said Company will consent not to sell the shares of the town in the stock of said Company, as heretofore notified, the town will waive all benefit of the Statute of Limitations for six months from this date," without prejudice to the legal rights of either party. A similar vote was passed, February 6, 1879, extending the time two years. Whether the town will hereafter be compelled to pay the remaining sixty per cent. of its subscription, notwithstanding the non-performance of the conditions, or whether, in consequence of such non-performance the company will be required to refund the amount already paid, remains to be judicially determined. Meantime there is now an encouraging prospect that at least so much of the road as will shorten the distance between Hardwick and Boston twenty miles will be completed at no remote day, and that the town will thus obtain a great advantage, though less than it bargained for.

POUNDS. One of the earliest safeguards against the destruction of property in the infant settlement was the establishment of a pound for the confinement of cattle unlawfully running at large. At the third meeting, after partial town privileges had been obtained, holden June 30, 1737, it was "voted, that George Abbott provide a Pound and be the pound-keeper for this year;" the next year, August 8, 1738, it was "voted, that Benjamin Smith's yard be a Pound for the town this year;" and at the first meeting after the town was fully incorporated, holden April 3, 1739, it was "voted, that the town will build a Pound, thirty feet square, and that it shall be set near the meeting house,¹ and that Samuel Robinson be the man to build said Pound according to law." This inclosure served its purpose more than half a century; but on the 3d of March, 1794, it was "voted, that Jonathan Danforth finish the Pound before the first day of June next." This vote is supposed to refer to the pound on the westerly side of Great Meadow Brook, where it is crossed by the old turnpike, near the spot where Mr. Danforth then resided, now owned and occupied by Captain Orin Trow. The substantial stone walls remain standing, and fragments of the fence, composed of sawed chestnut posts and rails, are still visible, after so long exposure.²

PAUPERS. The first reference to that unfortunate class, dependent on public charity and support, which appears on record, is under date of March 7, 1747-8, when upon an article in the warrant, "to see if the town will raise money to maintain Hannah Maccoye, sent to this town for that intent," it was "voted to raise fifty pounds, old tenor, to maintain Hannah Maccoye;" she remained chargeable until 1765. Doubtless other persons had received public assistance at an earlier date; indeed, it is alleged by General Ruggles, in a petition dated in 1754 and heretofore quoted, that "the inhabitants of said town are obliged to be at a great expense for the support of several poor and indigent persons;" but the aid was probably rendered from the general fund raised for town expenses. From the annual accounts of the town treasurer, and from other sources, the following names are gathered of persons who received public aid up to the end of the last century; the figures denote the date when such aid was first rendered: Edmund Jordan's wife and children, 1757;¹ Isaiah Glazier's children, 1761; Temperance Pratt, 1764;² Sarah Cummings, 1764; Widow Zerviah Pratt, 1765, died April 18, 1798, aged 89; Ephraim Rice's wife, 1765; Samuel Abbott, "a poor child," 1766; Charles Thomas, "a poor child," in care of Asa Hatch, 1768; James Harwood's wife, 1777; Mary Stratton, "a poor girl," 1783; Widow Mary Bradshaw, 1786; John Hedge, 1786; Thomas Shaw, 1786; Paul Morgan,³ 1789; Widow Jemima Blackington, 1792, died May 18, 1796, aged 70; Isaac Pratt, 1793, died November 27, 1808, aged 83; Hannah Aiken, 1798, died December 9, 1814, aged 64; Anna Farr, 1799; Abraham Chamberlin and wife, 1799; John Hunt, and wife, and child, 1799; Edward Curtis, 1800, died October 17, 1800, aged 66; Roxa Elwell, 1800, temporarily.

What method was originally adopted for furnishing the necessary assistance to paupers, does not appear; but at the commencement of this century, and for many years afterwards, their maintenance was allotted to the lowest bidder, from year to year,⁴ with this qualification, however, that a preference was given to relatives who were willing to assume the task.⁵ But in 1837 a more humane plan was adopted; and at a town meeting, April 3, 1837, after appropriating the sum of $2,000 (a portion of the "Surplus Revenue" received by the town) to defray the expense of building a Town Hall, it was "voted, to apply the residue of said surplus to the purchase of a Farm, on which to support the paupers; voted, that the present Board of Selectmen be a committee to purchase a Farm for the purpose of making it a home for our paupers;" and on the 13th of the following November it was "voted, to instruct the selectmen to complete the purchase of the Farm of Mr. John Wheeler, on the terms they have reported." On this farm suitable buildings were erected for the convenience and comfort of the poor, who were thenceforth protected against an annual flitting from one family to another, and from the constant peril of being committed to the charge of such persons as would have less regard for their welfare than for their own personal profit. Under the judicious and tender care of a warden and matron, the inmates are made more comfortable in their old age and helplessness, without material increase of the expenses of the town.

Lawrence to Ephraim Ruggles; Widow Freeman to Jedediah Dexter; Lucius Doolittle to Franklin Ruggles; Widow Newton and two children to Samuel Freeman.

Before dismissing this subject, it may be mentioned that a speculation in the maintenance of State Paupers was once seriously proposed in town meeting. Who suggested the idea, or advocated the measure, does not appear; but the following vote was passed, May 9, 1791, and duly recorded: "Voted, that the town will receive one third part of the poor persons supported by the Commonwealth, and they hereby offer and agree, on their part, to support said poor persons, with suitable lodging and boarding, for the term of ten years from and after the time of contracting, provided the Commonwealth will pay them five shillings per week for adults, and two shillings and sixpence per week for children, and their proportion of one hundred pounds per annum for doctoring said poor, the money to be paid quarterly; and will remove said poor from Boston at their own expense." I find no evidence that their offer was accepted, or that any further action was had by the town in reference to this magnificent project.

SLAVERY. There are very faint traces of human bondage in Hardwick. Among the marriages solemnized by Rev. Mr. White was that of "Taek and Rose, Kenelm Winslow's man and maid servant, April y^e 3^d, 1755." Mr. Winslow not long afterwards removed to Petersham, and in his will, dated April 5, 1775, gave to his wife, during her widowhood, his three negroes, Sarah, Rose, and Phillis, probably the offspring from this marriage. Rev. Mr. White also baptized, July 27, 1755, "Zebulon, the son of Philip and Bathsheba, man and maid servant to Capt. Joseph Warner," and a second Zebulon, son of the same parents, April 10, 1757. One more slave appears where we might least expect to find him, namely, in possession of a man who had served in the French war, on behalf of his country; who had already accepted office as captain of a company of minute-men, ready to march, at a moment's notice in defence of human rights against foreign domination, and did thus march, soon afterwards; and who, a dozen years later, again took up arms and put his life in peril, when he imagined the execution of law would be hurtful to the poorer class of the community. Moreover, he had never lived in luxury, but evidently suffered financial embarrassment, and seemed in no respect exposed to the temptation of holding a fellow-man in bondage. But the following advertisement shows that his practice was inconsistent with his avowed principles, and unsuited to his condition: "FIFTEEN DOLLARS REWARD. Ran away from me, the subscriber, on Thursday, the twentieth of October instant, a Negro Man, named Cæsar, about 26 years old, five feet four inches high; had on, when he went away, a green ratteen coat, red everlasting jacket, white linen breeches, blue yarn stockings; he has a mark or scar over one of his eyes, the little finger of his left hand is a little crooked by the cut of a sickle; it is suspected that some one assisted him, by changing cloaths, or gave him a pass; Whoever will take up said Negro and return him to me, or confine him to any of his Majesty's Goals, so that he may be returned to me, shall have the above reward and all necessary charges paid by SIMEON HAZELTINE. Hardwick, October 21, 1774."¹ Captain Hazeltine himself became a fugitive in 1787, to escape the consequences of his active participation in the "Shays Rebellion."

There is no evidence that many negroes, bond or free, ever resided here. A census of the inhabitants twenty-one years of age and upwards, was taken, January 31, 1777, by the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence, who certified that "we have no Quakers, no Indians, and no Negroes." Probably, however, there were some negro inhabitants under twenty-one years old; for in May, 1781, a descriptive Roll of men, enlisted in the army for three years, contains the names of Cato Boston, aged 22, Jupiter Lee, aged 16, and Zebulon Bassett, aged 23, all described as "black." The last named patriotic soldier was probably the same Zebulon, son of Captain Joseph Warner's servants, who was baptized April 10, 1757. At a later day, a few negro families have resided here, but never many at any one period; and never at any time have they disturbed the peace of the community.

TOWN HOUSE. For nearly a century after its incorporation, the town held its public meetings in the Congregational meeting-house, which was the common property of the town, — the town and parish being substantially the same. At length a portion of the old parish withdrew, organized a new society, and erected a meeting-house at the south end of the common. A Universalist Society had also been formed, which held its meetings in a hall, and no longer contributed towards the expenses of the old parish. Under such circumstances, it was unreasonable that the whole town should make free use of a meeting-house which belonged to a single parish, and was to be kept in repair or rebuilt without expense to the town in its corporate capacity. Better accommodations for the transaction of public business were also needed and generally desired. Accordingly, at a town meeting, April 4, 1836, "the Committee to whom was referred the subject of building a Town House made a report, accompanied by a plan, recommending to the town to build such a house, estimating the expense at $1,500." The report was accepted, and a committee was appointed to carry the recommendation into effect, and to "select a suitable spot for the erection of said house in the old burying-ground." The northwest corner of the burial-place was selected, August 22, 1836, on which a convenient edifice was constructed, two stories high, having on the lower floor rooms for the use of the various boards of town officers, and on the second floor a spacious hall for town-meetings and for other large assemblies. The cost of the building was defrayed without resort to taxation. Fortunately the revenue of the United States had exceeded the necessary disbursements, and a surplus had accumulated in the Treasury. This surplus was divided by Congress among the several States; and the General Court of Massachusetts distributed its share to the several towns, on certain conditions, one of which was that each town should refund its proportion, if it should afterwards be demanded. On the 3d of April, 1837, it was "voted, that the town consent to receive their proportion of the Surplus Revenue, under the conditions and limitations imposed by law. . . . Voted, that two thousand dollars of said Surplus be appropriated to the discharge of the debt to be incurred by building the Town House, and to discharge the other debts of the town."

Having completed the edifice and paid for it, the town manifested a willingness that it should be used for purposes other than strictly municipal affairs; and while it rightly demanded compensation from those who used it, was very moderate in its exactions. Moreover, in the use of the Hall a proper distinction was made between the common benefit of the public and the private advantage of a class, or of individuals. Having authorized the selectmen, November 13, 1837, "to take charge of the Town House, to keep it in order, to let it, &c.," the town gave some special directions concerning its use, May 8, 1838, when it was "voted that the Universalist Society shall be entitled to use the Town Hall as a place of worship, on the second Sabbath of each month, at one dollar per Sabbath, and oftener at the same rate, if the Hall be not otherwise engaged, and said Society can obtain preaching; also that said Society be entitled to the use of said Hall for evening Lectures, at the rate of fifty cents for each evening: ¹—voted, that the use of the Hall be granted to Mr. Goldsbury, for the purpose of keeping a High School, at the rate of five dollars per quarter; damages done to the Hall by the school to be repaired by the school:—voted, that the Hardwick Lyceum be entitled to the use of the Hall without paying anything to the town:—voted, that the use of the Hall be granted for the purpose of singing, without any charge therefor being made by the town." The High School was closed in 1839, and about two years later the Universalist Society, having erected a new meeting-house (under a mutual arrangement with the Congregational Society), ceased to occupy the Hall "as a place of worship"; but it continues to be used for all proper purposes, either gratuitously, or at a very reasonable charge. On the 24th of May, 1847, the town accepted a bell, as a gift from Jason Mixter, Esq., and ordered it to be placed on the Town House, bearing this appropriate inscription,—"Presented to the Town by Jason Mixter, Esq., A. D. 1847."

BURIAL-PLACES. In the "Massachusetts Spy," dated Friday, June 2, 1871, it was announced that,— "Last Friday, as the workmen on the Ware River Railroad were engaged in excavating for the road-bed in Hardwick, near Old Furnace Village, they came upon an old graveyard, where they have exhumed some ten or twelve skeletons. The Town Records have been searched, and nothing can be found that gives any information in regard to the matter. An old lady, eighty-five years of age, says that her grandfather used to tell of a public burying-ground somewhere in that locality. At present the whole affair is a mystery, and there seems to be no means of obtaining any clue in regard to the matter." Additional particulars were mentioned in the "Springfield Republican" of the same date: "Twenty-eight skeletons had been exhumed, up to Tuesday night, in the old cemetery at Furnace Village, Hardwick, brought to light by the excavations for the Ware River Railroad, and there was a prospect of finding still more. These were all found in a space of fifty feet in length and twenty feet wide, being the square cut upon the centre line of the road-bed. It is very curious that no definite information in regard to so large a yard can be obtained. The remains that have been lately taken out have the hair more plainly defined than the first, and pieces of boards, used in making the coffins, have been found, — in fact were attached to coffin-nails, old fashioned, wrought, about such as blacksmiths use for horse-shoes, now-a-days. The pieces of boards were so plainly defined that one could tell that the boards were split from the logs instead of being sawed."

I visited the place¹ June 8, 1871, and found the skeletons described, then numbering thirty; some were of persons apparently well advanced in life, some of middle age, and others of young children. The number exceeded my expectations; but that several persons had been buried there, was a tradition, current in my boyhood, though strangely unfamiliar to the present generation. Indeed, the greatest "mystery" in regard to this matter is, that so few persons now living should have any knowledge or remembrance of that tradition; I could find none, except the "old lady,"² eighty-five years old in 1871, and her recollection was vague and indistinct. Among the very earliest pioneers, if not absolutely the first, was William Thomas, the owner and occupant of the farm where the skeletons were found. Nearly three quarters of a century ago I received from my elders the tradition that he and several members of his family were buried on his own farm, and that some of his neighbors had permission to bury their dead in the same place. The precise spot was never designated to me; but it was always described as on this farm, and there can be no reasonable doubt that it was where the skeletons were exhumed in 1871. Mr. Thomas died May 22, 1747, aged probably about 60; his wife Patience died October 27, 1746. In 1749 the farm passed out of the possession of the Thomas family, and gradually all traces of the ancient graves were obliterated.

twenty rods southeasterly from the house marked "C. Paige" on the R. map.

² Daughter of Deacon James Paige, and mother of Deacon James N. Brown. She died June 16, 1880.

This was never a public burial-place, and no reference to it on the Town Records need be expected. Mr. Thomas had possession of this farm and occupied a house thereon as early as December 13, 1732, and how much earlier does not appear. Before the public burial-place was established, before any saw-mills were erected, as is indicated by some remnants of "boards, split from the logs instead of being sawed," and possibly before he had any neighbors nearer than Rutland and Brookfield, some member of his family may have deceased; and in such case it was natural that he should use a portion of his own land as a private cemetery; it was natural, also, that he and his family, as long as they retained possession of the farm, should bury their dead in the same place. It is a part of the tradition, and the large number of skeletons indicates the same fact, that some of the neighboring families were buried in this rural spot, so much more easy of access than the public burial-place on the highlands, even after it was prepared for use. There may have been a special reason for the clustering of graves in this spot, if there be substantial truth in another tradition, communicated to me in 1838, by a very intelligent lady,¹ then ninety years old, namely, that before the first meeting-house was erected on the Common, meetings for religious worship were for some time held in or near the house of Mr. Thomas. If this were so, it was natural that his neighbors should desire to bury their dead here rather than on their own farms.² Except the theory mentioned in the note, I am not aware that any other explanation has been offered concerning the bones, which having rested undisturbed for more than a century, until the memory of them had nearly perished from the

² A theory gained temporary currency that these skeletons were "the relics of a portion of the Shays Rebellion;" that after the attack on the arsenal at Springfield in January, 1787, "the Shays party retreated to Hardwick where they encamped and kept quiet. That winter was severe, and many died, being buried in rough wooden boxes." But this theory is incredible for several reasons:—Whatever may have been the scarcity when the first deaths occurred in the families of Mr. Thomas and his neighbors, there was certainly no lack of saw-mills half a century later, in 1787, nor any necessity to construct coffins of boards "split from the logs instead of being sawed;" nor is it probable that so many women and children were camp-followers, and died in one winter, as the skeletons indicate. Moreover, there is no evidence that the Shays army ever entered Hardwick, after the retreat from Springfield. On the contrary, all the authorities agree that instead of encamping and keeping quiet, here or elsewhere, through the winter, the troops were utterly routed and scattered at Petersham, February 4, 1787, just ten days after their abortive attempt at Springfield. Indeed, they did not even pass through Hardwick on their retreat, but fled from Petersham in the opposite direction through Athol.

earth, were accidentally disinterred in 1871, to the great astonishment and bewilderment of the living inhabitants. After due examination, they were placed together in a box and again deposited in the earth, under the direction of the selectmen.

The oldest public burial-place in Hardwick is in the centre of the town, on the east side of the Common. It is not a part of the "ten acres," devoted by the proprietors, February 21, 1732-3, to public use; but it was probably substituted for the original grant, about 1741, when the second meeting-house was erected. How early this burial-place was used does not appear. The most ancient date now to be found on any head-stone, is on that of Hannah, wife of Thomas Haskell, who died, May 16, 1749, aged 25. Deacon John White, the father of Rev. David White, was born at an earlier date (1663) than any other person known to have been buried in that ground; he died November 13, 1750, in the eighty-eighth year of his age. Next to him in seniority of birth was Daniel Warner, the progenitor of almost all who now bear that name in Hardwick, who was born in 1666, and died March 12, 1754, in the eighty-eighth year of his age. Both of these patriarchs were born in Hatfield. Far exceeding them in age, and the oldest person ever buried in that ground, was Mercy, widow of Deacon William Paige, who was born at Brookfield January 3, 1720-1, and died here February 19, 1823, having completed more than one hundred and two years of life.

This burial-place has been sadly shorn of its original proportions. In 1768 the northerly line was $15\frac{1}{2}$ rods in length; the easterly line, 14 rods; and the southerly line, 11 rods. The westerly line appears to have been a continuation of what is now the easterly line of the road running northerly from the Common towards Petersham.¹ The first mutilation was authorized by a vote passed May 9, 1791, when a committee consisting of sixteen prominent inhabitants, previously appointed "to view the Common and the lands adjoining, and see what alterations may be convenient and necessary to be made; also to inquire of the pro-were several depressions in the surface of the ground on the easterly side of the present Common, which were then reputed to be indications of ancient graves; but whether their contents had been removed to the present contracted limits of the burial-place, is not certainly known.

prietors of the lands adjoining, to know of them on what conditions they will dispose of their lands, provided the committee shall think it expedient to enlarge the Common; also to examine respecting the expediency and propriety of removing the Burying-yard wall, and laying a part of the present Burying-yard common," submitted a report which was accepted; and the town thereupon voted to enlarge the Common by taking in a portion of the burying-ground on the easterly side of the Common, and a strip of land on the westerly side, given by General Warner on certain conditions to which the town assented. No further material encroachment seems to have been made until August 22, 1836, when the town instructed its committee to erect a Town House "on the northwest corner of the old Burying-ground." At this time a new cemetery had been established, and an inclination was exhibited by many, not only to discontinue their accustomed use of this place, hallowed for a century by the dust of the dead and the tears of the living, but to sell it outright, for "thirty pieces of silver," more or less, and permit it to be utterly perverted from its original destination.¹ It was thought to be a desirable location for dwelling-houses, and especially for stores and public buildings. The Town House had covered several

"Of those who commenced the settlement here, not one remains. Most of those who were active, during the first fifty years of our history, have also departed. They sleep in the grave,—all that was mortal of them,—chiefly in the inclosure near this house, which was devoted as a burial-place, by the proprietors of the township. I exceedingly regret that a few individuals have manifested a disposition to appropriate it to other purposes entirely. I know not how some persons may feel on this subject. But my fathers sleep in that ground; and I would gladly preserve their remains from indignity. In regard to most of my fellow citizens, I may say your fathers sleep there, and it becomes you to watch over them. They who converted a howling wilderness into fruitful fields and pleasant gardens, sleep there. They sleep there, who labored, suffered privation, and freely perilled their lives in contests with savage beasts and more savage men, that we might enjoy plenty, and liberty, and peace. Of all which they once possessed, they withheld nothing from us, but that small spot of ground, where, with their fellow-laborers and fellow-sufferers, their wives and their children, they might rest in peace till the resurrection. Let us not grudge them this scanty pittance. They gave us their houses and lands;—do not deprive them of their graves. Let not their ashes be scattered to the four winds, nor their bones be thrown out, to be trampled under foot by the unthinking multitude. Let not that spot of ground, already shorn of its original proportions, be further desecrated. Let it rather be neatly and substantially inclosed, and planted with trees and shrubbery. It will then be a pleasant retreat for meditation, an ornament to your village, and a perpetual monument of your respect for the memory of your ancestors."

graves, without disturbing their contents ; and this was regarded by some as a sufficient excuse for digging to any required depth for the construction of basements and cellars. After the project had been freely discussed for several months, it took definite form March 5, 1838, when an article was inserted in the warrant for the annual town meeting, "to see if the town will dispose of a portion of the old burying-ground to Joel S. Marsh, lying between the elm trees near the Town House, 44 feet in length, north and south, and 34 feet in width, for the purpose of erecting a store ;" to the honor of the town, I gladly copy the record that "a motion that the town consent to sell the land to Mr. Marsh, as requested by him, passed in the negative." It does not appear that a similar proposition was afterwards presented to the town by any individual ; but an attempt was made December 30, 1840, to purchase a part of the burial-place for a very different purpose, which could be carried into effect without disturbing the bones of the dead. At that date, the second article in the warrant was "to see if the town will sell to the First Universalist Society, for a reasonable compensation, a spot of land in the old burying-ground, sixty feet deep and fifty feet front, lying directly back of two elm trees between the Town House and Mixter and Delano's store, for the purpose of erecting a church thereon. . . . The subject contained in the second article of the warrant was discussed at considerable length, and many objections having been made to granting the spot referred to in said article, it was voted to dissolve the meeting."¹ This was equivalent to an absolute refusal to grant the request. Such decisive action by the town, after full discussion, settled the question for one generation at least, and it may be hoped for all generations, that neither individuals nor societies should be permitted to disturb the ashes of "the rude forefathers of the hamlet." Up to this time, no further attempt has been made to diminish the size of this old grave-yard. It has long ceased to be used for the burial of the recent dead, partly because it would be difficult to find a spot not already occupied, and partly because a more commodious and more attractive cemetery has been provided ; but it has not been unduly neglected, nor is its appearance, as a disused burial-place, discreditable to the town.

As early as 1804 it was found that the burying ground had been made too small by its recent reduction in size, and a committee was appointed to select another place. At a town meeting, May 6, 1805, it was "voted that the committee chosen last year for the purpose of procuring a suitable spot for a burying-yard, be empowered to purchase one as central as they can find." No purchase was made, however, until January 11, 1815, when a committee reported in favor of buying one acre and a half¹ of the Rev. Thomas Holt, and were authorized to close the bargain on the proposed terms. This lot has been several times enlarged by the purchase of another acre on the north side, November 12, 1849, afterwards of an adjoining tract, on the east side, of Mr. John Paige, and April 3, 1876, of somewhat more than two acres on the south side, of Mr. Joseph C. Paige. No lack of care or attention in regard to this cemetery is chargeable to the town or to individuals. It is very substantially fenced and ornamented by trees. Many monuments have been erected, and the head-stones are generally of a good character, and preserved clean and erect. Altogether, it is one of the neatest, well-ordered cemeteries in that section of the country. The first person buried here was Mr. Lendall Whipple, who had a few days previously assisted in erecting the stone inclosure, and who died November 21, 1817, aged nearly twenty-two years. The oldest person was probably Mrs. Sibillah Dexter (successively the wife of Mr. Samuel Thurston, and of Captain Samuel Dexter, both of Hardwick), who died at New Braintree, July 13, 1849, at the age of one hundred years, as inscribed on her head-stone, and on the Town Record of New Braintree. The head-stone of Mr. Asahel Billings, who died July 16, 1838, represents him to have attained the age of one hundred years; and the Town Record calls him 99; both overrate his age, which probably did not exceed 97, and was equalled or exceeded by that of three others, at least: Mrs. Mary, widow of Daniel Billings, who died June 8, 1835, aged 97; Mrs. Hannah, widow of David Aiken, who died July 23, 1837, aged 97; and Mrs. Olive, widow of Ephraim Ruggles, who died August 3, 1858, aged 98.

About the commencement of the present century, a burial-place was established in the southwesterly part of the town, near the place where the Baptist meeting-house stood. It contains many graves, a reasonable proportion of which are designated by suitable memorials. The earliest date which I observed is on the head-stone of Abel Burt, son of Rev. Ebenezer Burt, who died June 23, 1803, aged 9 months. The greatest age denoted on any head-stone is that of Mr. Samuel L. Robinson, who died January 18, 1863, aged 95; and nearly approaching this is the age of Mr. Henry Higgins, who died March 15, 1837, aged 94. It is highly probable that Mr. Jesse Snow, who died in June, 1825, aged 96, was buried here, but no head-stone is found where it might be expected to stand, near that of his wife, Mrs. Mary Snow, who died February 5, 1813, aged 77.¹ Much credit is due to those who have charge of this cemetery for keeping it in so good condition in all respects.

In the northerly part of the town, near Barre, is a very neat inclosure, apparently a private burial-place belonging to the Taylor family. The earliest date is on the head-stone of Seth Taylor, who died July 7, 1811, aged 66, and the greatest age is inscribed on that of Sylvanus Taylor, who died April 5, 1849, aged 75.

In the old cemetery, near the Common, in addition to the poetical inscriptions, common to others at the same date, a few are found which appear to be original: —

Beneath this stone a noble Captain's laid

On a large head-stone, erected agreeably to a vote of the town, the following epitaphs are inscribed in parallel columns: — mortality.

Adieu to sickness pain and death
 Adieu to vanities and cares
 Submissive I resign my breath
 And rise to Bliss beyond the stars.

With heartfelt Joy I yield my breath
 And quit a life of pain and woe
 Rejoicing pass the scene of death
 To live where Joys forever flow.

Almighty Father hear my prayer
 And send salvation to this land
 May this my people be thy care
 And ever dwell at thy right hand.

New transports now inspire my frame
 With joys celestial and sublime
 O may you catch the heavenly flame
 And soar beyond the reach of time.

Hail kindred spirits of the etherial skie
 We come to visit your divine abode
 To spend a long Eternity on high
 To love adore and bless our Saviour God.

A large stone of peculiar shape stands near the centre of the cemetery, denoting the grave of a "beloved physician," and bearing this inscription: —

SPE
 ETERNE

In memory of Doct^r
 CHARLES DOOLITTLE who died
 June 12th 1785 in the 37th
 Year of his age.

Beneath this dust in ruin lies
 A man once virtuous just and wise
 He view'd his death approaching near
 And gave his life without a tear
 Now we commit with sacred trust
 His body to the mould'ring dust
 His soul we trust has wing'd its way
 To realms of light and endless day.

At the grave of ROSAMOND WINSLOW, who died September 13, 1803, aged 18 (long commemorated by her contemporaries as a maiden of remarkable beauty and amiability), a head-stone bears a stanza which expresses the idea so frequently found in early grave-yard literature, but clothed in a form of simplicity and tenderness which I do not remember to have seen elsewhere : —

Oh, my dear friend, I once like you
Did stand such monuments to view ;
But with me here you soon must be
And others stand and read of thee.

WHEN the General Court, in June, 1732, granted to the proprietors of this township a little more than one third part of the territory which their ancestors had purchased from the Indians, the boon was conferred “ on the conditions following, viz. : That they within the space of five years settle and have on the spot sixty families (the settlers to be none but such as are natives of New England), each settler to build a good and convenient dwelling-house of one story high, eighteen feet square, at the least, and clear and bring to four acres fit for improvement, and three acres more, well stocked with English grass, and also lay out three shares throughout the town, each share to be one sixty third part of the said town, one share for the first settled minister, one for the ministry, and the other for the school ; and also build a convenient meeting-house, and settle a learned and orthodox minister within the term aforesaid."

In conformity with these conditions, the proprietors voted February 21, 1732-3, "that ten acres of land be reserved, near the centre of said tract, to set a meeting-house on, and for a burial-place, and a training-field." On the next day they directed a committee to "lay out one hundred and eleven lots, . . . viz., four lots to each proprietor's share, sixty settlers, and the lots for the ministry, and school;" also, "unanimously voted, that each settler pay into the hands of the committee, upon his drawing his lot, the sum of five pounds towards the defraying the charges of surveying, &c., and the further sum of ten pounds,¹ each for the building a meeting-house within the space of three years after his being admitted." It was also voted, December 27, 1733, "That the proprietors pay the sum of forty-eight pounds, which is to be raised equally out of each whole share, to help pay a minister for preaching the gospel amongst the inhabitants there, for one year next after the 2d day of May next. Also voted that the settlers, both resident and non-resident, pay fifteen shillings each, as their part and proportion of a further encouragement for a minister to preach; and that Mr. Timothy Ruggles be desired to procure some suitable person to serve them for the same."

The first person employed, under this arrangement, was apparently Mr. Ephraim Keith, who probably commenced his labors at the time specified, May 2, 1734, and continued through the year. At a meeting of the proprietors, September 10, 1735, it was "voted, that the parcel of land lying between Draper's lot, No. 1, and Esq. Willis's lot, No. 2, about fifty or sixty acres, be granted to the Rev. Mr. Ephraim Keith, for his preaching to the people at a place called Lambstown last year, in full discharge of his due from said proprietors, his accepting the same, and likewise a note of fifteen pounds ten shillings of Mr. Joseph Haskell, of Rochester, and he to have full power to receive the same." Whether he continued to preach here for a longer period does not appear. He was at Petersham a few Sabbaths in 1736,² but soon abandoned the ministry, having was afterwards styled the "three hundred pounds," or the "ten pounds," until the matter was fully settled, March 7, 1747-8.

never been ordained. He was son of Joseph, and grandson of Rev. James Keith of Bridgewater, born in 1707, grad. H. C. 1729, and, after a brief service in the pulpit, returned to his native town, and devoted himself to agriculture. He was appointed justice of the peace in 1762, and died about 1781.

Rev. David White seems to have commenced preaching as a candidate for settlement about July, 1736. At a meeting April 4, 1737, it was "voted that the sum of twenty-eight pounds and sixteen shillings be raised, to pay Mr. David White for his service in the ministry, for his victualling and horse-keeping, for the quarter of a year before his ordination;" also "that the year wherein Mr. White's salary be paid begin the first of October." Also voted, "that the sum of fifty pounds be raised for the Rev. Mr. White, for his half year salary, beginning October the first Anno Dom. 1736." A permanent arrangement of the salary was made March 6, 1737-8, when it was voted "that the town give the Rev. Mr. David White for his yearly salary one hundred pounds per year, for five years successively, beginning at the first of Oct. Anno Domini 1736; and a further sum and sums from year to year for ten years next coming, namely, one hundred and five pounds to be paid at the expiration of the [1] year, from the aforesaid first of Oct. 1736; and to increase the said sum, five pounds a year, yearly, until his yearly and stated salary shall come to one hundred and fifty pounds: and that sum, namely, one hundred and fifty pounds to be paid him yearly during his continuance in the work of the Gospel ministry in this place; and the said sum of money to be paid in the common currency of this Province, at the rate and in the proportion that Bills of Credit are now valued with silver money, namely, reckoning twenty-seven ² shillings in Bills equal to one ounce of silver."

Soon after the commencement of Mr. White's labors, a church was organized in Hardwick (then called Lambstown), and on the same day he was ordained to the work of the ministry. These solemnities, together with the preliminary proceedings, are duly entered upon "The Church Record;" to wit:—

"Lambstown, Oct. 20, 1736. The members of other churches, living in Lambstown, met together and concluded upon the following particulars respecting Church Government, viz :

Ephraim Keith was paid fifty shillings a day for three days preaching past." Willson's Address at Petersham, July 4, 1854, p. 29.

² A modification was made September

22, 1746, when it was "voted to allow Mr. David White's salary to be at thirty-six shillings per ounce for the present year." At a later day the salary was reduced to one hundred pounds per annum, exclusive of the income of the ministerial land.

“1. That there should be no relation required of those that are received into the church.

“2. That after the minister has taken an account of the knowledge and faith of those that have a desire to come into the church, and is well satisfied therewith, that they shall be received into full communion in the church upon their making a public confession of their faith.

“3. That the power of calling church meetings lay in the power of the minister.

“4. That Messrs. Christopher Paige and George Abbot should sign letters missive to the Pastor and Delegates of several churches, to gather a church in Lambstown and ordain Mr. David White Pastor thereof.

“November y^e 17th 1736. A Church was gathered and embodied in Lambstown, and the members of the church publicly invited and chose Mr. David White to be their pastor. Accordingly, the same day, the said Mr. David White was ordained Pastor of the Church of Christ in Lambstown¹ by prayer and laying on of hands of the Presbytery.

“The names of the men that solemnly entered into a church state in Lambstown, that before were members of other churches:—Christopher Paige, George Abbot, Thomas Perry, Joseph Allen, John Wells, John Kidder, Richard Church. The names of the men that entered into a church in Lambstown, which before were not members in full communion in other churches, but were then received into the church:—Eleazar Warner, Nathan Carpenter, Experience Johnson, Samuel Robinson, Samuel Gillet.²

“Dec. y^e 3^d 1736. The Church of Christ in Lambstown met together, and after a unanimous vote to choose two men to the office of Deacons in said church, Mr. Christopher Paige and Mr. Joseph Allen were chosen to the office of Deacons, by a majority of the votes of the church.

¹ The names of the Ordaining Council are not recorded; but the moderator was Rev. William Williams, probably pastor of the church in Hatfield, where Mr. White was born. The Proprietors voted, June 29, 1737, “that the two hundred acres of land, laid out by Mr. Timothy Ruggles and Mr. Christopher Paige to the first settled minister, be settled on and recorded to the Reverend Mr. David White, now their settled minister (as appears by the moderator, Mr. William Williams), to him his heirs and assigns forever.”

² Whether it were the usual custom, at that period, to exclude females from participating in the organization of a church, or not, it is certain that several women were here at this time, who did not become members until two or three months later, although they were members of other churches, in good standing.

“Oct. y^e 9th 1737. The Church voted, that no person living in Lambstown, formerly belonging to another church, shall have liberty to partake of the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper without a letter of recommendation, after they have had a sufficient time to get one, without a good and sufficient reason why they have not done it.”¹

Having organized a church, and settled a pastor with a fixed salary, it became necessary to devise ways and means for the regular payment of that salary. By a vote of the Proprietors, February 22, 1732–3, each settler was bound to pay fifteen shillings per year, “to help pay a minister for preaching the gospel,” and each of the twelve proprietors was pledged to contribute four pounds for the same purpose. But these several sums, namely: forty-eight pounds by the proprietors, and forty-five pounds by the sixty settlers, amounted to no more than ninety-three pounds, while the salary promised was one hundred pounds, with a prospective increase to one hundred and fifty pounds. At the present time, such a small deficiency may seem scarcely worthy of notice; but in the “day of small things,” it was a matter of great importance to the pioneers. The settlers, not yet fully incorporated as a town, had no power to tax the unimproved lands, and the proprietors did not impose such a tax. Indeed, it would seem that they discontinued their annual contribution of forty-eight pounds, after partial town privileges were granted to the inhabitants.² The burden was heavy, and an appeal was made to the General Court for authority to tax all the land in the township, whether improved or not, and whether owned by resident or non-resident proprietors; also for incorporation as a town, with full authority to raise money for all lawful purposes, by taxation. The Court records do not indicate whether the petition for liberty to impose a tax was granted, or rejected; but it is certain that the proprietors secured a delay of incorporation for one year. The inhabitants became impatient; and at two meetings, October 19, and November 2, 1738, resolved on another effort for incorporation, and liberty to tax the lands of all proprietors. Their agent, Mr. Christopher Paige, presented their petition December 8, 1738. A committee of the proprietors remonstrated. But on the 15th day of the same month the petition was granted; a tax of three half pence per acre on all the land in the township was authorized to be assessed annually for three years, to be applied "one half thereof to the Reverend Minister there for his better encouragement and more comfortable support, the residue for building and finishing a handsome Meeting-house, for the better accommodating the inhabitants in attending the public worship of God;" and the agent was empowered to bring in a bill for the incorporation of the township. This bill, having passed both Houses, received the Governor's approval, January 10, 1739.

It does not appear from the Records when the first meeting-house was erected; but the inhabitants held a meeting in it February 9, 1736-7. It was probably not very large or elegant. The bills allowed for materials and labor appear to have been less than fifty pounds. It was not entirely finished until after August 8, 1738, when it was "voted that the town will finish shingling the old meeting-house, and finish the seats, and make forms as shall be needed, and build the minister's pew."¹ Its size and value may be estimated by the fact that the town voted, March 1, 1742-3, to dispose of it "at a vendue, and accordingly sold it to James Robinson for sixteen pounds, old tenor." This first meeting-house was erected on the "ten acres" originally devoted to public use, and probably stood on the easterly side of the old road, long ago discontinued, running southerly from the present residence of Mr. John W. Paige, nearly parallel with the turnpike, to the road to Ware. It is not unlikely that the precise spot was about midway between the two points last indicated, at the northwest corner of the "ten acres," the spot which was afterwards given by the proprietors, for a similar use, to "those people called the separate Society in Hardwick."²

Wherever this house stood, like those generally erected by

² In my address at the Centennial Celebration in 1838, it was stated that this meeting-house "stood on the Common, about midway between the two present meeting-houses;" and that the new house, erected in 1741, was "placed within ten feet of the old one," pp. 19-21. From whom I received this tradition I do not remember. I consulted several of the "oldest inhabitants," more than forty years ago, and gathered from them much traditional lore; but in this case I was misinformed. The town voted July 29, 1740, to "set the meeting-house on the ten acres, on which the old meeting-house stands." But the present Common was not a part of the "ten acres" as has already been stated. The old meeting-house, therefore, did not stand on the present Common, but probably about half a mile northwesterly from it, near the summit of the hill.

pioneers it was small and inconvenient, designed only for temporary use ; moreover its location was unsatisfactory. Accordingly it was voted, January 16, 1737-8, "that the town will build a new meeting-house: that said meeting-house be built fifty feet long, and forty feet wide, and twenty-two feet between joints, and set two feet from the ground: that Joseph Allen, John Wells, Christopher Paige, Benjamin Smith, and Benjamin Ruggles, be a committee to see to the building or letting out said frame, and finish the outside, and glaze the same with square glass set in wood, according to their discretion." A week later, under a warrant "to see whether the town will choose a man to go down to the Proprietors' Committee to see whether they have power to dispose of the three hundred pounds that was voted to build the meeting-house," and for other purposes, it was voted January 23, 1737-8, "that Deacon Christopher Paige be chosen to carry a letter to the Proprietors' Committee, and to bring an answer back: — that the new meeting-house be raised by the first of July next, provided the three hundred pounds come from the Proprietors: — that the meeting-house be set on "Gamblin's Lot,¹ on the east side of the Great Meadow Brook." At the next meeting of the Proprietors, September 7, 1738, it was "Voted, that the Proprietors are willing that a new meeting-house be built, provided it be set on the spot of land already agreed upon by the Proprietors and settlers:² and that a committee be chosen out of the Proprietors to join with the committee that the settlers shall choose, to agree upon the dimensions of the house, and other things necessary in order to effect the building a convenient house for the public worship of God there: and that the remaining part of the six hundred pounds, which is three hundred, formerly agreed upon by the Proprietors, to be for the building a meeting-house, be applied to that use and no other whatsoever." The town appointed a committee, October 2, 1738, "to join with the Proprietors' committee, to agree upon the dimensions of the meeting-house," etc., and another committee

pect in every direction, and was a more eligible site for a meeting-house than that which was finally selected, except that it was not so near the centre of the township.

November 2, 1738, "to agree with the Proprietors' committee upon things necessary in order to effect the building of a convenient meeting-house in Lambstown; and that the said committee may give to the Proprietors a discharge from building said meeting-house, upon their giving good security to the town of Lambstown for the payment of the three hundred pounds appropriated for the building of the aforesaid meeting-house."

The vote, adopted January 23, 1737-8, "that the meeting-house be set on Gamblin's Lot," occasioned a sharp controversy between the east and the west sections of the town, which continued two years and a half, until a compromise was effected by abandoning both the "ten acres" and the Gamblin Lot, and placing the house on the present Common. The violence of the contest, and the extreme measures adopted by one of the parties for the accomplishment of its favorite purpose, distinctly appears in the proceedings of a town-meeting, held in June 1739, under a warrant, "(1.) To see whether the town is willing and ready to set off the west part of the town, beginning at Rutland¹ Corner, and so to run a straight line to Muddy Brook, where the road runs over said Brook to go to Quoben;²—and then to run by said Brook to the south line of the town; and said land to be laid to Quoben. (2.) To see whether the town will choose a committee to go down to Boston, to treat with Quoben Committee on the affair,"—it was "Voted, That the town is willing and ready to set off the land on the west side of Muddy Brook, and said land to be laid to Quoben:—that Benjamin Smith, Constant Merrick, Cornelius Cannon be a committee chosen to go down to Boston, to treat with Quoben Committee, or the Rev. Mr. Timothy Ruggles and John Foster Esq., on the affair: that the committee shall have but one man's pay for going to Boston aforesaid. Note. That Samuel Robinson hath entered his detest against the first and second articles in the warrant. Note. That David Sabin hath entered his detest against the first and second articles in the warrant. Note. That John Wells hath entered his detest against sending a committee to Boston. Note. That Experience Johnson hath entered his detest against sending a committee to Boston. Note. That Phinehas Powers hath entered his detest against sending down a committee to Boston." The proposition to "set off the west part of the town" to Quoben was persistently opposed and finally defeated. After wrangling for somewhat more than a year longer, the former decision was reversed, and the majority voted, July 29, 1740, "that they will set the meeting-house on the ten acres on which the old meeting-house stands: — that whereas this town have stated a place to set the new meeting-house on, which will accommodate that part of the town next to Quoben as well as other parts of the town, that the vote that was passed in this town the last year, whereby they signified that they were ready and willing to have a part of this town set off to Quoben, be void and of none effect."

But this did not end the difficulty. The inhabitants of the east part of the town, though temporarily in the minority, made such a sturdy and formidable resistance, that it was not considered prudent to carry the last vote into execution. Accordingly another meeting was held, December 15, 1740, when it was voted "that they will choose a committee¹ to state a place where the meeting-house shall be set in this town, and that their judgement be a final determination of the affair: — Chose Capt. Josiah Conyers, Mr. Elisha Rice, Mr. Noah Ashley, committee: — that all former committees about building the meeting-house in this town be dismissed: — chose Capt. Joseph Allen, Mr. Constant Merrick, John Foster, a committee: — that the committee last chosen shall have the care of building a meeting-house in this town, or to join with the original Proprietors' committee on the affair; and to purchase or otherwise provide land to set said meeting-house on; and that they forthwith proceed to get timber cut and lined, and proceed to have said house framed, and raised, and as far finished as the money will go that the settlers is to pay, and all the money raised or to be raised by the land tax, and to let it out if they shall think best: . . . Chose Mr. Eleazar Warner, Mr. John Wells,² to wait on the committee to state a place to set a meeting-house on, and to go or send to them, to desire them to come to state a place to set the meeting-house on." The committee seem to have selected a spot near the centre of the present Common, instead of the "ten acres" otherwise disposed of, by the sale of nine and a half acres, and the gift of half an acre to the "Separate Society." The erection of the long desired edifice during the ensuing year is indicated by a vote, November 23, 1741, to pay Samuel Robinson for rum and other refreshments, furnished at the "raising of the new meeting-house." The house was not finished, however, until several years later, though it was made habitable. The proprietors did not promptly enforce the payment of the "three hundred pounds," and it was not easy to raise the funds necessary to complete the work.¹ When the town was ready to abandon and sell the old house, and did sell it, March 1, 1742-3, the third article in the warrant, "to see if the town will raise money . . . to build the pulpit and minister's pew, and body of seats," was passed over without action. The house seems to have been merely a shell at that time. Three years later, February 25, 1745-6, a settlement was made with the committee, by which it appeared that they had thus far expended £409. 9. 3. in the erection of the house; they had received of "money raised by the land-tax, £110. 1. 2.; and of the ten pounds they have received £243. 0. 0.;" in all £353. 1. 2. To meet the deficiency of £56. 8. 1., there was an uncollected balance of the land-tax £54. 18. 10., and of the ten pounds not yet gathered £57. 0. 0., in all £111. 18. 10. The account was not fully settled until December 23, 1747. Even then the house remained in an unfinished state; for two years later, December 25, 1749, it was "voted that the town will finish the meeting-house:—voted that they will finish it by plastering it;" and £300. 0. 0. was granted to Christopher Paige and Joseph Allen, to finish the inside of the house. This work seems to have been accomplished before August 29, 1750, when it was voted to seat the people anew, "the highest payers in the highest seats, having respect to age and other qualifications, except such as have pews in the meeting-house." The house contained a few pews; but the larger part of it, as was then customary, was occupied by long seats, called "the body of seats," for males on one side of the centre aisle, and for females on the other. Besides these, it seems several chairs were used; for it was voted, March 4, 1750-1, "that the chairs standing in the alleys be ordered into the place left behind the women seats, and to stand nowhere else." One more notice closes my account of this meeting-house: it was voted, March 4, 1754, "that the town refuse to let the young manifest in their action at a town meeting August 14, 1741, "during Mr. White's indisposition," when it was "Voted, to hire a minister to preach in this town for two months, if the town shall need so long:—voted to choose a man to go to Mr. Frink, and see if he can hire him for a reasonable price: and if not, to hire another,—the best he can and cheapest."

² "Two men, one at each end of the town," as stated in the warrant.

men that have built a seat in the women's side galleries to have it there: voted, that the same persons have liberty to build their seat on the men's side gallery."

This long controversy in regard to the place of public worship must have grieved the heart of Rev. Mr. White, who was eminently a man of peace; but he probably lamented even more bitterly certain dissensions in the church itself, which sadly disturbed its harmony and prosperity, and which culminated in the resignation of two of its deacons in 1749. "The Church of Christ in Hardwick met together," September 9, 1747, "to hear and consider Deacon Christopher Paige's reasons for absenting himself from the public worship and ordinances of God." After due consideration, the church voted that his reasons did not furnish a satisfactory excuse, and accordingly laid him "under censure," and suspended him "from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper." Unwilling to cast off utterly a brother, who was not only their first elected deacon, but also one of the most active and honored citizens of the town, before proceeding to extremities the church voted, May 24, 1748, "that the Rev. Mr. Edwards, of Northampton, Mr. Billings, of Coldspring,¹ Mr. Abercrombie, of Pelham, Mr. Whitney, of Nitchawagg,² be applied to, to come to Hardwick and give their advice in the case that is between the church and Deacon Paige." The council assembled and gave advice; but the proceedings do not appear on record. "At a church meeting in Hardwick, December y^e 20th, 1748, voted, that the church comply and fall in with the advice of the Rev. Ministers on the 29th day of June last, in the case depending between the church and Deacon Christopher Paige. Upon which it was proposed to Deacon Paige whether he would comply with the said advice, and he declared that he would not comply with the substance of it. Upon which declaration, the church voted, that Deacon Christopher Paige be proceeded with, by giving him the second admonition." Nothing further in regard to this case appears on record until April 13, 1749, when "Deacon Paige's desire of laying down the office of deacon was mentioned to the church, and the major part thereof complied with and gratified him in his desire, and dismissed him from said office of deacon."

The cause of this controversy between the church and its senior deacon does not appear on record, nor has it been preserved even by tradition. On the one hand, we cannot well suppose it to have been of a trivial character, as it involved such serious results. On the other, there is no evidence of aggravated guilt on either side. The council which met June 29, 1748, either exonerated the church from blame, or administered so slight a rebuke and required so little concession, that it was voted, December 28, 1748, "that the church comply and fall in with the advice of the Rev. Ministers." And although Deacon Paige "declared that he would not comply with the substance of it," he evidently had not forfeited his good name as a Christian and as a trustworthy citizen: — at the first town-meeting after the decision of the council he was elected moderator, selectman, and assessor, to which offices he was re-elected the next year, after he had resigned the office of deacon; and the church in Petersham, whose pastor had been a member of the advising council and fully understood the merits or demerits of the whole case, admitted him to fellowship in full communion. Whereupon, "At a church meeting in Hardwick, May y^e 20th, 1752, Voted (1.) To send to the church in Nichawaug, to signify to them that we look upon their conduct in receiving Deacon Christopher Paige into their church to be irregular, and matter of just offence, and to desire a brotherly conference with them, to make up the difference. (2.) Voted, that Mr. White, Deacon Freeman, Deacon Allen, Deacon Cooper, Nathaniel Whitcomb, Lieut. Merrick, and Ensign Warner, undertake this business as a committee. The said committee are empowered by the church to make up the whole difference with the church at Nichawaug respecting their receiving Deacon Paige, if they can agree; if not, to propose to them to join with us in the choice of a council to advise in the matter." What response was made by the Petersham church does not appear. So far as the Hardwick records show, the whole matter rested for nearly twenty years, until June 21, 1770, when it was voted "that this church do overlook what the church of Christ in Petersham formerly did relative to Deacon Christopher Paige, and are now in charity with said church." This was a substantial acknowledgment that no good reason existed why he should be debarred from Christian privileges.

Troubles seldom come singly. "At a church meeting in Hardwick March y^e 2^d, 1748 (1748-9) Deacon Samuel Robinson desired the church that he might lay down his office of deacon in said church; which desire the church complied with."¹ Like

March 1, 1746-7, he was called simply "John Cooper;" but when his wife was admitted, July 9, 1751, she was styled "wife of Deacon John Cooper."

his senior in office, Deacon Robinson was an active and energetic leader in public affairs, and his secession tended to weaken the church, through its effect on many of its members. He held office a short time. "April y^e 30th, 1746. At a church meeting in Hardwick, Samuel Robinson was chosen to the office of a deacon in said church, by a majority of the members; which office he afterwards accepted." His delay, if not actual hesitancy, in accepting the office probably foreshadowed his reason for resigning it so soon. About this time an extraordinary wave of religious excitement passed over New England and engulfed many churches. The controversy waxed so sharp and bitter that many withdrew from the established churches, and were thenceforth styled "New Lights," or more generally "Separates," of whom more will be said in another place. In this movement Deacon Robinson was early interested, and became a prominent leader. He felt constrained, therefore, to "lay down his office." It does not appear that there was any other cause for his resignation. The church afterwards called him and several of his associates to account, and censured them for withdrawing "from the public worship of God at the meeting-house in Hardwick;" but there is no evidence that any of them were excommunicated from the church for that offence.¹

For the next thirty years the records indicate almost uninterrupted peace and harmony in the church. Few cases of discipline are mentioned, and these of such a nature that the offenders were forgiven, and "admitted to former privileges."

A change was made in regard to the psalms and hymns proper to be sung, and to the manner of singing them. "March 10, 1765. It being moved to the church after public exercise on the Sabbath, whether Messieurs Tate and Brady's version of the Psalms should be sung in the public worship of God, — voted in the affirmative."² "At a church meeting held in Hardwick at the meeting-house, June 21, 1770, voted, with respect to the present method of singing in public worship, that one half of the portion that shall be sung shall be read, line by line, as has been the former practice in this Congregation, sung in some old tune; that

² President Dunster's revision of the Bay Psalm Book had probably been in use up to this time. Tate and Brady's version was used, until the town voted,

March 7, 1791, "that Doct. Watts' Psalms and Hymns be introduced to be sung in this town, in the room of Tate's and Brady's; and that they are to begin to be sung in the congregation within three months." Various changes have been made more recently.

the other half shall be sung without being thus read in some new tune; that the psalm or hymn that shall be appointed to be sung at the Communion Table shall be read, line by line, and sung in some old tune, so called." The change, thus partially made, became entire at a later period; but it was exceedingly disagreeable to many, and of some it is said they would leave the meeting-house while psalms or hymns were sung without having been read, line by line, and return after this offensive exercise was concluded.¹

About this time two deacons were elected: November 9, 1769, "Capt. William Paige was chosen to the office of deacon, by a great majority of votes," probably in the place of Deacon John Cooper, who seems to have died, or removed a few months previously; and April 28, 1774, "Mr. John Bradish was chosen to be a deacon in said church, by a majority of votes." Soon afterwards, however, danger of losing an important officer appeared in an unexpected quarter. The senior surviving deacon was so much exercised in spirit by the shortcomings of his brethren, that he absented himself from the Lord's Supper, and in rendering reasons for so doing, preferred grave charges against the church in general, and one of its members in particular. The proceedings are recorded under date of February 1, 1779: "Deacon Joseph Allen having withdrew himself from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, he gave in his reasons in writing to the Reverend Pastor, Mr. White, which are these: (1.) The young people walking disorderly on the Sabbath, both in time of public worship and in the intermission season. (2.) The youth frequently gathering in set frolics at a public house, and carrying them on with music and dancing, both males and females, and many of them using profane language. (3.) That he suspected that there were some in this town that had owned the baptismal covenant, and promised publicly that they would perform the duties of it, yet that they walked disorderly, and neglected family prayer. (4.) That there were some in full communion in this church, that absented themselves from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and also neglected public worship, and yet were not called to give the reasons of their neglect of these ordinances. (5.) The special reason why he withdrew at that time was the conduct of a Brother, viz., Thomas Robinson, at the last church meeting and the town-meeting following, which appeared to him not of a piece, not in the simplicity of the gospel, not agreeable to the Scripture.

“The church were regularly called and assembled together to hear Deacon Allen’s reasons, at the meeting-house in Hardwick, on Wednesday, Feb. 24, 1779, and after a consideration of the abovementioned matters of grievance, came into the following resolves : — Article 1. Young people walking disorderly on the Sabbath ; resolved, that the March meeting being near at hand, when tyding-men¹ and wardens are to be chosen for the year, whose special business it is to inspect and prevent all disorder on the Sabbath, this affair is submitted to and left with them, as their proper business. Article 2. As to young people gathering together in set frolics, especially at a public house, resolved, that we will every one of us here present, that are heads of families, take all proper care that the youth under our care and charge, to prevent them from running into these frolics, and acting any part in them. Article 3. As to those persons that are called half-members² &c., resolved, that we will keep a watch over them, according to our solemn promise when we received [them] into their present standing in the church ; that we will reprove them when we see them walk disorderly, and encourage them to the practice of virtue and piety by our counsels and our good practice. Article 4. That there were some persons in full communion in this church that absented themselves from the public worship of God and the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper ; two persons were named in particular ; resolved, that (these persons not being present) the Rev. Mr. White shall send to them, to know their reasons of their neglect of these holy ordinances, and when obtained of them he lay them before the church to consider whether [the] reasons are a sufficient excuse or not. Article 5. The special reason given why he withdrew himself at that time was the conduct of a Brother, viz., Thomas Robinson, &c. The church having considered and weighed this matter, some few of the church voted that said Robinson his changing the side that he first held with was an evidence that he had changed his mind ; but the majority of the church thought that the matter did not belong to them to determine, and therefore declined voting any way; and thus the matter was left respecting Deacon Allen and Thomas Robinson, and no further determination or [illegible] upon it."¹

It would seem that the meeting-house erected about 1741 proved unsatisfactory, and in little more than a quarter of a century, preparations were made for the erection of a new one, equal if not superior in size and magnificence to any church edifice in the county. September 7, 1767, "Voted that the town will build a meeting-house in Hardwick for public worship. Voted, that they will set said house (if they can purchase the land) in the field at the north end of the burying place, occupied by Mr. Asa Hatch." This field contained somewhat more than one acre and three quarters of land, and was owned by John Rowe, Esq., of Boston, who conveyed it to the town for £6. 13. 4. by deed dated May 30, 1768.² Without waiting for the execution of the deed, the town proceeded at once to make arrangements for the erection of the house, and on the 21st of October accepted the report of a committee previously appointed: "The committee have heard the proposals of Deac. Joseph Allen and Mr. Joseph Safford, who are willing and ready to undertake the building of said house, and finish it in a workmanlike manner, only for the benefit of the money they can raise by the sale of the pews agreeable to a plan herewith humbly laid before the town for their consideration. TIM^o RUGGLES, in the name of the committee." "Voted that the town will choose a committee to contract with Deac. Joseph Allen and Mr. Joseph Safford to build a meeting-house, as mentioned in the report of the former committee."³ Voted that Mr. Daniel Oliver, Brig^r Ruggles, Capt. Mandell, Deac. Fay,⁴ and Capt. Paige, be the committee. Voted, to build a steeple to said house, and that the town pay what said steeple shall cost more than a convenient porch for stairs into the galleries." May 16, 1768, "Voted the sum of £66. 13. 4. to the un-

² The description is "one acre, three quarters, and six rods of land, lying in said Hardwick, adjoining to the public burying-place there, bounded as followeth: beginning at the northerly corner of said burying-place, and from thence running northerly, by the road, 22 rods; then turning at right angles, and running easterly 13 rods; there turning at right angles, and running southerly 22 rods; there turning at right angles, and running westerly, by the burying place, 13 rods to the bounds first mentioned." Worcester Deeds, lix. 113.

undertakers of the meeting-house, to enable them to proceed in building a steeple to said house." May 18, 1769, "Voted to raise £120 lawful money, to enable the undertakers to finish the steeple, besides what has already been voted," and "to choose a committee to treat with the undertakers, in order that they be obliged to finish the steeple for the above price." October 19, 1769, under a warrant "to see if the town will allow the undertakers of the meeting-house to build a pew in the steeple above the west gallery," it was "voted, to shut up the place in the steeple, over the west gallery, which was proposed for a pew." October 27, 1769, "Voted to grant the undertakers of the meeting-house the privilege of building a pew over the west gallery, providing they make it tight and close; and the town reserved the privilege of having an officer to set in the pew, to oversee the boys."¹ The house was finished probably not long before December 31, 1770, at which date it was "voted to choose a committee to seat the meeting-house² and that said committee consist of five persons; and made choice of Capt. William Paige, Lieut. Roland Sears, Deac. Joseph Allen, Capt. Constant Myrick, and Paul Mandell for said committee; and they to seat each person according to age and pay to the last year's valuation or invoice. Voted, that the front seats in the gallery be appropriated to the use of the men. The question was put, whether the town would grant the seats on the side galleries next the front gallery for the use of the men and women singers, and it passed in the negative.³ Voted, that the town will purchase the pew, the west side the pulpit stairs, for the use of the minister's family for the time being, viz., to be kept by the town as a ministry for the singers, and what room necessary for that purpose, reported as follows: that they thought it would be proper to appropriate the west division of the front seat and the first and second seats in the division of the side gallery next adjoining, for said purpose; and the town accepted of the above report." Subsequently the east division of the front seat and the adjoining side gallery were substituted, and became a permanent location; and during the first quarter of the present century, it may be doubted whether better church music, both vocal and instrumental, was heard in the county, than that which was rendered by the voluntary choir who entered into that court with thanksgiving.

pew, at £26. 13. 4., being the sum set on the same by Deac. Joseph Allen and Joseph Safford, undertakers for building the meeting-house." August 19, 1771, under a warrant, "to see if the town would purchase the pew adjoining the pulpit, there not appearing persons as was proposed to purchase the same," it was voted, to buy the pew adjoining the pulpit,¹ and to keep it for their own use. "Voted, to give the undertakers of the meeting-house £20. lawful money, for said pew." As a proper adjunct to the temple for worship, the town voted, May 18, 1772, "to allow Deac. Joseph Allen 10^s 8^d for making the stocks."

Having completed the house, of which our ancestors were justly proud (for it was then one of the most elegant in the county), they took some measures for its preservation, which their less hardy descendants might not altogether approve. They voted, March 2, 1772, "that there be no stows carried into the new Meeting-house² with fire in them." How long this prohibition was enforced, I know not. It is certain, however, that foot-stoves were generally used in the house more than seventy years ago. But the larger stoves, designed to make the whole house comfortable, were not introduced until within the last fifty or sixty years. At the present day, it would be regarded as a painful sacrifice of bodily comfort, to sit in the midst of winter, without any fire in the house, to listen to a sermon one or two hours long, and other services of corresponding length; but the men who were preparing, and prepared, to march barefooted in the snow, and lodge on the cold ground, in defence of their liberties, could easily undergo such a slight inconvenience.

These were apparently the golden days of Mr. White; but they were soon overshadowed. The political excitement preceding and during the Revolutionary War so entirely engrossed public attention, that the church became comparatively inactive. For several years before 1779, scarcely any action directly affecting the interests of the church can be gleaned from the records of either the church or the town, in addition to what has already been mentioned. In 1779 the bodily infirmities of Mr.

tion of the Lord's Supper. It was also occupied by the moderator, selectmen, and town clerk, at town-meetings, until the town house was erected.

² The old meeting-house was sold, March 2, 1772, at auction, for £44, to be removed within three months.

White, indicated by the employment of an assistant for two months, in 1741, before mentioned, seem to have increased to such an extent that the settlement of a colleague was considered desirable. Contrary to the usual custom, the town took the lead, and at a regular meeting, January 25, 1779, requested the church to unite with the town in giving a call to Mr. Joel Foster.¹ "Feb. 1, 1779. The church . . . being regularly called and assembled together at the meeting-house, to know the minds of the members of the church respecting giving a call to Mr. Joel Foster, to settle in the work of the ministry in said town, as a colleague with the Rev. Mr. White; the vote being put, there appeared thirteen members that were desirous of giving Mr. Joel Foster a call as above, and sixteen appeared against." The town was unwilling to yield the point entirely, and on the same day (February 1, 1779), voted, "to apply to Mr. Joel Foster, to preach the gospel in this town for a number of Sabbaths, and chose a committee for that purpose, viz., Jonathan Warner, Timothy Paige, Timothy Newton." The effort to obtain this manifestly favorite preacher was in vain, and he was soon ordained at New Salem. After this date, only two votes of the church appear on record during the ministry of Mr. White, the former of which, by the indefiniteness of its conclusion, indicates some failure of his mental energy: "July 5, 1781. The church regularly called and met at the meeting-house; this thing was proposed: (1) Whether it be the mind of the church that all baptized are visible members of the church, and under the special care and watch of it; voted in the affirmative: (2) If it be the mind of this church that the baptized persons under the care of this church, that are arrived to years of discretion, be called upon to see whether they own their baptismal vow or not; voted in the affirmative. Agreeable to the above vote, in a convenient time, it was moved in the congregation that all that was willing to comply with the above vote, by owning their baptismal vows, would show their consent by standing up; and a great number did, — too many to set down their names." The last

C. 1777, was ordained at New Salem, June 9, 1779, dismissed for lack of competent support, January 21, 1802, and installed at East Sudbury (now Wayland), September 7, 1803, where he died in office, September 25, 1812. "He possessed excellent pulpit talents, and was specially gifted in prayer." 2 Mass. Hist. Coll., iv. 62. He was brother to Rev. Daniel Foster, who was born at Stafford, in 1751, grad. D. C. 1777, was ordained at New Braintree, October 29, 1778, as colleague with Rev. Benjamin Ruggles, and died in office, September 4, 1795.

vote recorded by Mr. White had reference to the employment of an assistant in his labor: "May 13, 1782. At a church meeting regularly called and met in the meeting-house, it was put to vote whether they would invite Mr. Josiah Spaulden¹ to preach any more with us; and it passed in the affirmative by a very great majority." Although the ministry of Mr. Spaulding did not result in his permanent settlement, it did produce a profound impression on the church and congregation. It does not appear at what precise date he commenced or ended his labor here;² but he was actively engaged May 13, 1782, and was then desired to continue; and the records show that during the eight months from December 30, 1781 to August 25, 1782, ninety-one persons were admitted to the church by profession,—a larger number than had been thus admitted during the preceding twenty years.³

Rev. David White, son of Deacon John and Mrs. Hannah (Wells) White, was born at Hatfield, July 1, 1710 (see Genealogies). He grad. Y. C. 1730, was ordained pastor of the first church in Hardwick on the day of its organization, November 17, 1736, and after a faithful ministry of more than forty-eight years died in office, January 6, 1784. His salary was small, and probably was never so much as three hundred dollars per annum, in silver money, though nominally more in paper currency. Yet on this sum, together with presents, and the fruits of his own industry, he managed to support his family, and to give both his sons a public education. His talents were respectable, but by no means brilliant. His success in giving satisfaction to his people depended not so much on the energy of his mind, as on the meekness, simplicity, and purity of his heart. He lived in a troublesome period, both political and ecclesiastical. Near the of Worcester Co., p. 127; Hist. of Western Mass., ii. 325.

³ During the pastorate of Mr. White there were added to the original twelve founders of the church, two hundred and eighty-six members by profession, and one hundred and thirteen by letter, in all, three hundred and ninety-nine, being an average of a fraction more than eight per annum. The baptisms were 1,275, including adults.

close of his life the Revolution occurred; and he shared the trials and distresses of his people. But he lived to witness the conclusion of hostilities, and the independence of his country. At a much earlier period, the elements of the ecclesiastical world were violently agitated. About the year 1740 a "new light," as it was called, was discovered. Parties were formed in various churches, who bitterly contended with each other, freely bandying the epithets of fanaticism, on the one hand, and formality, or legal righteousness, on the other. Some churches were rent asunder. And this church did not entirely escape the ravages of the storm which swept through the land. A portion of its members withdrew, and were styled "New Lights," or more generally "Separates." They erected a meeting-house, and established a regular meeting. Mr. White and his church manifested much forbearance, laboring with their dissatisfied, separating brethren, but never using the rod of excommunication. The effect of such measures was favorable. The separate party, as such, became extinct; some of its members removed from the town, and others were reconciled to the church; their meeting-house was demolished, and Mr. White had the happiness to behold again a state of harmony and peace in his parish. Thus, though he encountered storms during the journey of life, the evening of his days was calm and serene, and his sun went down in a clear sky. His wife (who was a niece of Thomas Wells, Esq., of Deerfield), had closed her pilgrimage about six months previously, July 17, 1783.¹ Their virtues are commemorated on their head-stone in the old burying-place, which was erected agreeably to a vote of the town, March 1, 1784, "to be at the cost of setting up grave-stones at Mr. White's grave, and also at Mrs. White's." A committee reported, May 8, 1786, that the grave-stones had been procured, at an expense of £7. 18. 0.; the bill of "Mr. Sikes," the stone-cutter, being £4. 10. 0., and bills for incidental expenses, paid to Captain Warner, David Allen, Benjamin Convers, Widow Doolittle, and Joseph Perry, amounting to £3. 8. 0.

The church met January 9, 1784, three days after the decease of Mr. White, "and made choice of Deac. Joseph Allen as their Moderator while destitute of a minister. Also voted to give the ministers who were bearers at the Rev. Mr. White's funeral, able not only for her lady-like and Christian deportment, but also for her intellectual power, in which she was far superior to her husband.

each of them gloves." Prompt measures were taken to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. White, but for a long time they were unsuccessful. The church appointed a meeting January 22, 1784, "in order to give Mr. Jedson¹ a call to settle in the work of the gospel ministry with us." The town concurred, February 10, 1784, by a vote of "45 for it, and 19 against it, the majority 26." At an adjourned meeting, February 16, 1784, it was proposed to reconsider this vote, "and there appeared 30 for it and 30 against it." The church then voted, June 3, 1784, "to give Mr. Medad Rogers a call to settle with us as a gospel minister in this place, by a number of fifty-three members present." The town concurred June 4, 1784 (12 aff. 1 neg.), and agreed to give Mr. Rogers £200 settlement, and £80 per annum while able to perform pastoral duty, and £40 per annum afterwards; or £100 per annum, and no settlement. At a church meeting, September 2, 1784, "then voted and appointed Wednesday the thirteenth day of October next to ordain Mr. Medad Rogers, Pastor over this church and congregation," and selected the members of the ordaining council. In this action of the church, the town also concurred on the next day, September 3, 1784. But for some reason, not stated in the record, the ordination was not accomplished. During these negotiations, the church met July 1, 1784, "to consult whether the practice of baptizing the children of those that own the covenant, as it is called, is warranted in scripture or not; after debating the matter calmly it was proposed to adjourn the meeting for further consideration. Then voted and adjourned said meeting to the 22^d day of July instant, having first voted that Mr. Rogers be desired to preach a sermon on said subject before the congregation. According to adjournment, the church met, and being opened by prayer, proceeded on the affair above named, and after further debating the matter, it was proposed to adjourn the meeting to Thursday the twelfth of August next, tion, Jan. 23, 1787." He was dismissed in 1791; was installed at Wenham December 26, 1792; dismissed October 22, 1799; installed at Plymouth May 12, 1802; became a Baptist, and was dismissed in August, 1817. He died November 25, 1826. See Bicentennial Book of Malden, p. 166. The Hardwick church in 1784 was decidedly Hopkintonian in sentiment.

at three of clock afternoon: also voted, that those persons that have been heretofore admitted as half-way members,¹ as called, are desired to meet with the church at the same time, to hear their debates on the subject in hand. August twelfth: According to adjournment the church met, and opened by prayer; and after debating the case above named a suitable time it then was put to vote that the church would not admit any more to own the covenant, in order to baptize their children for the future." Thus, while destitute of a pastor, but with due deliberation, and probably under the lead of Deacon Allen, the church discontinued a custom which had existed in the New England churches for more than a century, and which had often been the cause of contention and heart-burnings. It continued in use, for the next half century, in some other churches, but has at last, it is supposed, been entirely abandoned.

At a church meeting, October, 1784, it was "put to vote to see if the church thinks it expedient to give Mr. Medad Rogers a call, a second time, to settle with us in the work of the gospel ministry in this place, and it passed in the affirmative by a number of voters, in favor 40, dissenters 7." The town concurred January 11, 1785, by a vote of 68 affirmative, 40 negative. This effort was fruitless, and the church voted, May 19, 1785, to give Mr. Judson a second call to become its pastor; the vote "passed in the affirmative by upwards of forty members." The town concurred, June 2, 1785, by a vote of 57 affirmative, 19 negative. This effort also failed, and a majority of the church, March 9, 1786, voted "to give Mr. Thomas Crafts a call to settle with us as a gospel minister;" but another meeting was held, March 23, 1786, "to reconsider the call given by this church, 9th in-children are members of the same church with their parents, and when grown up are under the care of that church. But this does not of itself admit them to full communion. Yet when they understand and publicly profess the faith, and are upright in life, and own the covenant, and submit themselves to the government of the church, their children are to be baptized. . . . This decision in regard to baptism is known as the Half-way Covenant, inasmuch as it granted baptism to the children of certain persons who were not qualified for admission to the Lord's Table." McKenzie's History of the First Church of Cambridge, pp. 110, 111.

stant, to Mr. Thomas Crafts, to settle in this place as a gospel minister; then put to vote to recall as above, and it passed in the affirmative." ¹ At a town-meeting, May 7, 1787, on the question of giving a call to Mr. Elijah Kellogg, probably in concurrence with the church, there were "one hundred in favor of it and none against it."

It would seem, from Mr. Holt's letter of acceptance and Dr. Trumbull's sermon at his ordination, that there was great disagreement and contention in both town and church, so that for almost two years they could not agree upon a candidate for the pastorship. The clouds, however, at last dispersed, and the town, April 6, 1789, unanimously concurred with the church in extending an invitation to Mr. Thomas Holt, of Wallingford, Conn., to become their pastor; which invitation he accepted in a letter so characteristic of his habit of amplification, that it is here inserted, as entered on the records of both the church and the town:—

"To the Church of Christ and other Inhabitants of the Town of Hardwick. — Friends and Brethren: The affection and respect which you have manifested towards me are highly worthy of my attention, gratitude, and warmest acknowledgments. The idea of a church destitute of a pastor, and a numerous people without a teacher, — the spirited altercations and unhappy divisions ² which have appeared imminently to threaten the cause of religion and very existence of Christianity in this place, the present perfect unanimity and affection of this church and people, — and the unhappy consequences which would probably follow, should I manifest an excusing disposition, — are considerations very solemn and important. Your present respect and entire union among yourselves exhibits an event which by no means corresponds with my previous expectations, especially your choice of me for your Pastor and Teacher; this, doubtless, is the Lord's doing, and ought to be marvellous in our eyes. But 'who is sufficient for these things?' sufficient to stem the torrent of vice, mixed with delusion, which at the present day appears greatly to threaten the cause of religion. Who among men or angels is sufficient against temptations, internal and external, against the infernal stratagems of the grand apostate, to watch for souls as one who must give an account? The office of a Bishop is a good, though a painful, trying, and laborious work. Since I received an invitation to assume the office and work of a Gospel Bishop or Minister in this place, I have attempted to consider your situation with mature deliberation. A reply to your unanimous invitation is considered as solemnly important to the church and people in this place and to myself. My Fathers and Brethren in the ministry have been consulted, as from experience they know the cares, the trials, and labors of a minister. A consciousness of my self-deficiency, and apparently inadequate ability, excites emotions not the most pleasing; and might I not depend upon divine support and assistance, self-diffidence, discouragement, and despondency, would appear formidable obstacles.

² "We have occasion of abundant joy and thanksgiving to God, that after this Zion hath been covered with a cloud, and experienced unhappy years of controversy and division, he hath visited you in mercy, healed your divisions, and given you uncommon unanimity and peace." Ordination Sermon, at Hardwick, June 25, 1789, by Benjamin Trumbull, A. M., of North Haven, pp. 34, 35.

“ But let us come to the important decision. My friends and brethren; the manifestations of your benevolence and affection towards me, in treating my character and youth with esteem, respect and tenderness, while I have labored among you in word and doctrine, must necessarily excite sensations of peculiar endearment towards you, and presage future exhibitions of the same if not increasing and reciprocal affection. I hope and trust that with humility, dependence, and prayerfulness, I have looked to the great Head of the Church, for his guidance and direction. Your respect, esteem, and affection, manifested as I have already observed, your unexpected, happy and perfect unanimity, in giving me an invitation to take the charge of this church and people, under Jesus Christ the Captain of our salvation, — the pleasing prospect arising from your union and affection of answering the great end of preaching the gospel, of being a happy instrument of building up the kingdom of the Great Redeemer in this place, and in promoting, if not the temporal, yet the highest, the immortal interests of this church and people, — these considerations are powerful arguments and inducements to excite and support a belief that yours is a CALL FROM GOD; that it is the design of the Great Head of the church that he whom you have unanimously chosen should be constituted Pastor of the church and Minister among the people in Hardwick. Trusting not by constraint, but of a ready mind, this public declaration is made, that I comply with your unanimous invitation. I consent, if it should be the divine pleasure, to spend my life and strength in this place, for the cause of Christ, and the interest and immortal happiness of this church and people. Since an inspired apostle hath said, 'If any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel,' it would doubtless be improper and sinful for any one to deny the faith or gospel, which he is to preach, by neglecting a decent support. Again he saith, 'No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier;' and 'even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.' While I may dispense to you the mysteries of the kingdom of God, and preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, — while I spend the remainder of my days, and wear out my life and strength in the cause of the Redeemer, for the purpose of promoting your highest interest, your everlasting peace, — while I sow unto you spiritual things, — is it a great thing if I should reap some of your carnal things? As it would doubtless contribute greatly to your advantage, and my own peace, happiness, and usefulness among you, could I give myself wholly to these things, or the work of the gospel ministry, with full confidence, under the disposal of a wise and beneficent Providence, I must rely upon your generosity and affection, to afford that comfortable and honorable support which I trust comports with your present intention.

"Permit me to acknowledge with thankfulness the peculiar affection, kindness, and generosity, of numbers, manifested by subscription, for the purpose of furnishing a great domestic convenience and defence against the uncomfortable effects of inclement seasons.

"Men, Brethren, and Fathers, I request an interest in your prayers, that I may be furnished abundantly to the great and important work of the evangelical ministry; that I may be made a faithful, zealous, and successful minister of the gospel; that I may be made an eminent and lasting blessing to this church and people; that I may be a son of consolation to the humble broken-hearted penitent, and a son of thunder to the careless impenitent sinner; that my ministration may become a savour of life unto life to immortal souls, and not a savour of death unto death; and that many souls may be given to me for my crown of rejoicing in the day of Jesus Christ. 'Let brotherly love continue. Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.' Let peace, harmony, unanimity, and affection, abound among you. 'Finally, brethren, be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you.' I am, friends and brethren, yours in the Gospel of Christ. THOMAS HOLT, Hardwick, May 23^d, 1789."

Rev. Mr. Holt was ordained¹ June 25, 1789, and for several years the church had peace. Up to this time the records of the church had been kept on loose sheets of paper, so folded that each sheet would make sixteen pages, the larger part of which, though never bound, remain until the present time, but somewhat mutilated. Immediately after Mr. White's decease, the church met, January 15, 1784, and "chose a committee to search the Church Records, viz., Joseph Allen, William Paige, and Nathaniel Paige; also voted, to purchase a church bound book containing two quire of paper." The book was bought but not used until Mr. Holt became pastor of the church. From the old loose records he transferred into the new volume what related to the gathering of the church and the ordination of Mr. White, and entered at full length his own letter of acceptance of his call to the pastorship. Then he inserted, in his remarkably distinct and legible chirography, "The Church's Confession of Faith" and "Covenant." Whether these had been in use from the time when the church was organized, or whether they had been adopted at a more recent period, I am unable to determine; but as they exhibit the form of doctrine professed by the church in 1789, I insert them in full:—

"THE CHURCH'S CONFESSION OF FAITH.

"We believe that there is one true and living God, who is over all blessed forever, who is the Creator, Preserver, and Governor of the Universe. We believe that in the unity of the Godhead there are three distinct Persons, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, each possessed of all divine perfections. We believe that God made Adam, the first man, in his own holy image, consisting in knowledge and true holiness, giving him a law for a rule of his obedience, and entering into a covenant with him, promising life to him and all his posterity in case of perfect obedience, but threatening death in case of disobedience; that Adam broke covenant with God by eating the forbidden fruit, and subjected himself and all his posterity to the wrath and curse of God; so that every man comes into the world in a state of entire alienation from God. We believe that from all eternity God designed to glorify the riches of his grace in the salvation of an elect number of the fallen children of Adam, through the mediation of Jesus Christ. To effect this purpose, we believe that the Lord Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, became man, and offered himself a sacrifice on the cross, to reconcile the Elect to God; and as he was delivered for their offences, so he was raised for their justification, and ascended into heaven to make intercession for them. We believe that it is the peculiar office of the Holy Spirit to apply the benefits of Christ's Redemption to the souls of men, and that he does this by working faith in them, and thereby uniting them to Christ in their effectual calling. We believe that fallen man has lost all power to do that which is spiritually good, and is not able to convert and turn himself to God; and therefore that effectual calling is the special and almighty work of the Spirit of God in and upon the hearts of sinners, whereby, if unwilling, they are made willing in the day of his power to go to Christ for life. We believe that those who are effectually called are justified through the righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ, imputed to them, and received by faith alone. We believe that those who are justified are also sanctified; and that the work of sanctification will be carried on, and they will be enabled to persevere in grace and holiness to the end of their lives. We believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are a Revelation from God, that they are a plain, perfect, and unerring rule of life, and that we ought to believe all their doctrines and obey all their precepts. We believe that God has appointed his ordinances for the spiritual good of his people, for the improvement of grace and holiness in them. We believe that at death the souls of the righteous are made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory and happiness, but the souls of the wicked into torment and misery. We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ will come a second time, to raise the dead and judge the world; then shall the wicked, in their raised bodies, go away into a state of endless misery; but the righteous into life eternal.

"THE COVENANT.

"And now, in a serious and humble sense of our indispensable duty to answer the call of Christ in the gospel, who, notwithstanding our miserable and lost condition by nature and practice, is still inviting us to partake of all the blessings of the Covenant of Grace, as we have obtained help, we do now, in the presence of God, angels, and this assembly, avouch the Lord Jehovah, the only true and living God, to be our God, giving up ourselves to God, the Father, as our Creator, to God, the Son, as our Redeemer, to God, the Holy Ghost, as our Sanctifier, in the way and on the terms of the Covenant of Grace, and in our place, we do engage to bear witness against sin, and, by the assistance of divine grace, to walk in a holy obedience to all the laws and ordinances of Christ, upholding the worship of God in this place, and submitting ourselves to the discipline of Christ, according to his word, contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, which we receive as the only Rule of Faith and Manners."

In the interregnum preceding Mr. Holt's ordination, the church met, May 12, 1785, and elected two additional deacons, — Ebenezer Willis and Nathaniel Paige;¹ so that there were then four officers of that grade. But the number was soon diminished. Deacon Joseph Allen died August 18, 1793, aged 84, after active service as a church officer for the extraordinary period of more than fifty-six years; during the larger portion of which time, according to ancient tradition, he was the leading spirit in the church. He was also the last survivor of those who organized the church in 1736.² Some of his manuscripts, both in prose and rhyme, were published at Brookfield, 1795, in a pamphlet containing 51 pages, octavo, entitled, "The Last Advice and Farewell of Deacon Joseph Allen to the Church and Congregation of Hardwick."

The pastorate of Mr. Holt was uneventful. He zealously

² "July, 1791. It may be remembered

I mentioned in the year 1781, there were two males and three females living, who were members of the church when first gathered. I would now observe that since the beginning of 1789, there has none survived except myself." Last Advice, etc., p. 19.

preached that form of Calvinism which was then styled Hopkinsonianism, as set forth in the "System of Doctrines" arranged by Samuel Hopkins, D. D., and insisted on the most rigid observance of all the forms and ceremonies prescribed by the Puritan Church. Perhaps the same lack of variety in his discourses which afterwards caused dissatisfaction at Essex, may have prevented any signal success here. For some reason no extraordinary interest or activity was developed in the church or congregation. The additions to the church averaged only a fraction more than four per annum, namely, forty-six by profession, and nineteen by letter, sixty-five in all, during the sixteen years of his ministry; being less than half the average number admitted by his predecessor, the Rev. Mr. White. Few cases of discipline occurred in the church, at this period, and none which resulted in excommunication.¹ Gradually the tie which united the pastor and people was weakened, until at length it was sundered, apparently on account of his inability to subsist upon his salary and their unwillingness to increase it; but there must have been some other reason on their part; for immediately after his dismissal, they readily granted a much larger salary to his successor. Mr. Holt's salary was three hundred dollars. Finding this sum, and the income of a small farm which he owned and cultivated, insufficient to supply his wants, after previous ineffectual appeals for relief, he presented to the town a characteristic address at a meeting held March 4, 1805, "to hear a statement or proposition from the Rev. Thomas Holt, and to act thereon as they in their wisdom shall think fit or proper." I quote the record in full:—

"The Rev. Mr. Holt attended and made the following communication.—The inhabitants of the town of Hardwick, assembled in town-meeting, March the 4th, A. D. 1805: Gentlemen, The committee appointed by the town, the last spring, to confer with the undersigned, appeared fully sensible, after conference, that his salary was by no means competent to meet his necessary annual expenditures. Through the medium of the same committee, by their advice, he made a communication to the town, May the 30th, A. D. 1804, respecting the incompetency third, of the articles essential to a support as it would in the year in which he was ordained. The estimate is made on the principal articles from which the inhabitants procure the means of paying their minister's salary. The consequence then appears to be that the nominal sum stipulated for a salary does not at present require hardly two thirds so much property in value as it did in the year 1789, when the contract was established; the whole of the depreciation in the value of the circulating medium must consequently fall on the undersigned, and render his salary greatly below a competency for a support. Hence he cannot suppose it beyond what was mutually expected from the contracting parties at the time of forming the contract, for the town to grant a pecuniary consideration sufficient to make his salary competent for a support.

“It is his request, therefore, that they would grant him a consideration adequate to this purpose. But if the town should judge it unreasonable to grant such pecuniary consideration, yet they surely will not suppose it reasonable that he should be confined to labor in their employment, the remainder of his life, for a stipend so materially inadequate to his necessary expenditures, and so much less in value than what his contract appears originally to have comprised; and it may be added so much less than what has universally been judged no more than adequate to a minister's support in all those towns in this vicinity, nay in the Commonwealth, where ministers have been ordained within six or eight years, and numbers of others where people have granted their ministers a consideration for the present depreciation in the value of their stipulated salaries. Although it is the heart's desire of the undersigned not to leave the town, but to live and die with the people of his charge, with whom he has been connected by a solemn and responsible relation for almost sixteen years, yet the inconveniences necessarily resulting from a salary so much diminished from its original value, and so incompetent to a decent support, compel him, if the town should not alleviate his burdens, to seek a degree of relief by a regular dismissal. If the town then prefer a dissolution of the existing connection to a grant of a consideration for the present reduced state of his salary, then his request is that they would by vote give their consent that he may take a dismissal in the common form, by the advice and consent of an Ecclesiastical Council to be called for that purpose by the Pastor and Church. — Gentlemen, with due consideration, yours in the Gospel of Christ, THOMAS HOLT.
Hardwick, March 4th, 1805.

“The town took the foregoing communication into consideration, and on motion, — will the town grant any additional sum to the Rev. Thomas Holt for his support? it passed in the negative: on motion, — will the town consent that the church join with their Rev. Pastor in calling an Ecclesiastical Council, for his regular dismissal? it passed in the affirmative.”¹ The Council granted an honorable dismissal March 27, 1805.

April 1, 1805. “Voted, to make a present of seventy-five dollars to the Rev. Thomas Holt. Voted, that the Rev. Mr. Holt be requested to preach to us on the approaching Fast-day; Mr. Holt consented to supply the pulpit on said day, by himself or another.”

After his dismissal, Mr. Holt preached occasionally, as opportunity offered, until January 25, 1809, when he was installed as pastor of the church in that part of Ipswich which afterwards became the town of Essex. This new home was not permanent. He “was esteemed a sound, scriptural preacher; but after hearing him two or three years, his parishioners began to complain of a sufficient variety in his discourses, which they first imputed to his not writing them. They therefore chose a committee to wait on him and request him to write his sermons. With this he complied; but as the evil, in their judgment, was not removed, they respectfully requested him to resign. With this also he complied, and on the 20th of April, 1813, he was honorably dismissed by a Council. The parish gave him a hundred dollars to defray the expense of his removal, and he returned to his farm in Hardwick.”²

During the remainder of his life, Mr. Holt cultivated his farm and preached occasionally. He had no other pastorate, but performed some missionary labor, of which he preserved an exact account from day to day, and the sum total at the end of each engagement, in what he styled his “Missionary Journal.” I have three of those Journals before me, describing labors at Paris, Me., from July 26, 1816, to February 26, 1817; at Lovell and Albany, Me., from March 5 to September 3, 1819; and at Springfield, Wendell, and Goshen, N. H., from November 25, 1819, to June 5, 1820. The summary of his services in the first

¹ It was a tradition in my younger days that both of these votes passed without opposition, so that Mr. Holt united the whole town twice, — both his call and his dismissal being determined by unanimous vote. It was also said that this result was utterly unexpected by Mr. Holt, and that he subsequently expressed regret that he had presented the alternative to the town.

of these missions may serve as a fair specimen of the whole: — “During seven months of missionary labor, I have made 10 school-visits;¹ 18 visits to the sick and afflicted; attended one funeral; admitted, by vote of churches, 10 persons as members in full communion; baptized 20 adults and children; administered the Lord’s Supper 4 times; preached 145 sermons; and made 434 family visits.”

Rev. Thomas Holt, son of Daniel and Mary Holt, was born at Meriden, Conn., November 9, 1762, grad. Y. C. 1784, married Sarah, daughter of Rev. Ebenezer Chaplin of Sutton, May 5, 1796, had seven children, named in the Genealogies, and died February 21, 1836. He was buried in that part of the new cemetery which was formerly a portion of his homestead. During his ministry here, he admitted 65 persons into the church, baptized 191, including adults, and married 177 couples.

The successor of Mr. Holt was Rev. William Brigham Wesson, who was born in Hopkinton, May 29, 1777, but in early life was carried to Athol by his parents, William and Mary Wesson. Chiefly if not entirely by his own exertions, he defrayed the expense of a liberal education at Williams College, and graduated in 1802, thus early displaying that energy of character which distinguished him through life. The town concurred with the church, August 7, 1805, in calling him to become their pastor, and voted to fix his salary at five hundred dollars per annum; but added a proviso, apparently designed to guard against a repetition of embarrassments previously encountered: — “Provided, nevertheless, that if three fourths of the qualified voters in the Society should think proper, at any time, to dismiss the said Mr. Wesson, it shall be in their power; and also the said Mr. Wesson shall be at liberty to dismiss himself when he thinks proper. Either party is to give one year’s previous notice. . . . Chose Capt. Daniel Warner, Doct. William Cutler, and Timothy Paige, Esq., a committee to wait on Mr. Wesson, and inform him of the doings of the town.” Without unnecessary delay, Mr. Wesson gave an answer, characteristically different from that of his predecessor, before quoted: —

“To the church and congregation of the town of Hardwick. — Brethren and Friends: The time has come at which you have reason to expect an answer to the call which you have presented me, to settle with you in the work of the gospel ministry. Having had the subject under serious and prayerful consideration I have come to the following conclusion, — to answer in the affirmative. Sincerely wishing grace, mercy, and peace, through our common Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, may be multiplied, WILLIAM B. WESSON. — To Messrs. Warner, Cutler, and Paige, Committee in behalf of said church and congregation. Hardwick, Sep. 21, 1805.’’

Mr. Wesson was ordained October 20, 1805,¹ and for several years the harmony between the pastor and the flock was undisturbed. In the pulpit, his stately form and magnificent voice gave full effect to his discourses; while in private life, his affability of manners and buoyancy of spirit attracted a multitude of friends. In 1810, sixty-five persons became members of the church, precisely the same number which were admitted by his predecessor, during his entire pastorate; and in 1820 there was a further addition of one hundred and fourteen members; a larger number than were ever before or since admitted in any one year. So far, his ministry must be regarded as successful. But about the year 1815 the Trinitarian and Unitarian controversy became public, and it was prosecuted very vigorously, not to say furiously, until it resulted in a widespread breaking up of churches and parishes. Mr. Wesson did not become an active partisan on either side. Avoiding this exciting topic in his public discourses, and discussing chiefly such subjects as might promote peace and mutual edification, he preserved comparative harmony in the parish, and secured the rich harvest of 1820 to the church. Unfortunately for him, however, Hardwick was embraced within the limits of the Brookfield Association,² which was largely composed of stern and resolute champions of Trinitarianism, who could not endure opposition, or even neutrality, on the

Rev. Joshua Crosby, Greenwich, (now Enfield), Rev. Ezekiel L. Bascom, Gerry, (now Phillipston), Rev. John Fiske, New Braintree, and Rev. Thomas Snell, Brookfield, were also members of the ordaining council. Rev. Mr. Ward was moderator, and Rev. Mr. Snell, scribe.

² Had his lot been cast in the adjoining Association, which contained some of his most intimate clerical associates, such as Rev. Messrs. James Thompson, of Barre; Festus Foster, of Petersham; Ezekiel L. Bascom, of Phillipston; and Alpheus Harding, of New Salem; the result might have been very different.

part of their associates. Suspecting Mr. Wesson's soundness in the faith, after ineffectual attempts to enlist him under their own banner, they assumed a hostile attitude, and persevered until they succeeded in alienating from him the confidence and Christian sympathy of a majority of his church. A majority of the parish adhered to him, and at a meeting, May 26, 1823, "to see whether the Congregational Society in Hardwick are acquainted with any facts relating to the previous conduct of the Rev. William B. Wesson, which would induce them to desire his dismissal," it was "voted, to choose a committee of three to request the Rev. William B. Wesson to come and read the communication from the Brookfield Association; Voted, and chose Elijah Amidon, Samuel Billings, and Stephen K. Wardwell, a committee for that purpose; Voted, to divide the house, and it was counted; there was one hundred and five in favor of the Rev. William B. Wesson, and none against him." During the next year, the condition of affairs "bettered nothing, but rather grew worse." Apparently despairing of a restoration of peace and harmony, Mr. Wesson at length addressed to the selectmen a communication which is preserved in the Hardwick Archives: "To the Selectmen of the town of Hardwick. — Gentlemen, Having had occasion to notice, within a few days, that the 'fire' of opposition 'is not quenched,' and having come to the conclusion that my continuance in the ministry will neither promote my own happiness, nor, under existing circumstances, be so useful to the people as I could wish, I have therefore thought proper to request you to issue your warrant to notify a legal meeting of the inhabitants of Hardwick, and especially those belonging to the Congregational Society in said town, to meet in town-meeting, to act on the following question, to wit: — whether they will consent that the contract existing between us be dissolved at my request. By complying with this request you will confer a favor on your friend and Pastor, WILLIAM B. WESSON. Hardwick, May 29, 1824." A meeting was accordingly held June 14, 1824, at which it was "voted unanimously, that the contract existing between the Rev. William B. Wesson and said Society be dissolved at his request." These proceedings were ratified and confirmed by an Ecclesiastical Council, June 30, 1824.¹ During his ministry Mr. Wesson admitted 232 persons

into the church (an average of somewhat more than twelve per annum), baptized 395 adults and children, and attended 463 funerals. After his dismissal he engaged temporarily in mercantile business, but chiefly devoted his attention to the cultivation of his farm, which is now in possession of his eldest son. He died May 9, 1836, aged nearly 59 years, and was buried in the new cemetery. Some account of his family is inserted in the Genealogical department.¹

Several ineffectual attempts were made to fill the vacant pulpit. A large majority of the church were Trinitarians; a minority of the church and a decided majority of the congregation were Anti-Trinitarians, composed of Unitarians, Universalists, and others; and on this rock the original parish was wrecked. The church invited Rev. Wales Tileston, October 14, 1824, to become their pastor, by a vote of 33 aff. to 5 neg. The town non-concurred November 1, 1824, by a vote of 45 aff. against 79 neg. April 14, 1825, the church invited Rev. Henry H. F. Sweet by unanimous vote; the town concurred May 16, 1825, by a vote of 58 aff. to 44 neg., "on condition that he avow a willingness, on his part, to make exchanges and hold ministerial intercourse and fellowship with Unitarian clergymen as well as others." He was not ordained; probably he declined making the required avowal. By unanimous vote, December 12, 1825, the church extended a call to Rev. John Wilder, Jr.; the town concurred, 70 aff., 41 neg., in the invitation to this candidate, "who has avowed a willingness to hold ministerial intercourse with the denomination of Christians called Unitarians." This call was declined. August 28, 1826. The town refused to call Rev. Eliphalet P. Crafts, 42 aff., 49 neg. December 18, 1826. The church refused to invite Rev. Nathaniel Gage, 3 aff., 27 neg.; the town voted, January 1, 1827, to "concur with a minority of the church in giving Mr. Nathaniel Gage a call to settle," &c., 107 aff., 37 neg. This was the last joint effort of the two parties to agree upon a candidate his moral character or "conduct." By advice of friends, he commenced a suit at law against some of the principal offenders; and although one of them is said to have insisted that he had always been particularly cautious to avoid saying anything "actionable," the jury pronounced them guilty, and assessed damages. Although more than half a century has elapsed, it seems proper to refrain from mentioning names or any further particulars in connection with this unhappy controversy.

for the pastorate; and this also was unsuccessful. As a last resort, the town, or Congregational Society, as it had for some time been called, held a meeting, October 1, 1827, "to see if they will grant the orthodox party the privilege of drawing their proportionable part of the money already raised and not expended, for such preaching as they shall choose, and also the use of the meeting-house their proportion of the time." The meeting was adjourned to October 9, and was then dissolved, without any definite action upon the subject.

At length, in 1827, the "orthodox party," embracing a majority of the church and holding the church records, seceded from the original parish and organized a separate society; and thenceforth those who remained were styled the Congregational Society, embracing a minority of the church, and holding the church and parish property, as legal representatives of the original organization. In what follows I shall notice the two divisions separately, — the old society first, and the new society afterwards.

CONGREGATIONAL SOCIETY. In the official records, under date of February, 1828, it is stated that "The minority withdrew from said society, and formed a new religious society called The First Calvinistic Society in Hardwick." To induce the seceders to refrain from erecting a new meeting-house, and to return to their old home, the Congregational Society made a proposition, May 5, 1828, which certainly appears very generous, especially when it is considered as an offering from a majority to a minority: — "That the Calvinistic Society have the use of the meeting-house forty-six Sabbaths in a year, on condition their minister, Mr. Tupper, will exchange with Mr. Thompson, of Barre, Mr. Wilson, of Petersham, and Mr. Harding, of New Salem, as with other ministers, not less than once a year with each of them." This conciliatory offer was rejected by the Calvinistic Society, as involving at least the countenancing of Unitarianism. Thereupon the Congregational Society with a minority of the church, extended to Rev. John M. Merrick an invitation to become their pastor, and he was ordained August 27, 1828. On the first day of November, 1829, "at a regular meeting of the church the following resolution was passed: — Whereas, by the secession of a part of this church from the Congregational Society, the records and covenant of the church have passed into other hands, and are not now to be had by us, we agree to offer the following profession of faith to those who may present themselves for admission into this church : — Impressed with a sense of duty, you offer yourself for admission to this Christian church. You regard this transaction as a profession of your belief in the one only living and true God ; as a testimony of your faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world ; and as an acknowledgment of the sacred scriptures as containing a revelation from God to man and a perfect rule of faith and duty. You design to commemorate the Author and Finisher of our Faith in the way that he hath appointed, resolving, by the divine favor, to live in obedience to the divine commandments, and hoping, through the mercy of God to obtain everlasting life. In a humble and grateful reliance upon God for the pardon of sin and for assistance in duty, you now enter upon the Christian profession ; and you intend to walk with this church in Christian ordinances and in the exercise of Christian affection.” March 5, 1832. The society voted “to accede to the request of Rev. John M. Merrick, that his pastoral relation to said Society shall be dissolved.” Mr. Merrick was subsequently for many years pastor of the Unitarian Church in Walpole, Mass., and was also a Senator in the General Court, 1857, 1858. On the first of April, 1869, he became pastor of the church in Charlestown, N. H., where he died March 20, 1871, aged nearly 67 years.

The successor of Mr. Merrick was Rev. John Goldsbury, who “was born in Warwick, Mass., Feb. 11, 1795 ; fitted for college at different schools, and academies, and under private instruction ; graduated at Brown University in 1820 ; commenced the study of divinity at Harvard College in 1821, under Professors Ware, Norton, and Willard ; taught in Taunton Academy several years ; was ordained in North Bridgewater, Wednesday June 6, 1827, where he remained till Sept. 4, 1831.”¹ He was unanimously invited, June 11, 1832, to become pastor of the Congregational Church and Society in Hardwick, and was installed July 4, 1832. In connection with his parish work, he established and instructed a High School. He labored faithfully, both as pastor and teacher, until June, 1839, when, at his own request, he was dismissed, removed to Cambridge, and was master of the High School there about five years. He afterwards returned to Warwick, where he still survives in a ripe old age, honored and respected.

For nearly three years afterwards, the society had no settled pastor, but hired occasional supplies. Their number had become small, by the formation of other societies, and it was difficult to pay a sufficient salary. At length an arrangement was made with the Universalist Society (then worshipping in the Town Hall, under the ministry of Rev. Rufus S. Pope), to build a new meeting-house, and unite their strength for the maintenance of public worship. The details of this arrangement are entered on the records of the Society. After other ineffectual negotiations, it was voted May 17, 1841, "That this Society will proceed to take down the old meeting-house, and will unite with the Universalist Society in rebuilding a meeting-house on the same ground. Voted, to choose a committee, to fix on terms of agreement between the Congregational and Universalist Societies, in relation to the rebuilding of the meeting-house." May 24, 1841. The committee submitted a report, recommending that the materials of the old house, so far as practicable, might be used in the construction of the new edifice, with certain reservations; and it was provided, that "The above recommendation take effect when the Universalist Society shall agree, as an offset or consideration for the use of the materials above specified, and for the benefit they are to receive by the joint occupancy of the spot on which the old meeting-house now stands, that they, the said Universalist Society, will furnish all the funds required to pay the expense of taking down the old meeting-house, and also funds to pay the owners of pews in said old meeting-house, the sums at which the respective pews shall be appraised;¹ and said Universalist Society also agree that said Congregational Society shall have the right to supply the desk in said new meeting-house, whenever it is not occupied by a minister procured by said Universalist Society. And said Universalist Society are further to agree that whenever the owners of pews in said new meeting-house, or any of them, shall express a desire to have the desk occupied a part of the time by a Unitarian preacher, such pew-owners shall be entitled to that privilege for such a portion of the time as the original cost of their pews bears to the original cost of the whole number of pews in the house." This report was accepted (aff. 17, neg. 10), and the agreement was confirmed by both societies. To prevent any possible doubt concerning its legality, a town-meeting was held June 15, 1841, "to see if the town will permit the First Universalist Society in Hardwick to erect a meeting-house on the site now occupied by the old meeting-house, to be used as a union meeting-house by the Congregational and Universalist Societies in such proportion of time as said Societies shall agree." Permission was granted, by a vote of 92 aff., 44 neg.

No time was lost in carrying the foregoing agreement into effect; within twenty-four hours after permission was granted by the town, the work was commenced. On the parish records is this memorandum: "Note. The work of taking down the old meeting-house was commenced June 16th, 1841." The new house was erected with commendable dispatch, and was dedicated January 25, 1842. It was by no means equal to the former edifice in size and general magnificence; but sufficiently capacious to accommodate the congregation which remained after the Calvinistic Society was formed, together with the Universalists, who had hitherto worshipped in the Town Hall, but had now taken possession of the new house. Instead of claiming the use of the house a portion of the time, for the employment of a "Unitarian preacher," this society wisely preferred to make a temporary union with the Universalists, and to employ one pastor for both societies. They accordingly voted, April 4, 1842, that "preachers should be obtained as far as practicable, for terms not less than one year; and that we coincide in the propriety and expediency of endeavoring to retain the services of Rev. R. S. Pope for the ensuing year." They also voted to add the amount of their subscriptions to the funds of the Universalist Society, provided that the same should be repaid if the Congregational Society should be obliged to furnish a preacher for the United Society.

Upon the removal of Mr. Pope, at the close of his engagement, the Rev. Norwood Damon, a Unitarian preacher, was employed as acting pastor. At a meeting, November 27, 1843, it appeared that the Congregational Society had raised about $300, and yet lacked about $200 of enough to pay "Mr. Damon for his services one year." A communication from the clerk of the Universalist Society was read, stating that after repaying to this society the sum which it advanced last year, there remained in their treasury about $140, which they would loan "to this Society, to be replaced hereafter;" which offer was accepted. Mr. Damon remained here about two years, and was succeeded by Rev. Benton Smith, a Universalist, who was ordained July 2, 1845. The two societies acted together for a considerable length of time, as a united body, though I have found no record of a formal union. I do find, however, that this society voted, April 30, 1847, "that the sum we pay for the supply of the desk be paid to the treasurer of the Union Society for the present year;" and a similar vote was passed in 1848 and 1849. Mr. Smith remained pastor until 1850, when he removed to Shirley Village, and afterwards to South Reading, 1854; Chatham, 1859; and Waltham, 1865. He was the State Missionary for several years. In 1879 he removed to South Newmarket, N. H., but subsequently returned to Waltham.

For some years after the departure of Mr. Smith, the desk was supplied by occasional preaching. A formal union of the two societies seemed necessary to their mutual prosperity. The Universalists were more numerous and had more financial strength than the Unitarians; but as the Congregational Society had certain corporate rights which it was important to preserve, the Universalists allowed their own organization to slumber, and became members of the Congregational Society, which was thenceforth substantially a Universalist Society, in fellowship with the State Convention, though retaining the original name, and inheriting the rights and immunities of the original parish. In November, 1855, Rev. George J. Sanger, who was ordained at Sippican, September 8, 1847, and removed to Sandwich, 1849, and to Gloucester, 1851, was invited to take charge of this society, which invitation he accepted, and was installed May 7, 1856. His ministry was very acceptable, and continued for eight years, except a slight intermission in 1862, when he accepted a commission as lieutenant in the army of the Union (which was afterwards exchanged for another as chaplain), and offered a resignation of his pastorate. At a meeting, September 25, 1862, it was voted, "that the Society request Mr. Sanger to continue his connection with this Society as their pastor; and after leave of absence for the term of nine months in his Country's service, hope that he will be able to resume all the pastoral duties of said Society." He performed his military duty, was taken prisoner at Galveston, and "endured hardness as a good soldier." He resumed his labor after his return, but resigned June 1, 1864, and removed to Webster; he removed again, in 1869, to Danvers, where he still resides, devoting a portion of his time to secular affairs.

The successor of Mr. Sanger was Rev. John Harvey Moore, who was ordained at Warren May 23, 1844, removed to South Reading, 1849; Concord, N. H., 1855; and returned to Warren, 1862. He commenced preaching here in 1864, continuing to reside in Warren, where he preached in the afternoon, after supplying the desk here in the forenoon. This arrangement continued until 1874, after which he ceased preaching in Hardwick, and became pastor of the society in Webster. In 1878 he removed to Newark, N. Y., where he now resides.

Rev. Henry Jewell was ordained at Salem, N. H., August 24, 1836, and removed to South Reading, 1838; Lynn, 1840; Cincinnati, O., 1847; Stoneham, 1852; Lynn again, 1855; Canton, 1858; Terre Haute, Ind., 1866; Manchester, Iowa, 1868; Rome, N. Y., 1870; Bristol, N. Y., 1872. In 1875 he removed to Hardwick, and remained pastor of this society until April 1, 1878, when he resigned, and removed to Malden. In 1881 he removed to Merrimac, and became pastor of the society in that town.

Rev. Lucan S. Crosley of Waterloo, P. Q., graduated at the St. Lawrence Theological School in 1874, and preached at Plainfield, Vt., 1875, and Weymouth, 1876, 1877. He commenced his ministry here in September, 1878; was ordained November 13, 1879; resigned in September, 1880, and removed to Woodstock Vt.

The present pastor is Rev. Benjamin V. Stevenson, who was ordained in Boston, June, 1844, and preached in Barre six years, from April 1, 1844, to 1850; he was afterwards settled in Winchester, N. H., 1850; at South Hingham, 1851; at New Bedford, 1854; at Chicopee, eleven years, from 1857; at Shelburne Falls, six years, from 1868; and at Southbridge, seven years, from 1874. Having thus labored constantly for the long period of thirty-eight years, he took charge of this ancient parish, in connection with a society at Ware, April 1, 1882.

CALVINISTIC SOCIETY. A minority of the congregation, with a large majority of the church, withdrew from the original parish, and on the 13th of November, 1827, organized the first "Calvinistic Society in Hardwick." Rejecting an offer of a joint occupancy of the old meeting-house, although the "lion's share" was tendered to them, they proceeded without delay to erect a new house at the south end of the Common. The corner-stone was laid in September, 1828, when an address was delivered by Rev. Parsons Cooke of Ware, setting forth the reasons for separation from the parent stock. A year afterwards, September 9, 1829, the house was dedicated;¹ and the sermon on that occasion, by Rev. John Wilder, Jr., of Charlton, was devoted to a consideration of "the present prospects of evangelical religion," which was thus defined: "The doctrine of the Triune Deity; the doctrine of the divine inspiration of the Sacred Scriptures; the doctrine of the entire native sinfulness of the human heart; the doctrine of redemption by the Blood of Christ; the necessity of regeneration by the influences of the Holy Spirit, i. e., repentance and faith in Christ in this life, essential to the obtaining of God's favor; the doctrine of the sovereign Purposes of God; the doctrine of the perseverance of the Saints unto eternal life; and the doctrine of an Endless Retributive State beyond the grave. These are, summarily, the Evangelical Faith." Both this sermon and the previous address were published.

Before the erection of the meeting-house a unanimous invitation was given to Rev. Martyn Tupper to become pastor of the church and new society, which he accepted, and was ordained April 16, 1828.¹ He was a diligent and zealous workman, and his labors were rewarded by forty-six admissions to his church in 1831, this being the last extraordinary harvest enjoyed by that body. Soon after this religious awakening, the church was for some reason induced to adopt a modified creed, or confession of faith, which is here inserted:—

"The Confession of Faith and Covenant adopted by the Congregational Church² in this place, March 2^d, 1832. (1.) We believe that there is one God, the Creator and rightful disposer of all things, existing as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; and that to these three persons, as the one God, all divine perfections are to be equally ascribed. (2.) We believe that the Bible was given by inspiration of God, as the only unerring rule of faith and practice. (3.) We believe that mankind are fallen from their original rectitude, and are, while in a state of nature, wholly destitute of that holiness which is required by the divine law. (4.) We believe that Jesus Christ, the eternal Word, became man, and by his obedience, sufferings and death, made an atonement for the sins of the world. (5.) We believe that they, and they only, will be saved, in consequence of the merits of Christ, who repent of sin, and believe in him. (6.) We believe that, although the invitations of the gospel are such that all, who will, may come and take of the water of life freely, yet the wickedness of the human heart is such that none will come, unless drawn by the special influences of the Holy Spirit. (7.) We believe that the sacraments of the New Testament are Baptism and the Lord's Supper, — Baptism to be administered only to believers and their households, and the Supper only to believers in regular church standing. (8.) We believe that God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world, when there will be a resurrection of the dead, and when the righteous will enter on eternal happiness, and the wicked will be sentenced to eternal misery.”¹

The successor of Mr. Tupper, who resigned April 29, 1835, was Rev. Edward J. Fuller, who was born at Plainfield, Conn., January 5, 1806, grad. at A. C. 1828, and at Andover 1831, was ordained at Chelsea, January 11, 1832, and dismissed in 1835. He was installed in Hardwick November 3, 1835, and dismissed March 21, 1837. His ministry here was short and uneventful. For the next three years I do not trace him distinctly; but from 1840 to 1845, he was lecturer for the Western Anti-Slavery Society. In 1845, repeated attacks of epilepsy compelled him to retire from active mental labor. He died of apoplexy at Brighton, O., March 12, 1876. See “Obituary Record of Grad. of Amherst College,” 1876.

Rev. William Eaton was the next pastor. He grad. at W. C. 1810, and at Andover 1813; was ordained at Fitchburg, August 30, 1815, and dismissed June 4, 1823; installed at Middleborough March 10, 1824, and dismissed April 10, 1834. He was at Charlotte, Vt., about two years, after which he was installed here September 6, 1837. The connection between pastor and people seems to have been very pleasant; but the failure of his health compelled him to cease from his labors. He resigned March 26, 1840, and before a council could assemble to dissolve the connection, he died at West Brookfield, April 15, 1840, aged 56 years.

The successor of Mr. Eaton was Rev. Barnabas M. Fay, who was born at Berlin, July 27, 1806, and grad. Y. C. 1833. He was a professor in the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, New York city, from 1833 to 1836; studied in the Union Theological Seminary, 1837 and 1838; was ordained in Hardwick May 20, 1840, and was dismissed August 23, 1843; was a teacher in Durham, Conn., 1843, 1844; pastor at Wilmington, 1845 to 1850; profes-essor at the Blind Asylum, Indianapolis, Ind., 1850 to 1854; professor at the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, Flint, Mich., 1854 to 1864; a banker at Saginaw, Mich., 1864 to 1869; without charge, Saratoga Springs, 1869 —. See "Gen. Catalogue Union Theol. Sem. 1876."

Mr. Fay was succeeded by Rev. Asa Mann, who was born at Randolph, Vt., April 9, 1816, grad. at A. C. 1838, and at Andover, 1842. He was ordained in Hardwick June 19, 1844, and resigned October 14, 1851; after which he was pastor at Exeter, N. H., 1851 to 1858; stated supply at Wellfleet, 1862, at Granville, 1863, at Springfield, Vt., 1864, 1865, and Bath, N. H., 1866; pastor at Bath, 1867 to 1872; at Raynham, 1873, 1874; at Carlisle, 1875, 1876; stated supply at South Plymouth, 1878, 1879, and at Hardwick again, 1880 to 1881.

Rev. Martyn Tupper, the successor of Mr. Mann, was born in West Stafford, Conn., January 6, 1800, grad. Nassau Hall, 1826, was ordained here April 16, 1828, and resigned April 29, 1835, as before mentioned. He was next installed at East Longmeadow in October, 1835, dismissed in September, 1849, soon afterwards installed at Lanesboro, and dismissed May 19, 1852. He was reinstalled in Hardwick June 23, 1852, and after a peaceful ministry of more than eighteen years, resigned, September 1, 1870, and removed to Waverly, Ill. His wife died there July 27, 1871. About a year afterwards Mr. Tupper conveyed her remains to Hardwick, where two daughters had previously been buried. Having accomplished this pious task, he visited his friends at West Stafford, where he sickened and died July 31, 1872, and was buried in his family lot in the new cemetery.

Rev. Elbridge W. Merritt succeeded Mr. Tupper. He took a partial course at Union College, and also at the Union Theological Seminary (then in Connecticut, now in New York). He was ordained in 1866, preached at Stafford, Conn., 1867, at Charleston, S. C., 1868, at Williamsburg, 1869, 1870, and became a stated supply in Hardwick, October, 1870, acting pastor, April 1871, and was installed as pastor June 5, 1873. He resigned October 1, 1876, and after laboring for a time at the West, returned and settled in Dana, supplying also a parish in Petersham.

Rev. Augustus C. Swain was ordained in 1873, preached at Needham 1873, 1874, at West Warren 1875, and at Hardwick from February, 1877 to July, 1879, when he removed to Hyde Park. He was not installed here.

The present pastor of the church is the Rev. Gilbert B. Richardson, who graduated at A. C. 1853, and at the Bangor Theol. Seminary, 1856. He was first settled in Douglass, Mass.; afterwards at Bath, Me., from 1860 to 1874, and at Alstead, N. H., from 1874 to 1881. He commenced preaching here 17th July, 1881, and was installed 7th December, 1881.

SEPARATE CHURCH. About the year 1740 occurred what was then called the "Great Awakening," which extended throughout New England. It was occasioned, or at least greatly encouraged, by the labors of the celebrated Rev. George Whitefield.¹ One of its results was the rending asunder of many churches, those who seceded being styled "New Lights," and afterwards "Separatists" or "Separates." Terms of obloquy were freely interchanged between the two parties. The New Lights were denounced as enthusiastic and unscrupulous disorganizers, and they, in their turn, stigmatized the Old Lights, or established churches, both clergy and laity, as cold, lifeless, and dead, utterly unworthy the name of Christians. One of their preachers, Rev. Ebenezer Frothingham, of Weathersfield, Conn., published a Discourse, in 1750, entitled, "The Articles of Faith and Practice, with the Covenant, that is confessed by the Separate Churches of Christ in general in this Land. Also a DISCOURSE, holding forth the great privileges of the Church of Jesus Christ, who followed him in this uninstituted and very disorderly and pernicious practice, twelve or thirteen years ago, we may ascribe all the separations from our churches, and most if not all the enthusiasm, error, contention, and confusion, with which we have been perplexed ever since." P. 34.

and the same privileges vindicated from the Sacred Scriptures ; and some points of practice in the Church of Christ, that are in great dispute between the learned and unlearned, fairly settled in a line of Divine Truth. — Written by Ebenezer Frothingham.” In this Discourse the author devotes one chapter “ to answer some objections that is made against the present great and misterious work that God is a doing in New England.” He mentions seven objections, which probably embody the most material : — “ We cannot think that this is a good work in the land, or a work of God’s Spirit, that inclines persons to separate and rend away from the churches of Christ that are established by the laws of this colony and land, and to leave the house of God, and set up a worship contrary to the gospel, as has been the practice of some of late in the land.” pp. 338, 339. “ We cannot believe that this is a work of God in the land, which the Separates hold to be God’s work, because none of our learned and good ministers own it. They say it is delusions and a false religion.” p. 344. “ We cannot believe that the Separates are right ; for God is a God of Order, and their practice is Disorder and Confusion. When they separate from us, they go off, one by one, and do not unite in a body, and then get a regular dismission ; but they rend away, some at one time, and some at another. And when there are a number that is sufficient for to set up public worship, then they are all of them preachers, women as well as men ; and this we know is contrary to the will of God.” pp. 352, 353. “ We cannot think that this present work is of God, which the Separates hold to be of God, for it makes divisions and disorders, and breaks the peace of churches and families ; therefore it cannot be a work of God, for Christ’s Kingdom is a peaceful Kingdom ; and the promoters of this work are censorious, judging persons, who speak evil of our ministers and rulers, which is contrary to the word of God.” p. 363. “ We don’t believe that the Separates are right, or that God is with them, because that there are such divisions and jars amongst themselves ; for if God is with them, surely they would be agreed and have fellowship together, as they profess the saints of God have in a high degree ; but they are contending one with another, as is manifest to all ; and that religion and power amongst them, which they call the power of God, is a false religion, nothing but a mere noise and an empty sound.” pp. 373, 374. “ Notwithstanding all that the Separates pretend to, we think that they are them false prophets that Christ speaks of in the 24 of Matt. — ‘that if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect.’” p. 392. “Notwithstanding all that the Separates say, or preach, or write, yet they do not convince us that they are right, or that God is with them; and surely if God was with them, as they contend, they would be able to convince us, either by scripture, or sound reason, or they would be able to work a miracle, to show some undeniable sign, that we might believe.” p. 398.

To each of these objections Mr. Frothingham makes a formal reply; of which the first may serve as a fair specimen. He denies that the established churches from which so many had separated were true churches of Christ for the following reasons: “The Churches that we have separated from generally hold that external morality is the door into the church, and that the Lord’s Supper is a converting ordinance; or that all have a right to join with the church, that will make an outward public profession of Christianity, although they be unconverted.” p. 340. “In the churches that we have left, there are many that are hardened and believe not, but speak evil of the ways, work, and power of God, and are awful mockers at the Spirit of God and the saints that are under the influence of the same Spirit; and these persons are indulged in the churches; therefore we have a just right and warrant in the word of God to separate from them. Acts xix. 9.” p. 341. “Again, the Churches that we have left, have dwindled away into a dead, dry, lifeless form of godliness, and have denied the power and life of godliness, and from such we are to turn away. See 2 Timo. iii. 5.” pp. 341, 342. “Again, the Churches that we have left, are stuffed full of hypocrites or dissemblers; for they professedly take in the unconverted, and when they are in the church, they profess themselves saints, and are counted and treated as such; which is manifest hypocrisy in the sight of God and his saints.” p. 342. This language manifests the same spirit which was exhibited by Whitefield, as quoted by Dr. Wigglesworth, in his Discourses heretofore referred to: One “unretracted error of Mr. Whitefield” is “what we find in his Journal when at Boston, in the year 1740, Thursday October 9th, where, after he hath told us ‘that he saw a great number of ministers sitting around and before him, and that the Lord enabled him to open his mouth boldly against unconverted ministers; for he was verily persuaded the generality of ministers talk of an unknown and unfelt Christ,’ he adds, ‘and the reason why congregations have been so dead is because they have had dead men preaching to them.' . . . I believe many a stupid sinner hath read with secret pleasure, and thanked him in his heart, for thus transferring the blame to his minister, and so far excusing him for his unprofitableness under the sound preaching of the gospel of Christ." p. 32.

One more specimen may be pardoned, in which the author manifests some keenness of thought, though expressed in his customary uncouth style. In reference to the third objection, he says, "The fourth and last thing held forth in the objection is, Women's speaking in the Church, 1 Cor. xiv. 34, 35. This text no ways forbideth a woman's speaking, or breathing forth the ardent desire of her soul after God; and when she is placed at Christ's feet with Mary, Luke x. 39, in true humility and brokenness of soul by faith, beholding the divine excellencies and glories of the Godhead shining forth in that spotless and innocent Lamb of God. When the case is thus with any woman or child, they have a just right from Christ, who gives them these discoveries, when sweetly constrained thereto by the Spirit of God, to speak openly in the Church of the beauties and excellencies they see in their beloved; Cant. iii. 4, 5; and chap. v. 10, 16. But to take the scripture aforementioned in this sense, — that a woman shall not speak at all in a public assembly, — will contradict the examples of the following scriptures: Luke xi. 27, 28. 'And it came to pass as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lift up her voice and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked. But he said, Yea, rather blessed are they which hear the word of God and keep it.' Here is an example one would think sufficient to stop the mouths of all creatures who oppose a woman's speaking in a public assembly, in a proper season; for if a woman ever ought to be silent in a public assembly, surely it should be when the Son of God was personally preaching with his own blessed mouth; but yet at this very time 'a certain woman of the company lift up her voice,' &c. No doubt but the carping Pharisees, who love a smooth form of worship, were highly offended at this woman's speaking and especially because she lifted up her voice so loud, and broke in upon Christ in his discourse, like a disorderly woman; and had it been so that them Pharisee hearers, who stood much for an even form, had been acquainted with Paul's Epistles (which were not then written), no doubt they would have (as our Pharisees do now), pick out them texts that say a woman shall not speak in the church (not considering what speaking Paul had reference to), and so accused her therewith, and have told her that she had broken the commands of God, and gone contrary to his word, &c. But let us consider, — Doth Christ, who is the great Head of the Church, say, Woman, be silent, and not disturb the public worship of God, by speaking with such a loud voice whilst I am a preaching; you are disorderly; you have broken the commands of God and the civil law: Constable, take her out of the assembly, and let her be fined, or cast into prison, 'till she is more regular, and learns not to disturb the public worship? Was this Christ's reply to the woman? Surely no! but the contrary. Christ shows his approbation of her speaking by taking an occasion further to teach her and all the assembly, from what she said, that true blessedness did not lie merely in being in human relation to him, but rather in being united to his divinity by a divine principle of grace implanted in the soul, which will lead a person both to hear the word of God and keep it." pp. 357-360. Other scriptures are then quoted to the same effect.

The first notice found on record concerning this separate movement in Hardwick is under date of July 25, 1749, when it was "Voted, that the church make choice of, and send to the Rev. Mr. Edwards, Hall, and Eaton, to come and give their advice about the dissatisfied brethren in our church, viz., Samuel Robinson, James Fay, Benjamin Harwood, Silas Pratt, and George Abbott, jr., whether they will advise the church to dismiss them, or proceed to censure them as irregular, disorderly members:— which council also came and gave their advice, as may be seen under their hands." "Sept. 20, 1749. At a church meeting in Hardwick, voted, that the church comply and fall in with the advice that the Rev. council gave. Silas Pratt, one of the dissatisfied brethren, complied with the council's advice. James Fay, Benjamin Harwood, and John Roberts¹ declared their non-compliance." At a later period, December 18, 1751, Silas Pratt and Jacob Abbott² were called to account; and February 4, 1752, it was "voted, that the reasons that George Abbott and Silas Pratt gave for their absenting themselves from the public worship of God at the meeting-house in Hardwick are not sufficient to justify their conduct. Voted, that

² From what follows, it seems probable that this name should be George Abbott. Similar mistakes are not unfrequent in Mr. White's records.

George Abbott and Silas Pratt be suspended from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper until they acknowledge their fault and amend." Again: "At a church meeting in Hardwick, Nov. 14, 1753, voted that Experience Johnson, Ichabod Stratton, Ezekiel Pratt, Elisha Higgins and his wife, and Oliver Rice, be called to give the reasons why they absent themselves from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in this place, and that Edward Allen be also called to give his reasons why he refuses to partake of the Lord's Supper in any church whatever." Also, "that a committee be chosen to meet with the members that have separated from this church, and to propose some reconciling methods to them: Deacon Allen, Deacon Cooper, Lieut. Mirick, John Bradish, Ichabod Stratton, Jr., and Benjamin Whipple, were chosen for this committee." The result of this labor does not appear on record, except that, March 3, 1757, Experience Johnson was "censured by the church for his absenting himself from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper for several years;" and, May 26, 1763, "Ichabod Stratton confessed his fault in separating from the Church of Christ in Hardwick, was forgiven by the church, and admitted to former privileges."¹

Meanwhile, the Separates had organized a church, and had probably erected a meeting-house on the northwest corner of the "ten acres" devoted to a public use, which was subsequently confirmed to them by the proprietors. The original Covenant is still in existence, and was manifestly written by an uneducated scribe, of which the following is a literal copy, made in 1877, the spelling and punctuation only being revised:

"THE COVENANT.

"We whose names are under written, apprehending ourselves called of God into church state of the gospel, do first of all confess ourselves unworthy to be so highly favored of the Lord, and admire that rich and full grace of his, which triumphs over so great unworthiness; and then, with a humble reliance on the aids of grace therein promised for them, in a sense of their inability to do any good thing, do humbly wait on him for all ; and we now thankfully lay hold on his covenant, and would choose the things that please him.

“ We declare our serious belief of the Christian Religion, as contained in the Sacred Scriptures, and with such a view thereof as the Confession of Faith and Rule of Discipline in Cambridge Platform has exhibited, — heartily resolving to conform our lives unto the rules of that holy religion as long as we live in the world. We give ourselves unto the Lord Jehovah, who is the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and avouch him this day to be our God, our Father, our Saviour, and our Leader ; and receive him as our portion forever. We give up ourselves unto the blessed Jesus, who is the Lord Jehovah, and adhere to him as the head of his people in the covenant of grace, and rely on him as our Priest, and our Prophet, and our King, to bring us unto eternal blessedness. We acknowledge our everlasting and indispensable obligation to glorify our God in all the duties of a godly, a sober, and a righteous life, and very particularly in the duties of a church state, and a body of people associated together for an obedience to him in all the ordinances of the gospel ; and we herein depend upon his gracious assistance for our faithful discharge of the duties thus incumbent on us. We desire, and intend (with dependence upon his powerful grace), we engage to walk together as a church of the Lord Jesus Christ, in the faith and order of the gospel, so far as we shall have the same revealed to us, conscientiously attending the public worship of God, the sacraments of his New Testament, the discipline of his kingdom, and all his holy institutions, in communion with one another, and watchfully avoiding all sinful stumbling-blocks and contention, as become a people whom the Lord hath bound up together in the bundle of life. At the same time also we do present our offspring with us to the Lord, purposing with his help to do our parts in the methods of a religious education, that they may be the Lord’s. And all this we do, flying to the blood of the everlasting covenant for the pardon of our many errors, and praying that the glorious Lord, who is the great Shepherd, would prepare and strengthen us for every good work, to do his will, working in us that which will be well pleasing : — to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.”

This Separate Church was organized in Hardwick about the year 1750.⁵ Its deacons were Samuel Robinson and James Fay; perhaps, also, John Fassett. There is no known evidence that it ever had a settled pastor while it remained here.⁶ So many of

² Did not remove to Bennington.

⁴ Probably removed to Amherst about 1756, and thence to Bennington in 1761.

⁵ It must have been formed as early as 1750, for one of its members, Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts, died before the end of that year.

⁶ There was a tradition, half a century ago, that the church had a pastor, whose name was Roberts. Perhaps it had this foundation: Mr. John Roberts whose name heads the list of subscribers to the Covenant, may have ordinarily officiated as a lay-preacher, or exhorter, which would account for his taking precedence of Samuel Robinson in the list.

its members removed to Bennington in 1761, that the Church, as an organized body, together with its covenant and records, was transferred to that town. It formed a union, December 3, 1762, with a much smaller representation of a similar Church which had removed from Sunderland to Bennington, and on the same day admitted five persons who had formerly been members of a Separate Church in Newint (a parish in Norwich), Conn., and thus was organized the First Church in the territory now embraced in the State of Vermont.

The particular method of this union of churches is recited by Rev. Isaac Jennings, the present pastor of the united church, in his "Memorials of a Century," pp. 31-33. That the covenant under which the union was consummated was not originally prepared for that occasion, but was the old covenant adopted at Hardwick about twelve years previously, and already bearing thirty-five signatures, is manifest for several reasons: (1.) The only reference to a covenant to be found in the articles of union is this: "It is agreed upon and voted by the Church of Christ in Bennington, that they make an exception in the fourth paragraph in the eleventh chapter in Cambridge Platform, in respect of using the civil law to support the gospel; and also the ninth paragraph in the seventeenth chapter, in respect of the civil magistrate's coercive power." The Hardwick covenant accepted the Cambridge Platform without qualification. In renewing or re-adopting that, it was natural to make exceptions, if desirable; but altogether unnatural to make such exceptions to the provisions of a new covenant at that time prepared as a basis of ecclesiastical union. (2.) Of the first thirty-five signatures to this covenant, all are recognized as Hardwick names except the two Breckenridges, who resided in the adjoining town of Ware; but there is sufficient evidence on the town records, that four of them, to wit, Deacon James Fay and his sons James Jr. and Daniel, and William Breckenridge, never removed to Bennington. (3.) Another reason is of itself conclusive: The signatures of the first nineteen males are autographs; but at least three of them had deceased before the union of the churches; namely, Dr. Jedediah Rice, who died at Hardwick April 4, 1756; Benjamin Harwood, who removed to Amherst and died August 19, 1758; and George Abbott, Jr., who had died, and the inventory of his estate was rendered August 16, 1761. Also, of the sixteen females whose names stand first in the second column, three had died, and three had changed their names by marriage, before the date of the union; namely, Elizabeth, wife of John Roberts, who died November 4, 1750; Elizabeth Fay, who died November 24, 1756; and Lydia, wife of Deacon James Fay, who, died before September 13, 1760, when he was published to his second wife; Betty Pratt, who married Elisha Field of Sunderland, January 11, 1753; Prudence Whipple, who was published to Deacon James Fay, September 13, 1760; and Mehitable Fay, who married Benjamin Rogers September 10, 1760. There can be no possible doubt that all these names were subscribed to the covenant before the union was formed December 3, 1762; after which new names were added to the list of subscribers on the same paper. The signatures to the covenant may with perfect confidence be classed thus: the names in both columns, above the first cross lines, indicate the members of the Hardwick church; those below the line in the first column, the members of the Sunderland church; those between the cross lines in the second column, the Newint members admitted at the time of the union; and those below the second cross line, the new members afterwards admitted. The conclusion of the whole matter is, that this ancient document, providentially preserved, furnishes incontestable evidence that the Separate Church, formed in Hardwick about 1750, together with the associates admitted December 3, 1762, became not only the first Congregational Church in Bennington, but also the first Congregational Church in the State of Vermont, retaining its original Covenant, with a single modification.

BAPTIST SOCIETY. The earliest notice of Baptists in Hardwick, which I have seen, is under date of March 31, 1777, when Ephraim Pratt, Ebenezer Lawrence, Abiathar Babbitt, William Perkins, Nathaniel Haskell, Jeremiah Sibley, Ephraim Cleveland, Jr., and Zebadiah Johnson, were so named, and their tax for the support of the ministry was remitted. In the Hardwick Archives is preserved a certificate, to wit: "The names of those that formed a Baptist Society in the southwest part of Hardwick: Moses Winchester, Seth Tucker, Jeremiah Hathaway, Joshua Tucker, David Elwell, Samuel Bowen, Henry Higgins, Seth Willis, Samuel L. Robinson, Aaron Chamberlin, Jesse Snow, Apollos Snow. — APOLLOS SNOW, Clerk. Hardwick, April 12, 1799." It is observable that this list does not contain a single name which was mentioned twenty-two years earlier, and when the society was legally incorporated seventeen years later, February 3, 1816,¹ another almost total change appears: David Elwell and Seth Willis being the only names which occur in either of the former lists. Before its incorporation, this society erected a meeting-house in 1801. In 1832, a new and commodious edifice was constructed; but this was sold to Mr. Daniel S. Collins, and converted into a barn, in 1846, when the society established its place of worship at Ware. The society was organized November 16, 1797. The church in connection with it was instituted September 16, 1801. The first pastor was Rev. Ebenezer Burt, who was ordained June 20, 1798. After a faithful and devoted ministry of nearly thirty years, he was dismissed November 19, 1827.² He subsequently resided several years in Ware, and then removed to Athol, where he died November 25, 1861, aged nearly 96. He continued to preach, occasionally, until extreme old age disabled him.

The successor of Mr. Burt was Rev. Joseph Glazier, who was installed August 2, 1831. From the number gathered by him into the church,³ his ministry seems to have been successful; but it continued somewhat less than four years, and ended in April 1835.

Rev. Nelson B. Jones became pastor of this church in May, 1837, and sustained that office about two years. I have not been able to trace his subsequent pastoral labors; but in 1881 he was ¹ The corporators were John Raymond, Elisha Sturtevant, Seth Willis, Enos Newland, Masa Newland, Benjamin Rider, Timothy Hathaway, John Croff, Lemuel Wheeler, David Elwell, Judah Simonds, Judah Marsh, Gamaliel Collins, Asa Sturtevant, John Wetherell, Jeremiah Newland, Daniel Barrows, Aquilla Collins, Jonah Collins, Cary Howard, Jeremiah Campbell, Jeremiah Campbell, Jr., Lemuel Gilbert, Aaron Marsh, Zenas Marsh, Cary Howard, Jr., Isaac Barlow. Mass. Spec. Laws, v. 87.

² Some of these facts and dates were communicated to me in 1838, by Rev. Nelson B. Jones, then pastor of the church, and are presumed to be correct. A somewhat different account is found in Clark's History of Norton, p. 503, which I insert on account of some details: Ebenezer Burt, "born Mar. 9, 1766, was the son of Deacon Ebenezer and Abigail (Bassett), grandson of Ebenezer and Naomi (Campbell), and great-grandson of Ebenezer and Lydia (Tippen) Burt, who were among the early inhabitants of Norton. When fourteen years old he joined the old Baptist church. Aug. 29, 1794, he was licensed to preach by the Baptist church of Dighton, and preached in this vicinity till Nov. 2, 1796, when he removed to Hardwick, and gathered a society in the southwest part of that town, where he was ordained as an evangelist (standing upon a great rock), June 20, 1797. A church was organized in 1806, and he was installed the pastor, which position he held till November, 1846, when he preached his half-century Sermon." He may have preached such a sermon; but he certainly was dismissed long before that date, and had had at least two successors.

residing in Prescott, without official charge, but continuing to preach as opportunity offered.

After the dismissal of Mr. Jones, the pulpit was supplied one year by Rev. William Brown. About 1840, Rev. Joseph Glazier was recalled, and remained pastor of the church until April 1, 1846, when he resigned, and the place of public worship was transferred to Ware. He was not again settled in the ministry, but resided in Ware until his death, which occurred September 1, 1860.

The deacons of this church, while it remained in Hardwick, were as follows : —

Daniel Lamson,	elected 1801, dismissed 1806.
Seth Willis,	elected 1801, dismissed 1811.
Benjamin Rider,	elected 1806, dismissed 1814.
Eseck Brown.	elected 1811, dismissed 1812.
Enos Newland,	elected 1812, dismissed 1814.
Henry Higgins,	elected 1817, dismissed 1833.
Joseph Metcalf,	elected 1817, dismissed 1829.
John Pepper,	elected 1829.
John Chamberlain,	elected 1833.

UNIVERSALIST SOCIETY. At a quite early date there were in Hardwick several believers in the doctrine of Universal Salvation. Before 1790, Rev. Caleb Rich, Rev. Zephaniah Lathe, and perhaps other itinerant ministers, had preached here, in private houses or elsewhere, as opportunity offered. In 1796, Rev. Hosea Ballou was engaged to preach, once a month, in that section of the town which was afterwards incorporated as a part of Dana. He resided there, doing the manifold work of a pastor at home, and of an itinerant or missionary abroad, until February, 1803, when he removed to Barnard, Vt.¹ He afterwards removed to Portsmouth, N. H., in 1809, to Salem in 1815, and to Boston in 1817, where he died June 7, 1852, aged 81, having accomplished a work such as has been allotted to few mortals. He was one of the most remarkable men of this age. He has been not inaptly described as “an uneducated man, but a born theologian, a man endowed with the simplicity of a child and the intellect of a giant." His biography, in four volumes, by his friend and disciple, Rev. Thomas Whittemore, was published not long after his decease.

Before Mr. Ballou removed to Barnard, the town of Dana was incorporated, including within its limits that portion of Hardwick in which he and many of his hearers resided. Those who dwelt in the present town of Hardwick did not, for several years, organize a legal society, or maintain constant preaching. Some continued to worship at Dana, where Rev. Joshua Flagg¹ had succeeded Mr. Ballou; and others employed such other preachers as could be had, generally meeting in the hall of the Ruggles Hotel until the Town House was erected. Among those who thus occasionally ministered at the altar, the most prominent in all respects was the Rev. John Bisbe, who was born at Plympton, grad. B. U. 1814, studied law for a considerable time with Hon. Marcus Morton, then prepared for the ministry, and was ordained at Brookfield, November 14, 1821. From Brookfield he removed to Hartford, Conn., where he was installed August 19, 1824, and thence to Portland, Me., was installed there in August, 1827, and died March 8, 1828, at the early age of 36 years. He was regarded as a remarkably eloquent and powerful preacher, and as an exemplary Christian. During his residence in Brookfield he preached frequently in Hardwick; and under his influence, as it would seem, a petition for the incorporation of a Universalist Society was presented to the General Court, which was granted June 12, 1824.² A copy of the petition remains on file in the Town Archives, sufficiently characteristic to justify its insertion:—

“To the Hon. the Senate, and the Hon. House of Representa-

won general regard, and the clergy of his town generally attended his funeral and paid due tribute of respect to his memory.”

² Mass. Spec. Laws, vi. 215. The incorporators were Daniel Ruggles, Constant Ruggles, Ezra Ruggles, Samuel Weston, Ira Ruggles, Samuel Granger, Gardner Ruggles, Anson Ruggles, Franklin Ruggles, Crighton Ruggles, Moses Mandell, Ebenezer Cobb, Simeon Crosby, Daniel B. Hinkley, Nathan Perry, James Sturtevant, William P. Jordan, Seth Hinkley, Stephen W. Paige, Ebenezer Perry, and Noah Beach.

tives in General Court assembled. The petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of the town of Hardwick, humbly sheweth: That we, being deeply impressed with a sense of the duty as well as the privilege of worshipping the Supreme Being agreeable to the dictates of conscience, and as we believe in the restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all God's holy prophets since the world began, and that God will have all men to be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth, and believing that the knowledge of this truth will have the most powerful influence to produce order, morality, and rational happiness, and as faith comes by hearing, and as we cannot hear without a preacher, — the prayer of your petitioners therefore is that we, together with others that may join us, may be incorporated into a society by the name of the First Universalist Society in the Town of Hardwick, in order that we may be enabled to command our own resources for the purpose of procuring and supporting a preacher of this great and common salvation, and other necessary concerns of said Society. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray."

Little use of the act of incorporation seems to have been made for several years. Occasional preaching¹ was had from time to time, but regular services were not established until 1837, when Rev. John Pierce, a young man who had recently entered the ministry, was employed, and was ordained September 27, 1837. He remained here about a year; and subsequently preached in Dana and Lunenburg in 1838, and in Lunenburg and Shirley Village, 1839, during which year he also gathered a society in Townsend. "In the spring of 1840, he engaged to labor with the two societies in Lunenburg and Townsend." But he was soon prostrated by disease of the lungs, and died at Lunenburg, his native place, August 31, 1840, at the immature age of 26 years. He was a young man of fair mental endowment, and of great earnestness and zeal. His interest in the cause which he had espoused was manifested by the legacy of all his earthly possessions to the society in Lunenburg, the income to be devoted to the maintenance of religious worship, on condition that the society should raise a prescribed amount annually, for the same purpose.¹

born at Atkinson, N. H., in 1804, and grad. D. C. 1830. He was settled at Charlton in June, 1831, having charge also of the parish in Brookfield. He removed to Spencer in 1838, and thence to Hyannis in 1839. While residing in Spencer, he preached in Hardwick regularly once a month. About 1843 he removed to Brimfield, where he devoted a portion of his time to agricultural pursuits, and where he died October 18, 1863, aged 59.

Rev. Rufus S. Pope, born in Stoughton, April 2, 1809, was ordained during the session of the Boston Association at Gloucester, December 4, 1833. He had commenced preaching in the previous August, at South Dedham (now Norwood), where he remained three years, dividing his services a portion of the time between that parish and Milford. In 1836 he removed to Sterling, and had charge of that parish until April, 1840, when he came to Hardwick. While here, his ministry was very successful. A church of twenty-seven members was organized. A new meeting-house was erected, under an arrangement with the Congregational Society, in 1841, and for the next year the two societies united in one congregation. In April, 1843, he removed to Hyannis, where he died June 5, 1882. He was a representative in the General Court, in 1855; register of probate in Barnstable County, from 1855 to 1857; and postmaster in Hyannis from 1862 to 1870.

The subsequent history of the Universalist Society, embracing its substantial consolidation with the Congregational Society, and its succession of pastors, — Rev. Messrs. Smith, Sanger, Moore, Jewell, Crosley, and Stevenson, — has already been narrated, and need not be repeated. The deacons elected by the Universalist Church, at its organization December 24, 1842, were :

Constant Ruggles, died April 28, 1846, aged 79.

Joseph Burgess, died July 20, 1879, aged 79.

Constant Southworth, died December 5, 1877, aged 63.

METHODIST SOCIETY. Many years ago a Methodist Society was organized at the Furnace Village, and erected a neat and commodious meeting-house on the west side of Moose Brook about the year 1845. Though not lacking in zeal, it was never strong in membership and wealth. It has generally been classed with Barre by the Conference, the same preacher having charge of both societies. I would be glad to record the names of the several preachers from the beginning, but all my efforts to obtain an accurate list have been unavailing. And equally unsuccessful have I been in seeking from both preachers and laymen such information as would enable me to give a satisfactory account of the fortunes of this society, whether prosperous or adverse.

TRINITARIAN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Almost all the facts here related concerning this church are gleaned from its Manual, and from a Decennial Sermon by its pastor, the Rev. Willard D. Brown. "The very first words in the records of the Church are these: 'From the commencement of the present manufacturing village of Gilbertville in 1860, the proprietors have felt much interest in the moral welfare of the place, and have spared no pains to secure the improvement of its population.'" ¹ The princely munificence of Mr. George H. Gilbert, of his family, and of the manufacturing corporation bearing his name, richly deserves this recognition by the beneficiaries. "The Gilbertville Hall was dedicated December 27, 1863, and was used as a place of worship until the completion and dedication, on September 10, 1874, of the house of worship now occupied by the church and society. From December, 1863, until August, 1865 (except during a portion of the winter of 1864-65), there was preaching Sunday afternoons by Rev. Messrs. Perkins, Tuttle, Gordon, and Merrill, of Ware, Tupper, of Hardwick, and Gurney, of New Braintree. From that time till March, 1866, Rev. William H. Beecher, of North Brookfield, preached as a stated supply, and he was succeeded by Rev. R. P. Wells, from Tennessee, who became acting pastor of the church, and remained with it until January, 1869." ² The Rev. Rufus P. Wells grad. A. C. 1842, and took a partial course at the Theol. Inst. in Connecticut in the class of 1845. After a successful ministry at Gilbertville, he preached at Southampton, 1869-1874, and at Mason, N. H., 1874-1877. He died at Norton, May 25, 1877, aged 59.

The successor of Mr. Wells was Rev. Willard D. Brown, who grad. at Middlebury Coll., 1868, and at Andover, 1869. He became acting pastor of the church in September, 1869, and was ordained and installed December 6, 1870. The church "was organized March 7, 1867, and was composed of thirty-eight members, twenty-three of whom were received by letter, and fifteen on profession of faith. There were connected with it, during its first year, forty-eight members. There have been connected with it, up to the present time (1878), one hundred and thirty-three members, forty of whom were males and ninety-three females; forty-four have been received by letter, and eighty-nine on confession of faith.”¹

Isaac H. Hoyt, elected February 14, 1868, resigned 1868.

Warner H. Joslyn, elected February 14, 1868, resigned 1869.

Wales T. Wilder, elected March 10, 1869.

Melzar Lamberton, elected March 1, 1877.

The meeting-house occupied by this church and society deserves special notice. Constructed of granite, “from foundation to top of spire,” it is a perfect gem of architecture, and is the crowning ornament of the most beautiful and neatly-kept manufacturing village in the Commonwealth. For its erection, Mr. George H. Gilbert, who died May 6, 1869, aged 63, devised by his will the sum of $20,000; the manufacturing corporation which bears his name contributed $20,000 in cash, and in addition gave a spacious lot of land suitably graded and inclosed, and also put in the foundation of the edifice; his widow gave an organ, and his children the furniture, together with a memorial window in memory of a deceased sister. The whole amount of this magnificent gift is estimated at not less than fifty thousand dollars.

CATHOLIC CHURCH. The building up of a large manufacturing establishment at Gilbertville naturally attracted a numerous foreign population, most of which consisted of Catholics. Having worshipped for several years at Ware, they are understood to have been organized into a separate parish at Gilbertville. A spacious brick church was erected in 1872, on the west side of the river, in the northerly part of the village. Mass is celebrated in the forenoon of every Sabbath, with Sunday-school exercises at two o'clock, and Vespers at three o'clock in the afternoon. The congregation is larger than any other in the whole town, embracing about eight hundred souls, including children. The pastor in 1883 is Rev. John T. Sheehan, who resides in Ware. I am unable to give a more particular account of the parish.

GRADUATES. The number of native-born sons of Hardwick who have received a liberal education and collegiate honors is not large. The following list is probably imperfect, but it approximates the truth. Two graduates, Lemuel Hedge and Sanford Lawton, though born elsewhere, are included, because they were brought here in their infancy, were of Hardwick stock, and were trained in our schools. Further notice of all these graduates, and also of the lawyers and physicians named, may be found in the Genealogical Register contained in this volume.

CLERGYMEN. The several clergymen who have had pastoral charge in Hardwick have already been mentioned under the ecclesiastical head, which may suffice.

LAWYERS. TIMOTHY RUGGLES, H. C. 1732, came here in 1754, and was soon appointed justice, and subsequently chief justice, of the Court of Common Pleas. He left Hardwick in 1774, at the commencement of the Revolution, and died at Wilmot, near Annapolis, N. S., August 4, 1795, aged nearly 84.

DANIEL OLIVER, H. C. 1762, commenced practice here early in 1767. He was one of the very few barristers at law in the Province, and apparently popular and successful. He left town with General Ruggles in 1774, and died at Ashstead, England, May 6, 1826, aged 82.

SETH PADDLEFORD, Y. C. 1770, soon commenced practice here. He removed to Taunton about 1778, was judge of probate for Bristol County, received the degree of LL.D. from B. U., 1798, and died January 7, 1810, aged 58.

PELATIAH HITCHCOCK, H. C. 1785, commenced practice here before 1791. He removed to West Brookfield, where he died April 25, 1851, aged 86.

² CONTRACTIONS. A. C. — Amherst College. B. U. — Brown University.

D. C. — Dartmouth College. H. C. — Harvard College. Mid. C. — Middlebury College. T. C. — Tufts College. U. C. — Union College. W. C. — Williams College. Y. C. — Yale College.

1799. He removed about 1807, and died at Enfield in 1835, aged about 60.

ELISHA P. CUTLER, W. C. 1798, commenced practice here. In 1805 "he removed to North Yarmouth, Me., and died there Aug. 29, 1813, aged 32. He was a man of much promise." "Williams Biog. Annals," p. 214.

SAMUEL EASTMAN, D. C. 1802, commenced practice here in 1807. He remained longer than any of his predecessors, but at length removed to Springfield. He died at Amherst, April 11, 1864, aged 81.

JOSEPH KNOX was here before 1831. He removed in 1837 to Rock Island, Ill., where he died August 6, 1881.

JOEL W. FLETCHER, A. C. 1838, came here in 1841, and removed to Leominster in 1843. About 1865 he removed to Cambridge, abandoned the practice of the law, and became an insurance agent. In 1879 he went to Chicago, where he died February 15, 1880, aged 62.

Since 1843, no lawyer has established himself in Hardwick. It is much to the credit of the town, as a peaceable and law-abiding community, that it has never required professional aid in its transaction of business, and its settlement of differences, to such an extent as to induce any lawyer to make this his permanent residence through life.

PHYSICIANS. No trace has been discovered of any physician in Hardwick earlier than 1749; since which time, however, the town has never been destitute of at least one medical adviser.

JEDEDIAH RICE was here as early as April 11, 1749. He had scarcely sufficient time to make full proof of his skill and usefulness, as he died April 4, 1756, before he was thirty years old. He was one of the earliest members of the Separate Church.

JOEL CARPENTER commenced practice here as early as March 25, 1752. He remained certainly until March 1, 1764; but how much longer does not appear.

CHALLIS SAFFORD was here in 1755. He died in 1771, aged 38, and left the reputation of a skilful physician.

JONAS FAY commenced practice soon after 1760. He ranked high as a physician, and still higher as a politician and a patriot. He removed to Bennington about 1768, and closed his active life March 6, 1818, aged 82.

ISAAC ROBINSON was born here in 1747. After a short practice here, he removed to Chesterfield about 1771, and later to Stamford, Vt.

JEDEDIAH FAY was born here in 1755. He is said by tradition to have practised in this town for many years; but precisely how long, and whether he died here, is not ascertained.

JOHN PADDLEFORD, Y. C. 1768, commenced practice here. He was authorized to establish an "inoculating hospital" in 1776. About 1778 he entered the navy as a surgeon, was taken prisoner, and died in 1779, aged about 31.

CHARLES DOOLITTLE was here as early as 1771. He was highly esteemed as a skilful physician and a useful citizen. He died June 12, 1785, aged 36.

LUCIUS DOOLITTLE was here in 1783, with his brother Charles, and succeeded him in practice. After a few years he removed to Lyndon, Vt., but afterwards returned, and died here December 1, 1831, aged 70.

ARTHUR RAWSON was here in 1785. Like several of his predecessors, he was cut off in early life. He died December 25, 1796, aged 38.

CYRUS WASHBURN was born here in 1774. After practising medicine in Hardwick a few years, he removed in 1803 to Vernon, Vt., where he died March 2, 1860, aged 85.

ELIAS PENNIMAN came here about 1793. He became insane, and died February 9, 1830, aged 81.

WILLIAM CUTLER came here in 1795. He was for many years the only apothecary in town, but refrained from medical practice. He died February 9, 1832, aged 78.

CONVERS CUTLER came here in 1796. He died November 1, 1831, aged 76.

JOSEPH WHITE bought the homestead of Martin Kinsley, January 7, 1796, and practised here for a few years. He was published, June 30, 1799, to Beersheba Jenney of New Bedford, to which place it is supposed he soon afterwards removed.

ELLIOTT BECKWITH probably commenced practice here in early life. When he died, March 6, 1814, aged 58, there was a general lamentation.

DAVID BILLINGS was born here in 1771. He practised through life, chiefly in the westerly section of the town and in Ware; he died October 15, 1833, aged 62.

JOSEPH STONE commenced practice here immediately after the death of Dr. Beckwith in 1814. He was skilful and successful as a physician, and rendered various important services to the town which are not yet forgotten. He died June 27, 1849, aged 59.

STEPHEN K. WARDWELL also commenced practice here immediately after the death of Dr. Beckwith in 1814. He was specially distinguished as a surgeon, and had an extensive practice in the neighboring towns. He died October 8, 1844, aged 55.

WILLIAM H. WILLIS was here in 1842, but removed to North Reading before November 14, 1843, when he was recommended to the church in that place.

LAFAYETTE RANNEY, D. C. 1842, and M. D. at the same College, 1845. He commenced practice here, but removed to New York city about 1852.

ISAAC G. CUTLER was here for a time after the death of Dr. Wardwell, but soon removed.

CHARLES FIELD also practised here for a short season after the death of Dr. Wardwell.

ALMON M. ORCUTT was the recognized successor of Dr. Stone, in 1849, and entered at once into a successful practice, which he still retains.

GEORGE CHAMBERLAIN was here about 1850, but soon removed to Brimfield.

JAMES P. LYNDE practised here a few years, but soon after 1855 removed to Athol, where he still resides.

JUBAL C. GLEASON was the first settled physician in Gilbertville. He came from Hubbardston to that village in 1867, and removed to Rockland in 1870.

WILLARD H. STOWE came from Vermont to Gilbertville about 1870, and removed to Palmer in 1876.

WILLARD C. HAVEN, son of Rev. John Haven of Charlton, commenced practice in Gilbertville in 1877, and removed to Brookfield in 1878.

WESLEY E. BROWN came from Paxton to Gilbertville about 1878, and is still a practising physician in that part of the town.

MRS. MARIA RUGGLES (wife of Moses Ruggles), though not a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, has practised medicine in Hardwick for several years, and generally secured the confidence and approbation of her patients.

POETS. Many sons of Hardwick, whether residing here or elsewhere, have been eminently useful to the community in the various learned professions, as well as in the ordinary affairs of life; but very few have been publicly known as authors, either in prose or poetry. Of those few, in addition to brief notices in the Genealogies, I may be pardoned for mentioning two, — the one a permanent resident, and the other native-born.

Deacon Joseph Allen, who spent almost the whole of his active life here, and died August 18, 1793, aged 84, together with an absorbing interest in the straightest theology of his day, had also a passion for rhyming. During his life, especially in old age, he was accustomed to commit to writing his opinions and arguments on theological subjects, with exhortations to his brethren to stand fast in the faith, evidently with the hope that what he had written might at some time be published. He also expressed many of his thoughts in homely verses. After his decease, some friend caused at least a portion of his manuscripts to be printed in a pamphlet entitled "The Last Advice and Farewell of Deacon Joseph Allen to the Church and Congregation of Hardwick," pp. 51, octavo, Brookfield, 1795. The prose articles I omit entirely, but give space to two specimens of history "done into rhyme." The first¹ is entitled —

"SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE TOWN OF HARDWICK, IN THE EARLY STAGES OF IT.

"When I look back, and take a view
Of that which now has been,
There then was found but very few
Which did this Town begin.

"In thirty-six I came into
This then a wilderness;
Great hardships we did undergo;
Our wants did daily press.

"Near thirty miles, without a road,
We were obliged to go,
Through woods, and streams, and depth of snow,
To fetch our daily food.

"The families were twenty-three
That then did here belong;
They all did hardships bear with me,
But now are dead and gone.

"My wife and I are left alone
Of all that married were ;

And we remain their loss to mourn
Of whom we loved so dear.

“Of single men, there are but two,
And both advanced in age;
And all the rest, though but a few,
Are gone from off the stage.

“A Church was gathered the same year
A Minister ordained;
His call it was perfectly clear;
Great blessings he obtained.

“For more than forty-seven years
He did with us remain;
His doctrines were both sound and clear,
All of a gospel strain.

“Five years ago, he took his leave,
And bid us all farewell;
The loss, so great, we can't conceive,
'Tis hard for us to tell.

“So long we have been destitute;
How long we so must dwell;
For it is known without dispute
That none of us can tell.

“Yet must not do as some here say,
But constant use the means,
And wait for the appointed day
Till God shall change the scene.

“The greater part that here was born
Have early took their flight
Into a state that's most forlorn,
Or to a world of light.”

The next has reference to the extraordinarily cold winter of 1779-80,¹ during which, I have heard my elders say, for many

“COLD WEATHER IN OLD TIMES.

“To the Editors of the Evening Post:—
The present winter, thus far, has proved weeks the snow did not melt on the south side of the house-tops ; the public roads became so blocked that locomotion was accomplished almost exclusively on snow-shoes, and burdens were moved on hand-sleds. It is entitled — “ Full seventy years I ’ve seen, and more,

Since I my breath did draw ;
But never knew such cold before
As lately here I saw.

“ From twenty-sixth of November,
Till ten weeks had an end,
A time we all shall well remember
How wood and hay did spend.

With multitude of storms,
Till snow had clogged up all the ways,
For few of them were worn.

At times for forty days, to be the most severe known for some years, and I thought the following extracts from an old journal might be of interest to some of your readers.

“ The winter of 1779–80 was, in America, the severest that had been known since 1741. From November 25 to the middle of March the cold was severe and almost uninterrupted. The following was the state of the thermometer (Fahrenheit) at Hartford, Conn. :

“ COLEMAN BENEDICT.”

- Both at the change and at the full,
Which puts us to amaze.
- “ But little rain did then come down
To mix among the snow,
To wet the dry and thirsty ground,
Till springs were very low.
- “ But at the last, for thirty days,
No storm of any kind,
But only squalls, the wind did rise
And left keen cold behind.
- “ The freezing cold did waste the springs,
Till they were almost dry ;
We hardly could, by any means,
Get ground our corn and rye.
- “ We could obtain but little meal,
To make for us our bread,
While we the keenest cold did feel,
Both up, and in our bed.
- “ The cattle too could hardly get,
From springs that used to burst,
The watery element, to wet,
To quench their daily thirst.
- “ This is thy hand, Oh mighty God,
Who orders seasons all,
And makes us feel thy smarting rod,
To make us prostrate fall.
- “ It is most fit that we endure
Thy sore chastising hand,
For our bold crimes they did procure
These judgments on our land.
- “ Have mercy, Lord, for mercy’s sake,
Give us thy sheltering wing ;
And cause the winter soon to break,
And hasten on the spring.”

Timothy Paige, Jr., Esq., native born, left town when young, and, after residing a few years in Georgia, settled in South-bridge, where he died November 14, 1822, aged 34. He published several poetical articles, generally with the signature of "JAQUES," in the "Massachusetts Spy" and other journals, which were well received, though most of them had a tinge of sadness, the result, perhaps, of a discouraging lack of health. I select the last verses which he prepared for publication (printed in the "Spy" December 25, 1822), together with editorial remarks:—

[With emotions which we cannot easily define, we publish, this week, the "Farewell to Summer," the "saddest and the latest lay" of one who (as is known to many of our readers),

" His finest chords by death unstrung,
Has yielded life's expiring sigh."

The "Farewell" derives additional interest from the fact that, although it has just reached us, it is altogether, even its superscription, in the handwriting of JAQUES. It comes to us like the breathings of a disembodied spirit, like a strain from the chambers of the dead. JAQUES was no stranger to us; in years long gone by we were inmates of the same dwelling. His spirit was too gentle, his chords too finely strung, to encounter the harsh realities of life; and he finally sunk under a sensibility too exquisite to endure the "ills which flesh is heir to." . . . Ed. Spy.]

"FAREWELL TO SUMMER.

"Farewell, glowing Summer, thy last sun is beaming
His glow on thy cheek, and his light on thine eye;
To-morrow shall come, and his mellow beams, streaming,
Shall chequer the clouds of an autumnal sky.

"The foliage and flowers thou so fondly hast cherished,
The embryo hope and the wreck of the Spring,
Deprived of thy warm beams, ere long shall have perished
In the chill blast and shadow of Autumn's dark wing.

"Yet, welcome the change.—He who fashion'd creation
In wisdom such changes saw fit to ordain;
By contrast, life's joys have their just graduation;
Spring owes half its charms to stern Winter's dark reign.

"The sun, o'er his rising when gloomy clouds lower,
Like shadows that darken the light of the breast,

More brightly his beams sheds o'er streamlet and flower,
As in cloudless effulgence he sinks in the west.

“To the Spring let youth's jocund heart pay its devotion,
Contentment still revel on bright Summer cheer ;
But misfortune's eye gazes, with deeper emotion,
On Autumn's dark landscape and foliage sere.

“And Winter, to warm hearts so chilling and cheerless, —
I remember the season when I too was gay ;
When my heart was as light, and mine eyes were as tearless ; —
But the flowers of that Summer have withered away.

“The cold blasts of Winter that sweep o'er the mountain,
His ice-fettered streams, and his wild waste of snow,
Add no chill to man's feelings, when pleasure's pure fountain
Has ceased in his bosom forever to flow.

“Man's Winter is death. In the cold grave shall slumber
The mortal ; in mercy Heaven fixed the decree ;
Pain, disease, disappointment, life's ills without number,
Return to the earth ; yet his spirit is free.

“From that Winter of death, yet a bright Spring ensuing Shall flourish thenceforth in perennial bloom ;
Earth hath change, from the Spring-flower to Winter's dark ruin ;
Existence unchangeable wakes from the tomb.

JAQUES.”

SCHOOLS. — For the first ten years after the settlement of the town I find no trace of public schools.¹ But at a town-meeting, April 2, 1744, it was “voted to get a school-master for the town, to begin in the first of September, and to continue eight months, and to remove four times.” The first school-master was William Thomas.² At the close of his first engagement, under a warrant,

² Father of Robert B. Thomas, the original “Author and Editor of the Farmers' Almanac,” who, in a “Concise Memoir” of himself, published in the almanacs for 1833 and 1834, says his father, William Thomas, was born at Marlborough in 1725, and was educated in the common schools of that town, and of Shrewsbury. “Being of a studious turn of mind and fond of reading, he purchased many books and soon became quite a scholar for those days. In the year 1744 he commenced school-keeping at Brookfield, at the age of nineteen years, which he followed, winters, more or less, for upwards of forty years. The same year commenced in Hardwick, being the first school-master in that town.”

“to see if the town will agree with the school-master for a longer time,” the town, May 13, 1745, “agreed and voted to have Mr. William Thomas to be our school-master for the space of nine months; he is to begin to keep school the first of September, and keep nine months next ensuing; and for his so doing, he is to have eight pounds, old tenor, for each month he finds his own boarding.” In the previous January, the town appointed a “Committee to divide the town into five parts for the school to be kept in”; and the teacher, probably, removed five times, instead of four times, as required by a former order. At a town-meeting, May 16, 1748, the town raised one hundred and fifty pounds, old tenor, for schools, to be divided equally between the five districts. This rule of division prevailed for several years; but it was voted, December 28, 1761, “that the Quarter in the middle of the town shall have three pounds out of the money raised to defray the necessary charges, for the use of the school, more than their equal part of the money raised before for the use of the school, by reason of other Quarters sending so many children into it.”

The town voted, September 22, 1746, “that the Selectmen shall provide a school-master to keep school thirteen months.” Under this vote, it appears that Thomas Ruggles,¹ of Rochester, was employed. Payments “for keeping the schoolmaster Thomas Ruggles” were made, October 19, 1747, to Captain Benjamin Ruggles (for “four weeks and a half”), £4 10s. 0d.; and to Constant Merrick (for four weeks), £4 0s. 0d.; also, March 6, 1748-9, to Matthew Barr (for four weeks), £4 0s. 0d. The names of several early school-masters are gleaned from the treasurer’s accounts; but the materials for a perfect list have not been discovered. It may be observed that almost the whole number were inhabitants of the town, and that Lemuel Hedge, Thomas Wells White, John White, Reed Paige, and, probably, Alexander McDowell, were either students in college, or had already graduated.²

1756-7; John Bradish, 1757; Lemuel Hedge, 1757; Thomas Wells White, 1759-60, 1763, 1772, 1774; Dr. Jonas Fay, 1761-3; Alexander McDowell, 1765; Christopher Paige, Jr., 1766; William Oliver, 1766; Philip Jordan, 1766-7; John White, 1770, 1785; Ebenezer Washburn, 1771-2; Barnabas Sears, 1772; Nathan Wheeler, 1782; Reed Paige, 1785; Nathan Merrick, 1785, 1789; John Rice, 1787.

The Court of Sessions exercised a strict supervision over the towns in regard to schools. In February, 1746-7, apparently before Thomas Ruggles commenced his term of service, this town narrowly escaped presentment, or indictment, for neglect, and voted to pay ten shillings to "Lieut. Eleazar Warner for preventing the town from being presented for want of a school;" probably by showing that the town had already passed a vote to "provide a school-master, to keep school thirteen months." In August, 1758, Hardwick was presented for lack of a grammar school; but the record states that "the said town, being now provided with a school, plead that they would not contend with the king, but put themselves upon his grace; whereupon the said town was dismissed, paying costs."¹ In January, 1767, a fine of £8 6s. 8d. was actually imposed on Hardwick for delinquency in duty; whereupon it was voted, March 2, 1767, "to provide a grammar school-master for the year ensuing." At a later period, March 7, 1785, it was "voted to raise £80 for schooling, and to have the grammar school kept in four parts of the town so long as will clear the town of a fine, an equal proportion in each part, viz., at Edward Ruggles',² Colonel Timothy Paige's,³ David Allen's,⁴ and John Paige's,⁵ on condition of their finding a suitable room and firewood for said school, free of cost from the town." If this vote seem to savor of parsimony, it should be remembered that it was passed at a time when the people, not only of this town, but throughout the Commonwealth, were groaning under the pressure of obligations, both public and private, so intolerable that a year later they were driven to utter desperation, and took up arms to prevent the collection of debts by process of law; so that the appropriation was as large as could be reasonably expected in such a state of financial distress. Generally, through the whole period of its corporate existence,

Among the more recent teachers were Colonel Samuel Mixer, of New Braintree, in the centre district, for five successive winters, before and after 1810, who was afterwards representative, senator, and councillor. Another was Hon. Henry O. Houghton, now of Cambridge (of which city he has been mayor), who graduated at the University of Vermont, 1846, taught in the northeasterly district during the succeeding winter, and has since acquired an enviable reputation as a publisher, printer, and manager of the "Riverside Press."

this town has made a generous provision for the education of the young; but it has never been anxious to obtain notoriety by a competition with other towns in extravagant and unnecessary expenditures. Some of the early appropriations have been mentioned. From 1798 to 1821, the amount annually raised by taxation was five hundred dollars, each district receiving from the treasury the same sum which was assessed on its inhabitants. In 1821, it was ordered that seven of the districts should receive additional sums, amounting in all to eighty dollars; and thenceforth, until 1829, five hundred and eighty dollars was assessed. Since that time, in addition to voluntary subscriptions, and the amount received from the School Fund and from the Dog Tax, the sum annually raised by taxation is exhibited in the following table:—

1833,	700.	1862,	1,300.	1877,	2,000.
1834-6,	800.	1863, 4,	1,500.	1878,	2,500.
1837-44,	1,000.	1865, 6,	1,800.	1879,	2,000.
1845-50,	1,200.	1867, 8,	2,500.	1880,	2,300.

In 1745, the town was divided into five districts: the number was subsequently increased, from time to time, and has been as high as eleven; there are now ten districts, embracing fourteen schools. For many years each district managed its own financial affairs, and employed its own school-teachers, — subject, however, to their approval by the School Committee as competent and duly qualified to teach. This system has been abandoned, and the whole power is now vested in the School Committee, one of whom acts as the general Superintendent of Schools.

The first notice which I find on record concerning public school-houses is under date of April 5, 1790, when it was “voted to raise £500, for the purpose of building school-houses.” The several districts were required to keep these houses in repair, and to rebuild in case of loss. Three quarters of a century later, the town assumed the whole charge and expense, and in a code of by-laws, adopted April 1, 1867, provided that all the school-houses be under the charge of one officer, to be styled Superintendent of School-houses.

Soon after his settlement as pastor of the Congregational Church, in 1832, Rev. John Goldsbury established a High School, which he conducted successfully until 1839, when he removed to Cambridge, to take charge of a similar institution. This school was attended chiefly by Hardwick students, and was maintained at private expense. After the erection of the Town House, the town voted, May 8, 1838, "that the use of the Hall be granted to Mr. Goldsbury for the purpose of keeping a High School."

LIBRARY. At the commencement of the present century two associations were organized in Hardwick, from both of which I derived so much personal benefit that I cannot forbear some notice of them. One of these was a Library Association. Under date of September 16, 1802, an agreement was made as follows: "That a Social Library may be purchased for our mutual benefit, we, the subscribers, do severally agree to the following articles, viz., 1. That as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers shall be obtained, we will each pay a sum not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents, and pay annually a sum not exceeding fifty cents for the term of seven years from the first payment. 2. That no person shall dispose of his right in said Library to any individual until he shall first give the proprietors an opportunity to purchase it at such a price as the proprietors shall annually agree upon. 3. We do further agree that when a sufficient number of subscribers shall be obtained, we will form ourselves into a Society agreeably to the laws of the Commonwealth."

The Society was duly organized at a meeting held in the "Centre School-house," December 13, 1802, when officers were elected, to wit: Thomas Holt, Moderator; Elisha P. Cutler, Clerk; Timothy Paige, Job Dexter, and Samuel Hinkley, Proprietors' Committee; Elisha P. Cutler, Librarian and Treasurer; Cyrus Washburn, Collector; and "It was voted to accept the rules and regulations drawn up by a committee appointed for that purpose, as the Constitution and Laws of the Library Proprietary. . . . It was voted that the subscription paper for said Library should be recorded in the Book containing the Laws and Constitution."

The subscription paper was recorded as directed; but the names of the subscribers are omitted. There is on record, however, "a list of the names of the Proprietors of the First Social Library in Hardwick, November the 12th, 1805, with the number of their shares," which probably corresponds very nearly with the list of subscribers : —

To these should be added the names of six original subscribers, whose shares had been assumed or purchased by the society before the date of this list, viz. : Samuel Beals, December 13, 1802 ; Cyrus Washburn, Ebenezer Ayer, and James Lawton, November 14, 1803 ; Elisha P. Cutler, August 1, 1805 ; and Thomas Holt, November 11, 1805.

At the meeting for organization, December 13, 1802, " it was voted, to receive certain Books formerly belonging to the old Library, to constitute a part of the new." ¹

Elisha P. Cutler remained in office as librarian until August 1, 1805, when being about to remove to Maine, he resigned, and Jeduthun Spooner succeeded him for the remainder of the year. At the annual meeting, in November, 1805, Elijah B. Harmon was elected librarian, and held the office for eight years. Samuel Eastman was elected in 1813, Timothy Fay in 1815, William B. Wesson in 1816, and Samuel Hinkley in 1817, who was re-elected from year to year until November 12, 1827, at which date the record abruptly ends. In the Book of Records a loose sheet is preserved, containing a memorandum of another annual meeting, without date, at which Joseph Stone was elected librarian ; and it was " voted that the Librarian have permission to agree with Messrs. Hammond & Mixer to keep the Library at their Store." A "Catalogue of Books belonging to the Social Library Proprietary in Hardwick, and in possession of the Librarian, May 31st, 1831," was made, and Hammond & Mixer gave to the librarian a receipt for the same, which remains on file. An inspection of the Catalogue will afford proof that the books, though few in number, were of the most instructive and useful character; and it may surprise the readers of this generation, that among the whole number there was only one work of pure fiction, viz., the "Vicar of Wakefield."

MOUNT ZION LODGE. The other association for intellectual and moral improvement, organized at the commencement of this century, was a society of Freemasons, bearing the name of Mount Zion Lodge. Its charter from the Grand Lodge bears date March 11, 1800, and its original members were Calvin Eaton, William Stone, James Lawton, John Shaw, 2d, Abijah Powers, Clark Powers, Asaph Newcomb, Rufus King, Roger West, Bradford Newcomb, James Stone, Thomas Powers, Jr., Seth Hinkley, Daniel Ruggles, Daniel Billings, Jr., Luke Brown, Nathan Freeman, Edward Ruggles, Peter Blackmer, Jr., Sylvanus Thompson, Samuel Beals, Daniel Thomas, 2d, Samuel French, Thomas Wheeler, Jr., and Elias Hall. About one half of these persons resided in Hardwick, and nearly all the others in Greenwich, including what is now Enfield. For the first quarter of the century the Lodge prospered, and embraced among its members many of the most eminent citizens of the before-named towns, and also of Brookfield (especially that portion which is now West Brookfield), New Braintree, Barre, and Dana. Its first place of meeting was in a spacious hall in the Willis Tavern, on the turnpike, marked "Dr. Wardwell" on the R. Map. In 1809, Daniel Ruggles erected a new tavern in the centre of the town, in which he fitted a hall for masonic purposes, and the Lodge was removed thither on the 18th day of October in that year. A procession was formed at the old hall at ten o'clock A. M., and proceeded to the meeting-house, where a discourse was delivered by Rev. James Thompson, of Barre, and the officers of the Lodge were publicly installed. The procession was then again formed and proceeded to the new hall, which was duly dedicated, and was thenceforth the masonic home of the Lodge, until, by permission of the Grand Lodge, it was removed to Barre, March 14, 1855.

In 1826, an anti-masonic tornado originated in Western New York, and rapidly gathering strength, swept furiously over the Northern States, carrying devastation and ruin in its path. Not only Masonic Lodges were destroyed, but the Churches of Christ were rent asunder, and many of them utterly ruined. Mount Zion Lodge was not seriously affected by this tempest until about 1832. It was not then absolutely destroyed, but for the next ten years was in a disorganized condition, and had scarcely more than a name to live. After its revival in 1842, its return to prosperity was very slow. Many of its former most active members had either deceased or had become disheartened, and retired from participation in its labors; and of those who had become of lawful age during the period of furious excitement, many had imbibed prejudices against the institution, which it was very difficult to overcome; and hence the accession of new members was hindered. Gradually, however, and notably since its removal to Barre, it has renewed its activity, and its prospect of permanent prosperity is highly encouraging.

² It was chiefly through the exertions of Major Ruggles (who had returned from Barre to Hardwick) that any vitality in the Lodge was preserved. For many years the Grand Lodge constituted him a "special agent" to conserve the interests of Freemasonry in Worcester County and all that part of the State lying west of it. On the first day of January, 1842, he reorganized Mount Zion Lodge, and, as its Master, nursed it judiciously for the next three years. This was the first-fruits of renewed masonic prosperity in Western Massachusetts.

POST-OFFICES, MAIL-CARRIERS, AND POST-RIDERS. At the commencement of the present century there was no post-office in Hardwick, nor indeed in this part of the county of Worcester. Letters addressed to our inhabitants were left at the post-office in Worcester, advertised occasionally, and at length obtained personally or by private conveyance. Some were probably conveyed by the post-riders, who distributed newspapers weekly through the county. The Worcester postmaster advertised letters remaining in his office, December 26, 1801, for persons residing in Gardner, Hardwick, Hubbardston, Oxford, Sutton, and Westborough; and the same towns are mentioned in an advertisement dated April 5, 1802, with the addition of New Salem and South Brimfield.

About the year 1805, a post-office was established here, and Dr. William Cutler was appointed postmaster, who was succeeded by his son, Samuel Fiske Cutler; together they held the office about thirty years, until 1836, when Frederick W. Delano was appointed, and the office was removed from its former location (where William Paige now resides) to the "Mixer Store." In 1850, Albert E. Knight was appointed, and is still in office after the lapse of more than thirty years. At a comparatively recent period, two more post-offices have been established here, one at Gilbertville, April 1, 1863, Lewis N. Gilbert, postmaster (Charles F. Hitchcock, assistant); and the other at the Furnace, April 1, 1875, Benjamin F. Paige, postmaster. The long-continued service of these several officers indicates faithfulness on their part and the approbation of their fellow-citizens.

For several years before the establishment of the post-office, newspapers, and very probably letters occasionally, had been brought into the town by post-riders, who resided here, and travelled, on horseback, once a week, to Worcester and back, and also to Northampton and back again,— each trip occupying two days. The earliest of these, whose name I have ascertained, was Eleazar Barrows, whose family resided in New Salem, though he died here, April 15, 1803, aged 58.¹ He announced his retirement from business, April 24, 1799, in the "Massachusetts Spy": "Eleazar Barrows informs his friends and customers that he has disposed of his route to Abraham White of Hardwick, who he is confident will be punctual in his business, and that the terms will be as usual. Said Barrows, sensible of the liberal support he has had from many of his customers, returns them his warmest thanks. And those who have been in arrears and still remain so, he flatters himself that this warning (being the last that will lay in his power to give them) will rouse them to a sense of their duty: for why will ye be sued? O, ye delinquent ones." I find no further trace of "Abraham White of Hardwick." But in January, 1803, George W. Webb, also of Hardwick, commenced his service in the same capacity, and six months later addressed to his customers a moving exhortation: "George W. Webb, news-carrier from Worcester to Northampton, informs his customers, that it is now six months since he began to supply them with news. He hopes he has given satisfaction to all, in the line of his business. He wishes those who are indebted to him to make an immediate settlement; they must remember that without the refreshing showers from heaven, the corn must wither on the stalk."²

Soon after this date the post-office was established; but whether Mr. Webb became the first mail-carrier, I know not. I do remember, however, that for several years the mail was carried by the post-rider, and that the service was performed on horseback. Afterwards, until 1818, a wagon, drawn by one horse, was used, affording opportunity to accommodate a single passenger. One of the latest professional post-riders was Nathan Reed, Jr., who left the service under a cloud, and who was the only one suspected of dishonesty, so far as my knowledge extends. He advertised, June 16, 1816, that he "will have rode six months as Post on the 26th instant, up to which time he requests payment."³

In 1818, Cyrus Stockwell made a vast improvement in the mail service. He had advertised, February 25, 1818,⁴ that six months' service as post-rider would expire on the 11th of March; and on the 26th of May he gave notice¹ that he would immediately commence running a MAIL STAGE from Worcester, through Hardwick, to Northampton, once a week; to leave Worcester every Wednesday, at 9 o'clock A. M., and arrive at Hardwick the same day and at Northampton every Thursday afternoon; to leave Northampton every Friday at 8 A. M., and arrive at Hardwick on the same day; and to leave Hardwick every Tuesday at 8 A. M., and arrive at Worcester on the same day. In other words, the mail stage was to run from Hardwick to Worcester every Tuesday, and return on Wednesday, and to Northampton every Thursday, and return on Friday.

The next material improvement was made after the present Boston and Albany Railroad was opened as far as West Brookfield. The mail was then carried for several years from West Brookfield to Hardwick by Mr. William C. Wesson, who ran a two-horse mail-coach between the two towns, daily, from July 1, 1845, to April 12, 1858. He was succeeded by others, until the cars commenced running on the Ware River Railroad, from Palmer to Gilbertville, in 1870. Since that time the mails have been brought into Hardwick by steam power, and each of the three post-offices receives at least a daily mail.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION. At a town meeting, April 2, 1838, it was "Voted to celebrate the Centennial Anniversary of the incorporation of the town; Voted, that the selectmen be a Board of Managers to conduct and manage said celebration; Voted, that the selectmen be requested to fix on a day for said celebration as near the date of said anniversary as can conveniently be done." The Board of Managers selected November 15, 1838, as the appropriate day for the celebration; but for what reason I know not. The anniversary of the incorporation did not occur until January 10 (or, allowing eleven days for change of style, January 21), 1839. Perhaps it was anticipated that the weather would be more propitious in November than in January; but the event proved otherwise. On the day of the celebration I think more rain fell than on any other day during that year. Despite this inclemency, however, a goodly number assembled, and, omitting the intended preliminary ceremonies, made their way, as best they could, to the old meeting-house, where for the next four hours they exhibited the most praiseworthy patience and forbearance. An account of the celebration, written by Dr. Joseph Stone, was published in the "Barre Gazette," November 23, 1838. A commendable local pride and a generous friendship to the orator of the day may have imparted a somewhat roseate tint to the picture; but I venture to insert it, as the only contemporaneous description of the Centennial Celebration which is known to exist:—

"CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION AT HARDWICK.

"The day assigned for this celebration, Thursday, the 15th instant, was peculiarly unfavorable. With the exception of a short period, from ten to eleven o'clock A. M., the rain fell copiously through the day. In consequence of this, many were prevented from attending, and many of the previous arrangements could not be carried into effect.

"A procession of citizens only was formed at the Brick Church, and, attended by a fine band of music, the members of which were mostly from Barre, proceeded to the old meeting-house, where the following exercises were attended to:—

"1st. Music; the 100th of Watts' Psalms. Tune, Denmark.

"Notwithstanding the unpleasant state of the weather, the large meeting-house was well filled by an attentive and gratified auditory.

"After the services about one hundred citizens and ladies sat down to an excellent repast furnished by Mr. S. A. Smith. A gentleman from Hampden County, who was probably unused to the style in which such things are done in this vicinity, assured the writer of this article that he considered the entertainment superior to any he had ever before witnessed.

“The people of Hardwick are much indebted to the efforts of Mr. Moses Mandell, a native of that town, but now a resident in Barre, for the excellence of the musical performances by the choir.

“In delivering his address, Mr. Paige occupied two hours and fifty minutes. Perhaps higher praise cannot be given it than by saying that a large and promiscuous audience, going without their dinners to a late hour in the afternoon, and with a prospect, which was fully realized, of a dark and stormy night to travel home in, were nevertheless so highly entertained as to show no marks of impatience, but continued in rapt and undivided attention to the close. He described the purchase of the township from the Indians, and disclosed all that could now be known of the early history of the town, from the time when its northernmost inhabitant had no white settler between him and Canada to the time of the incorporation of the town, and gave a hasty sketch of the most prominent particulars in its history from that period to the present; and closed with an eloquent appeal to the inhabitants in behalf of their shorn and neglected centre burying ground. Arrangements have been made for printing the address; and its appearance from the press will be anxiously looked for by many, both of those who heard, as well as those who did not hear it.

“It is believed that the people separated with the conviction impressed on their minds, that the contemplation of the hardships and the sufferings, of the piety and the patriotism, of their excellent forefathers, was a much purer and nobler employment, and left much more pleasing emotion on the mind, than could result from either successful or unsuccessful electioneering efforts.

At the request of the hearers, the Address was published with an appendix, in a pamphlet of 76 pages, octavo. It was prepared under serious disadvantages, — a principal one of which was a lack of time to verify certain traditions received from the “oldest inhabitants,” and to examine the original authorities for currently reported facts. For this and other reasons, several errors occurred in the printed copy, the more important of which are corrected in this volume.

MILITARY HISTORY.

French War. — Brigadier Ruggles. — Muster Rolls. — Revolutionary War. — Minute-Men. — General Warner. — Lieutenant-Colonels Rice and Sears. — Muster Rolls. — Descriptive Rolls. — Petition of Shearjashub Goodspeed. — War of 1812. — Abortive Attempt to enlist Volunteers. — Political Celebration of Independence. — Oration. — Toasts. — War of the Rebellion. — Hardwick Soldiers. — Officers of Militia.

THE political action of the town in seasons of warfare has been described heretofore. It remains that the personal service of individuals should be mentioned. Except the sanguinary struggle at Winnimisset, in 1675, and the hand-to-hand conflict near the same spot, about half a century later, briefly related in Chapter I., the inhabitants of this territory were not engaged in actual hostilities until what is sometimes denominated the "old French War," commenced in 1744.¹ In this war, Hardwick contributed one victim, Samuel Abbott, who was killed at Fort Massachusetts, August 2, 1748. He was a member of Captain Ephraim Williams' company.

In the "French War" which followed, commencing in 1753, though not formally declared until 1756, Hardwick furnished its full quota of officers and privates. The most conspicuous officer hailing from this town was Timothy Ruggles,² who having already been commissioned colonel of the regiment of militia which embraced this town within its limits, entered the army as a colonel in 1755, was promoted to the office of brigadier-general,

² It is worthy of remark, that in the French War, the Revolutionary War, and the Shays Rebellion, the military commander, highest in rank in this county, resided in Hardwick, namely, Brigadier-General Ruggles and Major-General

Warner. Moreover, the commander of the regiment to which Hardwick belonged resided here: Brigadier Ruggles, as the custom then was, retained the command of his regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel Stephen Rice, who was elected April 10, 1776, was the commander, after the resignation of Colonel Converse in 1778, until 1781, when Colonel Timothy Paige was elected, who remained in office during the Shays Insurrection.

and served faithfully until the close of the war.¹ Among his staff officers, inhabitants of Hardwick, were Samuel Robinson, Jr., adjutant, 1757; Challis Safford, surgeon, 1757; and Challis Safford and Joel Carpenter, surgeons' mates, 1759.

Next to Brigadier Ruggles in prominence among Hardwick officers was Captain Samuel Robinson, who commanded a company in every campaign from 1755 to 1759 inclusive, with perhaps a single exception. His muster-roll from March 27 to December 26, 1755, includes thirty-eight Hardwick names, to wit:—

Samuel Robinson, Captain.	John Green.
William Paige, Lieutenant.	Larkin Green.
Eleazar Rice, Ensign.	Thomas Johnson.
John Blunt, Sergeant.	Edmund Jordan.
David Doane, Sergeant.	John Jordan.
Ebenezer Whipple, Sergeant.	Jacob Knowlton.
Richard Ellis, Clerk.	Phineas Powers.
William Wood, Corporal.	Moses Seaver.
Edward Blair, Corporal.	Job Smith.
Isaac Gibbs, Corporal.	Nathaniel Sprout.
Thomas Barnes, Corporal.	Daniel Stearns. ⁴
Philip Safford, Drummer. ²	Thomas Stevens.
David Aiken.	Elkanah Stewart.
Simeon Bacon.	Seth Stewart.
Jason Badcock.	William Stone.
Nathan Billings.	Bartholomew Taylor.
Oliver Cobleigh.	James Taylor.
Jonas Fay.	Pelataiah Ware.
Joseph Gilbert. ³	James Whipple.

This company was engaged in the sanguinary battle near Lake George, on the 8th of September, 1755, and Sergeants Blunt and Whipple, Corporal Gibbs, and privates John Green and Bartholo-probably designed in part as a reward for the same service. "We hear there are new appointments for Surveyors of his Majesty's Woods in North America. . . . Hon. Brigadier Ruggles for this Province and the northern parts of Nova Scotia, . . . with salaries of £300 sterling, per annum, each." Boston News Letter, October 11, 1770.

mew Taylor, were killed ; on the next day, Corporals Wood and Blair were promoted to the rank of sergeants, and Edmund Jordan, Jacob Knowlton, and James Whipple were made corporals, to supply vacancies caused by death and promotion.

In the campaign from February 18 to December 24, 1756, Captain Robinson commanded a company in which were Hardwick men (with their ages indicated by the figures in parentheses), as follows : —

Samuel Robinson, Captain (48).	Joshua Farr (21). ²
Ezekiel Pratt, Ensign (37).	Benjamin Goddard (19).
Jonas Fay, Clerk (20).	Dudley Jordan (20). ³
Philip Safford, Drummer (20).	Edmund Jordan (45). ⁴
Benjamin Whipple, Sergeant (30).	Amos Marsh (22).
Jacob Knowlton, Sergeant (27).	Joseph Nichols (18).
David Gitchell, Sergeant (21).	Isaiah Pratt (35). ⁵
Samuel Atwood (30).	Samuel Robinson, Jr. (17).
Daniel Billings (28).	Samuel Stewart (18). ⁶
Samuel Church (40). ¹	Seth Stewart (20). ⁷
Samuel Dexter (21).	Nathaniel Winslow (23).
James Doane (26).	Seth Winslow, Jr. (20).

It does not appear that Captain Robinson performed regular service in the field during the campaign of 1757 ; but he was not idle. The records of the Council show that provision was made to pay “ to Captain Samuel Robinson the sum of £245, for ninety-eight men, and the sum of £9 15. 6. for his expenses in enlisting said men.”⁸ And in the pay-roll of Colonel Timothy Ruggles, in the expedition for the relief of Fort William Henry, is found the name of Samuel Robinson, captain.⁹

The regular muster-roll of Captain Robinson’s company for the campaign from March 13 to December 1, 1758, is not found ; but a descriptive roll, omitting the officers, contains eighteen Hardwick names : —

David Allen.	James Fay.
Oliver Cobleigh.	Jonas Fay.
Samuel Dexter.	Watson Freeman.
Daniel Fay.	David Gitchell.

² Died October 2, 1756.

For this military duty in 1758, the Council made provision to pay "to Capt. Samuel Robinson and Company the sum of £1422 3s. 7d., for their service on the intended expedition against Canada, under the command of General Abercromby, to discharge the Muster Roll, beginning the 13th day of March 1758, and ending the 1st day of December following."¹

There is similar proof of similar service in 1759, but the Muster Roll has disappeared. The Council passed an order to pay "to Capt. Samuel Robinson and Company for their service in the expedition against Canada under General Amherst the sum of £908 10s. 6d., to discharge their Muster Roll beginning the 31st day of May 1759, and ending the 24th day of December following."²

Captain William Paige, who had served as lieutenant of Captain Robinson's company in 1755, commanded a company, from May 31 to December 24, 1759,³ composed of officers and soldiers belonging to several towns. The commissioned officers were: —

William Paige, of Hardwick, Captain.
 Cornelius Stowell, of Worcester, First Lieutenant.
 James Henderson, of Rutland, Second Lieutenant.
 William Ward, of Worcester, Ensign.

The following Hardwick names are found: —

Elisha Cobb, Corporal.	Lemuel Cobb.
Samuel Billings.	Zurishaddai Doty.
Joseph Chamberlain.	Jonas Paige.
John Cobb.	Shubael Winslow.

From March 11 to December 29, 1760, Captain Paige commanded a company, composed, like the other, of officers and men residing in several towns, and including seven Hardwick names: —

² Ibid., February 26, 1760.

³ Captain Paige is supposed to have commanded a company at an earlier date; but no muster roll of such service is found.

William Paige, Captain.	Isaiah Glazier.
Samuel Hedge, Corporal. ¹	Jonas Paige.
Edward Foster.	David Weeks.
David Glazier.

Captain Ebenezer Cox, of Wrentham, commanded a company during the campaigns of 1758, 1759, 1760, and, probably, in 1761.² He then removed to Hardwick, and from March 4, to December 19, 1762, commanded a company, in which were Hardwick men, to wit: —

Ebenezer Cox, Captain.	John Haskell.
Daniel Hastings, Corporal.	John McSwain.
David Aiken.	Caleb Nye.
Samuel Billings.	Benjamin Raymond.
John Cobb.	John Raymond.
Lemuel Cobb.	Joel Simonds.
Thomas Freeman.	Nathaniel Whitcomb.
Stephen Gorham.	James Winslow.

To the foregoing persons should be added regimental staff-officers, namely: —

Samuel Robinson, Jr., Adjutant.	Challis Safford, Surgeon.
Elisha Hedge, Commissary.	Joel Carpenter, Surgeon's Mate.

Besides these were others who performed similar service under captains who did not reside in Hardwick, to wit: —

Stephen Fay, Sergeant.	Richard Hatch.
Ebenezer Safford, Sergeant.	Simeon Hazeltine.
Samuel Winslow, Sergeant.	Samuel Hunt.
Isaac Clark, Corporal.	Ebenezer Lawrence.
Ebenezer Lyscomb, Corporal.	Benjamin Mann.
Timothy Abbott.	William Merrick.
Abel Benjamin.	Peter Ott.
Elisha Church.	Joseph Petrell.
Richard Church.	Timothy Sauge (or Sogg).
Dan (a negro).	John Train.
Ichabod Dexter.	Holland Weeks.
Joshua Elwell.	Paul Whipple.
Caleb Green.	James Whitcomb. ³
Zachariah Haskell.

¹ Samuel Hedge died September 11, 1760.

² Captain Cox, probably, rendered service before 1758, perhaps in a subordinate station. His epitaph asserts that he

"In six campaigns intrepid trod the field, Nor to the Gallic Power would ever yield."

³ James Whitcomb, aged 23, was in General Winslow's army, in the Eastern Expedition, and was killed in July, 1755,

All the persons before-mentioned are enrolled as officers and soldiers in the regular army for one or more campaigns. In addition to these, two whole companies were in the field, for shorter periods, on special occasions. One of these companies was in the Crown Point Expedition, from September 20 to December 5, 1756, namely: —

Paul Mandell, Captain.	Watson Freeman.
Nathan Stone, Lieutenant.	Solomon Gilbert.
Noah Mandell, Ensign. ¹	Samuel Harrington.
Timothy Newton, Clerk.	Zachariah Haskell.
James Fay, Sergeant.	Jacob Hastings.
Solomon Aiken, Sergeant.	Elisha Hedge, Jr.
Silas Bowker, Sergeant.	Joseph Hinds.
Samuel Steele, Corporal.	Seth Hinkley.
Nathaniel Merrick, Corporal.	Sylvanus Howe.
Joseph Higgins, Corporal.	David Marble.
Henry Chase, Corporal.	Nathan Marble.
Eliphalet Ayers.	Benjamin Negus.
James Bacon.	Daniel Parkhurst.
David Barr.	John Paige.

Isaiah Carpenter.	Timothy Sauge.
Lemuel Cobb.	James Whipple.
Ebenezer Cummings.	Asa Whitcomb.

Another company marched, August 9, 1757, as far as Kinderhook, for the relief of Fort William Henry.

Joseph Warner, Captain.	John Aiken, Sergeant.
Joseph Ruggles, Lieutenant.	Jonathan Farr, Sergeant.
Ezra Leonard, Ensign.	Elisha Billings, Sergeant.
Silas Newton, Clerk.	Solomon Aiken, Corporal.
Stephen Fay, Sergeant.	Samuel Bridge.

as mentioned in the manuscript diary of Surgeon John Thomas: "July y^o 25, A. D. 1775. I lodged at Fort Lawrance. Lient. Willson came from Gauspereau, bringing an account that one of Capt. Cobb's men were killed, passing from y^o foart to y^o vilige on his hors; he and his

During the Revolutionary War, Hardwick furnished its full quota of officers and soldiers. In anticipation of its commencement, as heretofore related, the whole military force was organized under officers elected by the town, including a company of "minute men," of whom the first captain was Jonathan Warner; he was immediately elected colonel, and became brigadier-general February 13, 1776, and major-general June 28, 1781, in which office he served his country faithfully until the end of the war, and during the Shays Insurrection. The company of "minute men," under a new captain, promptly reported for duty at Cambridge immediately after the memorable 19th day of April, 1775. The members of this company who responded to the call were: —

Simeon Hazeltine, Captain.
 Josiah Locke, Lieutenant.
 Ebenezer Washburn, Lieutenant.
 Barnabas Sears, Sergeant.

Of these sixty-four persons, twenty-one immediately enlisted in the "Continental Army;" and of the forty-three others, at least thirty rendered service, sooner or later, in the same army. Captain Hazeltine was among the first to organize a company, consisting chiefly of Worcester County men, to serve three months from May 1, 1775. The roll, exhibited at Roxbury, June 10, containing fifty-nine names, included thirteen belonging to Hardwick, namely:—

Simeon Hazeltine, Captain.	Joseph Nye.
John Raymond, Sergeant.	Josiah Perkins.
Prince Haskell, Drummer.	Daniel Rice.
Seth Babbitt.	Ebenezer Sprout.
John Butler.	Nathaniel Sprout.
Edmund Freeman.	Ephraim Titus.
Ebenezer Luce.

It has already been mentioned that in reorganizing the militia with reference to the impending outbreak of hostilities, the town elected Samuel Billings, Jr., as captain "for the south side of the town," November 21, 1774. When the first blow was struck on the memorable nineteenth day of April, he immediately enlisted a company consisting of fifty-nine persons, fifty-seven of whom were Hardwick men, to serve eight months from May 4, 1775, to wit:—

Samuel Billings, Jr., Captain.	John Hanmer, Sergeant.
Barnabas Sears, Lieutenant.	Steward Southgate, Sergeant.

Samuel Dexter, a member of the company of "minute-men," having enlisted a company at a later day, was commissioned captain December 10, 1775. "A Muster Roll of Capt. Samuel Dexter's Militia Company in Col. Learned's Regiment, from Hardwick, New Braintree, and Oakham, for their travel from and to home, at one penny a mile, — Roxbury Camp, January, A. Barnabas Sears, sergeant of minute-men, and lieutenant under Captain Billings, was captain in February, 1776, was elected major June 26, 1776,¹ and was styled Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant in a roll of field officers dated 1781. The roll of his company, at the Dorchester Camp, February 15, 1776, contained fourteen Hardwick names, to wit:—

Barnabas Sears, Captain.

In June, 1777, General Warner was appointed to command an expedition to St. John's River, N. S. His acceptance exhibits both his patriotism and his modesty: "May it please your Honors. By the direction of your Honors, the Secretary has acquainted me of my appointment as Brigadier General to command the Forces destined to St. Johns in Nova Scotia, and requires my immediate answer. I could wish a person of more experience had been made choice of, as your Honors must be sensible that military knowledge and experience is highly necessary in an undertaking of this importance, and the little opportunity I have had to qualify myself for so important an affair. But since it has pleased your Honors to appoint me to command in this Expedition, I will exert my poor abilities, and endeavor to deserve the honor conferred on your Honors' most obedient humble servant. JON^A. WARNER. Boston, June 25th, 1777. To the Honorable Board."²

Before this expedition was fully organized, however, the advance of General Burgoyne on the northern frontier created widespread alarm, and urgent appeals for aid were issued by the civil and military authorities. Among these was a letter from Colonel Seth Warner, still on file in the Mass. Archives, excvii., 321. On its receipt, General Warner forwarded it by express to the Council of this State:—“To the Hon^{ble} Council of the State of the Massachusetts Bay: Gentlemen, I have this minute received an express from Col^o. Warner which I thought it my duty to forward to your Honors immediately. Accordingly I thought it expedient to issue out orders for every sixth man in my Brigade to march to the assistance of Col^o. Warner, by the way of Bennington, and desire your Honors would give direction in the matter as you shall think proper. As I have orders to march on an expedition to St. John’s River, in Nova Scotia, your Honors will determine what is most expedient in the present distressing circumstances of affairs.¹ I am your Honors’ most obedient humble servant, JON^A. WARNER. Hardwick, July 22, 1777, at 11 o’clock at night.”

The detachment from General Warner’s brigade marched within a few days, one company of which was commanded by Captain Edmund Hodges, one of the “minute-men,” who had already become captain of militia. He was detached, with a portion of his company, to which were added officers and soldiers from other towns. The company, thus formed, was attached to the regiment of Colonel Job Cushing,² and served in the Northern Army from July 27 to August 29, 1777. The muster roll included twenty-nine Hardwick names:—

Edmund Hodges, Captain.
Solomon Aiken, Sergeant.
Ebenezer Lyscom, Sergeant.
Stephen Newton, Sergeant.
Daniel Fay, Jr., Corporal.

Atwood Aiken, Corporal.
Oliver Bailey, Corporal.

detached by General Burgoyne had been defeated by the troops under General Stark, at the famous Bennington Battle, August 16, 1777, and the danger of serious disaster had been averted. But the main army of Burgoyne was still advancing. The volunteers had made no preparation for long service, and soon returned home. In this emergency, fresh levies of troops were necessary for the public defence. The order of General Warner to the commander of a regiment in his brigade has escaped destruction, and remains on file in the Massachusetts Archives, cxcviii. 127 : —

“Bennington, August 25, 1777. Sir, With grateful acknowledgments of your forwardness in turning out men for the assistance of the Army in the late alarming crisis, wherein we have been favored with a surprising victory, but as the enemy are repulsed, and the men who came on the alarm cannot be prevailed with to tarry till the last of November, I am to direct you to see that every sixth man in your Regiment, agreeable to the Resolves of the General Court, be detailed and with all possible despatch marched to join my Brigade in the Northern Army, now stationed at this place, as those that turned out as volunteers are not prepared to tarry so long, and it is very necessary that the General Officers should know what number of men they have to depend on, in order to plan proper measures for the further repelling of the enemy. Therefore said Order of Court must be immediately complied with. I am, Sir, yours &c., JON^A WARNER, B. G. You will form the men detached from your Regiment into Companies, as near as may be to Order of Court, and appoint proper Officers to command the same, and order them to march with all possible despatch. To these may not improperly be added the names of Sylvanus Brimhall, Jeremiah Campbell, Adonijah Dennis, Theophilus Hastings, and Captain Zenas Phinney, who rendered service while residing elsewhere, and afterwards removed to Hardwick, where, in their old age, they were enrolled as pensioners. Captain Daniel Egery, of Dartmouth, and Captain Israel Trow, of Norton, each commanded a company during one or more campaigns, but spent their last days here.

Among the large number of soldiers furnished by this town, it must be supposed that some were killed, and that others lost their health, or suffered other casualties. But the Muster Rolls, unlike those of the French War, are almost entirely destitute of information in this regard. There is preserved, however, in the Massachusetts Archives, clxxxiii. 405, a petition in regard to a minor casualty, which may deserve insertion, as it exhibits the character of a private soldier's outfit:—

“To the Hon. the Council and House of Representatives of the State of the Massachusetts Bay. The petition of the subscriber humbly sheweth, that your petitioner, being a soldier in Capt. Warner's Company in Col. Holman's Regiment, when our troops retreated out of New York, A. D. 1776, and being on guard when the retreat began, your petitioner lost his pack, containing the following articles, viz.:—

One knapsack, @ 4s.	One straight bodied all wool coat, @ 60s.	} £3. 4. 0.
One jacket of broadcloth, lined with shalloon, @ 40s.
One pair of long woollen trowsers, @ 8s.		2. 0. 0.
One blanket, @ 20s.	2 pair stockings, @ 6s.	0. 8. 0.
One pair checked woollen shirts, @ 22s.		1. 12. 0.
		1. 2. 0.
	Total,	£8. 6. 0.

These are, therefore, to pray the Honorable Court that the above account may be allowed, and your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

SHEARJASHUB GOODSPEED.

“Hardwicke, Feb. 9, 1778.”

A large majority of the inhabitants of Hardwick were politically opposed to the War of 1812, and no action in its favor by the town is found on record. Personally, I remember that in consequence of a military requisition, there was an assembly of the militia in the spacious meeting-house, at which Major Thomas Wheeler presided. I was one of the excited group of boys who occupied the gallery, and witnessed the proceedings with intense interest. Although opposed to the war, Major Wheeler, as a good soldier, obeyed orders, and earnestly exhorted the soldiers to volunteer for the public service. At the close of his speech, he ordered a drummer to pass through the aisles, and invited volunteers to “fall in.” But, according to the best of my recollection, only one soldier responded. Convers Cutler, Jr., followed the drummer on his noisy march round and round the house many times, but in vain. The attempt to procure volunteers was abandoned, and resort was had to the draft. Of those thus compelled to enter the army I remember only one, Jonathan Warner, Jr., son of my father’s nearest neighbor. He returned safely after a short service, and subsequently removed to Hardwick, Vt., where he died in a good old age. Among the Hardwick soldiers in that war should be included Jacob D. Rand, a native of Charlestown, who resided here several years about the commencement of this century. Before the war, he enlisted as a soldier in the United States army, in which capacity he served until the surrender of General Hull, at Detroit, which act he always regarded as cowardly, if not treacherous, and could never speak of it except in language of indignation. After he was liberated, either by exchange or parole, he returned here, resumed business as a cabinet maker, and died October 8, 1840, aged 63.

A few weeks after the declaration of war, the Fourth of July was celebrated here by an oration in the densely-packed meeting-house, and a dinner and toasts under a bower on the Common. The orator was the Rev. Festus Foster, of Petersham, who sharply arraigned the Democratic party, represented by its great leader, Jefferson, and his successor, Madison, as responsible for the quarrel with England, which had resulted in war, — as he alleged under the influence and for the special interest of France. After

“ Mr. Jefferson’s accession to the Presidency formed a new era in our political history. . . . That system of policy under which our nation had enjoyed unparalleled prosperity was discarded for the abortive experiments of a visionary philosophy. The internal taxes, which were laid to augment our naval establishment, were suddenly repealed, and our ships dismantled and abandoned. For our new philosophers considered a navy worse than useless; and a full treasury, lest it should tempt the cupidity of foreign nations, and involve us in war. . . . European nations smiled at our folly, and seized our defenceless commerce. Our merchants petitioned to government for protection; our government remonstrated to the belligerents, who knew our weakness, and were insulted. Under the pretext of avenging our wrongs and insults, our whole commerce was suddenly annihilated; many of our merchants made bankrupts; our seamen made to beg their bread or flee their country; and the whole community made poor in the midst of plenty. That a measure, which injured us more than all other nations, should be adopted and persevered in by our government, against the loud remonstrances of half the nation, is a mystery which yet remains to be explained, unless the hand of Napoleon was there. . . . The Embargo was not only approved by France after it was laid, but it was known in Paris that such a measure was about to be adopted, before Mr. Jefferson recommended it to Congress. Can any one who impartially views these facts doubt for a moment who originated and imposed upon us that destructive system? Do you wish to know who has annihilated neutral commerce, and barred you from the ocean? Ask France. Do you wish to know why the importation of British goods into these United States has been prohibited by law? Ask France. Do you wish to know why and by whom you have been driven into a war with England? Ask France. Her continental system has become the basis of our maritime law. The Embargo, under which we so long groaned and now groan, is her offspring. She dictates to us with whom we shall make peace, with whom war. We bow submissively to her imperious mandates, and yet contend that we are free.”

The toasts, which followed the dinner, exhibit a similar partisan spirit: ¹—

“The day we celebrate : It dissolved our union with Britain ; may it never witness our alliance with France. — The memory of Washington : Had not our rulers set at nought his counsels, we had been at peace. — James Madison : It is not the most distinguishing trait in his character, that he does wrong by design, but that he should never do right by mistake. — His late Excellency Elbridge Gerry : Charity hopeth all things ; we therefore say to the proscriptions and outrages of his last year’s administration, his poverty, and not his will, consented. — His Excellency Caleb Strong : At the call of his countrymen, he comes like Cincinnatus, from the sweets of retirement to correct the abuses of a maladministration, and restore to the people their equal rights. — The Hon. Timothy Pickering : A real patriot, ever faithful in declaring those stubborn facts which Democrats dread to hear. — Massachusetts : The first to resist the encroachments of foreign despotism, — may she be the last to submit to the usurpation of a domestic faction. — Thomas Jefferson : He found our government ‘in the full tide of successful experiment ;’ he left it ebbing to the common vortex of Republics. . . . The projected conquest of Canada : The feats of Don Quixote shall no longer excite laughter, nor his character want a parallel. . . . Modern Democracy : it has bruised our heel ; let the next presidential election break its head. — The United States of America : may they remember from whence they have fallen, repent, and do their first works.” One volunteer toast may properly be appended, concerning the “projected conquest of Canada,” which, if not strictly decorous, was at least pointed and suggestive : President Madison : With both his feet in one stocking, and a Canada thistle in his small-clothes.”

Such is only a faint reflection of the intense political heat which was manifested by both Federalists and Democrats, before and during the War of 1812. Within the next ten years it subsided entirely, and was succeeded by what was styled “The Era of Good Feeling.”

Far different was the public sentiment at the commencement of the War of the Rebellion in 1861, and during its continuance until 1865. With scarcely any exceptions, the inhabitants of Hardwick, without distinction of party, rallied to the support of offered by a zealous Democrat, in a and if God has n’t a better opinion of neighboring town, on a similar occasion : them than I have, he won’t call them up — ‘The Federalists.’ May they die and then.” be buried, and sleep till the resurrection ;

the government, and promptly responded to all requisitions for men and money. Side by side, and with equal patriotic ardor, Republicans and Democrats marched to the frontiers, where they rendered faithful service, and some of them sacrificed their lives on their country's altar. The following list, gathered from the Adjutant General's official "Record of the Massachusetts Volunteers," probably embraces the names of nearly all the soldiers furnished by this town in the Massachusetts Line.

reduced to two, styled the South (or First) and North (or Second) Companies, divided by the road which afterwards became a turnpike. Before 1781 I have not found any record of election of officers, except by the town in 1774; but from other sources it is ascertained that the following persons held the office of captain as early as the dates affixed to their respective names: Joseph Allen, 1740; Benjamin Ruggles, 1747; Timothy Ruggles,¹ 1754; Constant Merrick, 1755; Samuel Robinson, 1755; Paul Mandell,² 1755; Joseph Warner, 1758; William Paige, 1759; Ebenezer Cox, 1762; John Ruggles, 1771; Daniel Wheeler, 1771; Jonathan Warner,³ 1774; Samuel Billings,⁴ 1774; Simeon Hazeltine, 1774; Stephen Rice,⁵ 1775; Thomas Robinson, 1775; Timothy Paige,⁶ 1776; Barnabas Sears,⁷ 1776; Samuel Dexter, 1776; Daniel Warner, 1776; Josiah Locke, 1776; Edmund Hodges, 1777; Denison Robinson, 1778; Nathan Leonard, 1778.

In 1781, after the adoption of the Constitution of Massachusetts, the militia was reorganized, and a roster of officers was commenced; from which it appears that Jonathan Warner was commissioned as one of the three major-generals in the Commonwealth, June 28, 1781; and Timothy Paige as colonel of the Fourth Regiment in Worcester County, July 1, 1781; and, also, the following named officers of their respective companies: —

(Barre), Pequaog (Athol), Petersham, New Braintree, Western (Warren), and Brookfield. Under date of "Rutland, April 10, 1759," Lieutenant-Colonel John Murray certified that several soldiers of Colonel Ruggles' regiment, in each of these towns, had enlisted for service in the Invasion of Canada. *Mass. Soon after the reorganization of militia in 1781, a company of cavalry was formed in the regiment, which then included the present towns of Hardwick, New Braintree, Oakham, North Brookfield, Brookfield, West Brookfield, and Warren. Its Hardwick officers were as follows: —

After the suppression of the Shays Insurrection in 1787 (in which the Hardwick militia were sadly divided in opinion and action), the staunch friends of government seem to have felt the necessity of organizing an independent company, which could be relied upon to act unanimously, in case of emergency, and which might be a body-guard to the major-general. The Council Records, under date of May 30, 1788, show that "His Excellency communicated to the Council a letter from Major General Warner, recommending the establishment of a Company of Cadets in the Seventh Division under his command, and asked the advice of Council. The Council advised that His Excellency issue his orders for the establishment of said Company." On the same day the necessary orders were issued, the company established, and officers commissioned, to wit: —

Jeduthun Spooner, " " Ensign, . . . May 30, 1788.
Wyman Hoyt, of New Braintree, Second Lieutenant, June 25, 1788.

To this company, and to the company of cavalry before mentioned, a complimentary reference was made in the "Massachusetts Spy," October 14, 1790: "On Tuesday, the fifth instant, the Fifth [Fourth?] Regiment of the First Brigade, under Colonel Paige, with Captain Felton's Cavalry, and Captain Paige's Cadets, paraded at Brookfield. They were favored with fine weather, and every officer and soldier was fired with extraordinary military ardor, and the troops exhibited a variety of military movements greatly to their honor."

POPULATION. The General Court, on the 9th of December, 1776, passed a Resolve, requiring a census to be taken of all males, sixteen years old and upwards, distinguishing such as were Quakers, Indians, Negroes, or Mulattoes. The following return was made on the back of the broadside upon which the resolve was printed: "In obedience to the within Order, we have numbered the male inhabitants of the town of Hardwick, as within directed, and find the number to be three hundred and forty-six white or English inhabitants, and one mulatto man. We have no Quakers, no Indians, and no Negroes.

Samuel Dexter, and Ensign David Allen, made oath, that in executing the within order of the Great and General Court, they have acted uprightly, faithfully, and impartially, according to the best of their knowledge. Before me, PAUL MANDELL, Justice of the Peace."¹

The special object of this census manifestly was to ascertain the military strength of the State, and to furnish a basis for requiring a fair proportion of soldiers from each town during the war of the Revolution. Other enumerations have been made periodically for more general purposes. The population of this town gradually increased during the first century after its settlement, then decreased until manufacturing was established at Gilbertville; since which time, although the agricultural com-

now about 3,000. Gilbertville alone is supposed to contain about 1,500 inhabitants.

³ The mode of spelling the names is preserved: also the order in which they are inserted.

MANUFACTURES AND AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

From time to time the General Court has required from assessors, or other authorized agents, information concerning certain branches of industry. The earliest statistical tables on this subject exhibited a very scanty summary for the year ending April 1, 1837. This was confined almost exclusively to manufactured articles, and consequently Hardwick ranked very low in the list:—

“Saxony sheep, 2; merino sheep, 100; other kinds of sheep, 810; Saxony wool produced, 12 lbs.; merino wool, 250 lbs.; other kinds of wool, 1,600 lbs.; average weight of fleece, $2\frac{1}{2}$ lbs.; value of wool, \$1,000; capital invested, \$1,820.

“Boots manufactured, 5,000 pairs; shoes, 5,000 pairs; value of boots and shoes, $14,500; males employed, 20; females, 8.

"Tanneries, 2; hides tanned, 1,500; value of leather tanned and curried, $5,250; hands employed, 6; capital invested, $4,500.

"Paper mills, 2; stock manufactured, 55 tons; value of paper, $5,600; males employed, 6; females, 2; capital invested, $3,000.

"Manufactory of chairs and cabinet ware, 1; value of chairs and cabinet ware, $1,000; hands employed, 2.

"Plough manufactory, 1; ploughs manufactured, 150; value of the same, $900; employing one person.

"Straw bonnets manufactured, 300; value of same, $500.

"Palm-leaf hats manufactured, 75,000; value of same, $15,500."

Twenty years later, Hardwick appears to better advantage in the Statistical Tables for the year ending June 1, 1855.

The result of the very comprehensive census in 1875 is even more favorable to Hardwick in all respects, except in regard to manufactures, wherein it is very unsatisfactory. This exhibition is creditable to a town whose entire population was only 1,992; especially when it is considered that one fifth part of the adult inhabitants were engaged in manufacturing establishments. But the account of manufactures and the results of mechanical labor is very unsatisfactory. Excluding the value of butter and cheese manufactured, the sum total assigned to Hardwick is as follows:—

INDUSTRIES.	Number of Establishments.	Value of Products.
Cheese-box making	1	1,250
Carpentry and joinery	1	5,000
Lumber, planed, and boxes	1	2,000
Lumber, sawed	2	2,355
Machinist's work	1	10
Powder-keg making	1	1,500
Wheelwrighting	1	100
	11	$15,215

The same census represents that 310 inhabitants of Hardwick were then employed in "manufactures and mechanical industries;" of whom 193 were woollen factory operatives, and 24 were paper makers; yet I can find no evidence in the census that a yard of cloth or a pound of paper was manufactured in the town. Indeed, I cannot trace the manufacture of paper to any other town; it is certain, however, that a manufactory was then in operation here. The manufacture of woollens is easily traced to the town of Ware, which has credit in the census for all the woollen goods manufactured here. The occasion of this transfer is indicated in an article published in the Boston "Daily Advertiser," October 7, 1880, concerning the several manufacturing establishments in Ware:—

"After the dissolution of Gilbert & Stevens, the firm of George H. Gilbert & Co. was established, from which has sprung the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company, incorporated in 1867, with a paid-up capital of $250,000. The first president was George H. Gilbert; but his death occurring one year later, the present officers of the company were chosen, as follows: Lewis N. Gilbert, president; Charles D. Gilbert, treasurer; and J. H. Grenville Gilbert, secretary. In 1860 was erected, in addition to the granite mill in Ware, a brick mill, 130 by 56 feet, five stories high, on the site of the old paper mill in Hardwick, four and a half miles north of Ware, to increase the manufacture of flannel goods. In the immediate vicinity of the new mill were built many tenements for the operatives; thus was formed Gilbertville, named in honor of its founder. Three other brick mills have been built there,—one, 125 by 60 feet, three stories high; another, 84 by 60 feet, four stories high; and a third, 230 by 68 feet, five stories high. The two hundred tenement-houses owned by the company, on its 325 acres, constitute the entire settlement of what is probably the prettiest strictly manufacturing village in Massachusetts. It is on the line of the Ware River and Massachusetts Central Railroads. The greater part of the manufactures of the company are now produced at Gilbertville; and as a large part of the dress goods and blankets woven at Gilbertville are finished at Ware, the few statistics given below refer to the total products at all these mills."

Being unwilling that Hardwick should be shorn of one of its chief glories, as it is by the census of 1875, and desiring to state the precise facts in the case, I addressed an inquiry to the president of the corporation, who gave me the desired information, to wit: The foregoing statement in the "Daily Advertiser" was correct when it was written; but since that time the business at Gilbertville has been greatly enlarged. To the mill erected in 1860 an addition has been made, 154 feet in length by 82 feet in width, and nine sets of machinery have been added; so that, in 1883, the following statistics are substantially accurate:—

Capital	$250,000
Sets of machinery	47
Wool consumed, per day	17,000 pounds.
Operatives employed	1,000
Goods manufactured, per year	3,500,000 yards.
Value of goods manufactured	$2,500,000.

Of these forty-seven sets of machinery, forty sets are operated in Hardwick and seven in Ware; and these numbers may be supposed to indicate with sufficient accuracy the proportion of goods manufactured in the respective towns. Hardwick may therefore claim much the largest share of this immense business. Although the owners, who furnish the capital and control the operations, reside in Ware, the water-power and almost all the mills are within our limits; most of the operatives both dwell here and perform their daily tasks here; the stock is brought here in the form of raw materials, and is here converted into manufactured goods.

The beautiful village of Gilbertville, where this business is transacted, has been elsewhere described. It may suffice to add here, that the land was purchased and the first mill erected in 1860, and that the business of manufacturing was commenced in 1862. George H. Gilbert, the first president of the company which bears his name, was born at Brooklyn, Conn., and died at Ware, May 6, 1869. The present president, Hon. Lewis N. Gilbert, is the nephew, and Charles D. Gilbert, treasurer, and J. H. Grenville Gilbert, secretary, are the sons of George H. Gilbert. His youngest son, Edward H. Gilbert, has also recently become a member of the company.

FURNACES AND FORGE. The subject of manufactures should not be dismissed without a brief notice of what was formerly a very important branch of industry. At the original division of lands by the proprietors, a mill lot, sometimes called "saw-mill lot," was laid out, which included a part of what is now called "Furnace Village." Moose Brook furnished the water-power, which remains in constant use, even to the present day. Besides the saw-mill and grist-mill, which were erected very early, and a cloth-dressing establishment of a later date, a Furnace for the manufacture of iron hollow-ware was erected about the middle of the last century,¹ which, for sixty or seventy years, furnished employment to many persons. The larger part, if not the whole, of the iron ore was procured in West Brookfield; but, notwithstanding the expense of transporting this principal material, the business yielded a satisfactory profit. A general assortment of hollow-ware was manufactured, from the ponderous and capacious potash-kettles,² then in use, to tea-kettles, pans, spiders, skillets, and even smaller culinary vessels; for all which articles a ready market was obtained.

In the Revolutionary War, this furnace rendered important public service, which is mentioned in a petition which is still preserved: "To the Hon. Council and the Hon. House of Representatives of the State of Massachusetts Bay in New England, humbly show Stephen Rice and James Woods, in behalf of themselves and partners, owners of a Furnace at Hardwick, in the County of Worcester, that your petitioners have agreed to furnish the Commissary General of this State with a large quantity of Cannon Ball and other warlike stores, a part of which we have already supplied, which are allowed to be of the very best kind.

¹ The precise date of its erection I have not ascertained; but, as early as 1763, Deacon Joseph Allen became one of the joint-owners, which he afterwards lamented in a poetical account of "the time and place of the author's birth, and some things that happened in the course of his life."

² In the days of my boyhood there were two manufactories of potash in Hardwick, — one owned by Jason Mixter, Esq., and the other by Dr. William Cutler.

We have with great difficulty, by reason of the scarcity of labor, procured stock for making another blast, which has been attended with considerable additional expense, by reason of the large draughts of men which have been made from among us. We are at this present time just entering on said blast, and understanding that this Honored Court have just ordered one half of the militia of said County of Worcester to march to Ticonderoga on an alarm, it will be impossible to proceed in carrying on our blast should one half of the militia of Hardwick and New Braintree be ordered to march. Wherefore your petitioners pray that thirty persons, which is the number employed in carrying on the business of said Furnace, may be excused from the present or a future requisition of men, during our present blast, from said towns of Hardwick and New Braintree. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray. STEPHEN RICE. JAMES WOODS. Dated at Watertown, Oct. 25, 1776.”¹

During the continuance of a “blast,”—generally a period of five or six months,—the fire was not quenched nor the labor intermitted. As on shipboard, relays of hands wrought day and night, not resting even on the Sabbath. After such continuous labor for several months, the workmen gladly hailed the day when the fire was extinguished for the purpose of constructing a new crucible and making general repairs. This was technically called “blowing out,” and the day was devoted to unlimited fun and jollity. Some of the jovial frolics and wild pranks of the laborers are still remembered by the elderly inhabitants; but, perhaps, it may not be well to record them as matters of history.² It should be added, that many who were gay and merry “furnacemen” in their younger days were afterwards among our most respected citizens, and attained honorable and official position, both in town and in commonwealth. For several years before the manufacturing of iron was discontinued, this furnace was owned and managed by Colonel Samuel Billings and Mr. Harmon Chamberlain.

² Take one specimen: A mock-trial was had, and the alleged culprit sentenced to be hung. As his chin was unnaturally short, the attempt to execute him was unsuccessful. A piece of slag, resembling an auger, was then found, and an effort made to bore a hole through his neck, so that a pin might be inserted to prevent the rope from slipping over his head. The victim required nursing several days, being kept quiet, meanwhile, by a plentiful supply of his favorite beverage.

It is related of one who became intoxicated early in the morning and slept in his bunk until evening, that he afterwards lamented that “he lost all his sport at the ‘blowing out,’ by getting drunk too soon.”

Early in the present century another furnace was erected on Ware River, about a quarter of a mile above the dam at Gilbertville. The spot is marked "New Furnace" on the R. Map, and this name was applied to the whole neighborhood until it was superseded by the present name of Gilbertville. The projectors of this enterprise were Colonel Thomas Wheeler,¹ a blacksmith and very skillful worker of iron, and Mr. Lemuel Harrington, formerly a tanner, but retired from that business and willing to invest capital in a new adventure. In the "Massachusetts Spy," July 12, 1815, Jesse Bliss advertised that "The new Furnace, lately erected by Harrington, Wheeler & Co., on Ware River in Hardwick, is now in blast." I know not who were the other members of the company. The business was probably not very successful, and it was not long continued. Colonel Wheeler removed to Ticonderoga in 1818 or 1819, and those who were left behind had not his skill or energy as iron-workers.

Before the erection of this new furnace, Colonel Wheeler carried on business at a Forge which stood near the spot now occupied by the large mill of the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company on the west side of the River. This forge seems to have been erected by Isaac Thomas, who bought seven acres of land, July 18, 1763, of Captain Daniel Warner, with certain rights in Ware River; said Warner reserving the privilege to build "one half of a saw-mill on the ditch said Thomas is cutting or may hereafter cut for conveying the water out of said River to carry a saw-mill and other mills." In March, 1765, the town "voted to Mr. Isaac Thomas the sum of £26. 13. 4., said Thomas having engaged to build a sufficient bridge over Ware River near his Iron-works." Mr. Thomas sold one third part of this estate to Joseph Blake, October 20, 1763, and Blake sold his share to Lot Whitcomb, January 18, 1770, which then embraced one third part of a dwelling-house, one third of a corn-mill, one sixth of a saw-mill, and one third of a forge and coal-house. In October, 1772, this forge is described as the property of Samuel Beals and Amos Thomas. I have not further traced the change of ownership. While the forge was in possession of Colonel Wheeler, a sad event occurred. As I remember the story, Nathan Bonney, aged 17 years, in a competitive trial of strength, lifted one of the trip-hammers, weighing six hundred pounds; he very soon became sick, and died April 13, 1811, as it was reported, "of spotted fever, after an illness of 34 hours;"¹ but his death was generally supposed to have been occasioned by his foolhardy rashness.

PAPER MILLS. About the year 1832 a paper mill was erected by Joseph S. and Moses Smith on Ware River, on the spot now occupied by one of the mills of the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company. The easterly end, with two engines, was rented to Thornton K. Merrick and William Dickinson for the manufacture of wrapping paper. The westerly end, fitted for four engines, was occupied by William Mixter and Moses Smith, about two years, for the manufacture of printing paper, and afterwards by Moses Smith alone. In 1842 the building was leased to Laffin and Clark, who manufactured writing paper; at the expiration of their lease it was again rented to George Maynard for the same purpose; while in his hands, the building was burned, and the business was abandoned.

In 1866, Dr. Almon M. Orcutt of Hardwick, and Dr. D. W. Miner and Mr. George Robinson of Ware, purchased the water-privilege on Ware River, near Barre, long known as "White's Mills," designated on the R. Map by the letters "N. W.," and organized the "Ware River Paper Co." They immediately commenced the erection of a mill, which was completed in 1867, at the cost of $75,000. About this time Mr. Robinson withdrew from the company, and the business was carried on by Drs. Orcutt and Miner about three years. The principal article manufactured was white wall paper. In 1870, Fred. A. Mellen, who had been superintendent for Drs. Orcutt and Miner, purchased the mill, and manufactured book paper until the following year, when he died, and the business seems to have been discontinued. It was afterwards resumed, and prosecuted with more or less regularity and success, and with occasional interruptions.

About 1880 a new company was organized, understood to consist of Henry Page of Fitchburg, George W. Wheelwright and D. S. Greenough of Boston, and Andrew J. Bartholomew of Southbridge, with a capital of $80,000. The mill is well supplied with all the modern improvements for paper-making, and its capacity is about to be increased by additional machinery. The following facts in regard to its present condition were kindly furnished by the superintendent, J. W. Plowman, under date of February 13, 1882: "Page Paper Co. is the title of this corporation. Number of hands, — male 23, female 14. We manufacture a N^o 1 News, and Book Papers of various kinds, of which we produce about 800 tons per annum. The present company commenced business a little more than a year ago."

This GEORGE was the first of his family who resided in Hardwick. According to the Church Record, his chil. born here, by w. Rebecca, were Ruth, bap. 8 May 1737, m. ¹ This plan of a Genealogical Register is adopted because it is less complicated than others, yet sufficiently particular for all practical purposes. The system is too plain and obvious to require any explanation. The ordinary abbreviations are used, such as a., for aged; b., for born; bap., for baptized; chil., for children; d., for died; d. s. p., for died without issue; m., for married; f., for father; w., for wife or widow; s., for son; dau., for daughter; rem., for removed; res., for resides or resided; ret., for returned, etc. The names of towns are also frequently abbreviated, as Amh., for Amherst; Bel., for Belchertown Brk., for Brookfield; Dart., for Dartmouth; Enf., for Enfield; Gr., for Greenwich; Hk., for Hardwick; N. Br., for New Braintree; N. Brk., for North Brookfield; N. Sal., for New Salem; Pelh., for Pelham; Pet., for Petersham; Presc., for Prescott; Roch., for Rochester; Shutes., for Shutesbury; Springf., for Springfield; W. Brk., for West Brookfield; Wore., for Worcester; and if there be any other, the reference will be easily perceived. As already stated in the Preface, the contraction, "R. Map," which so often occurs, indicates the Ruggles Map, or a map of Hardwick drawn by Gardner Ruggles, Esq., about fifty years ago, showing the position of each dwelling-house and its distance from the Common.

inhabitants of Hk., an original member of the First Church, afterwards joined the Separate Church, and prob. rem., with most of its members, to Bennington, Vt. where he is said to have d. "about 1771."

5. GEORGE, s. of George (4), m. Martha Ayers of Brookfield 5 Dec. 1745, and had in Hk. Nathan, bap. 1746; Lydia, b. 16 Sep. 1747; Samuel, b. 24 Aug. 1750; Nathaniel, b. 8 Nov. 1753. GEORGE the f. d. prob. 1761, as the inventory of his estate was presented, 16 Aug. 1761, by his w. Martha, who m. Benjamin Roberts 29 Feb. 1764. In the settlement of his estate, 9 Sep. 1762, provision was made for "fulfilling the obligation the deceased gave unto his father George Abbott for paying him a yearly annuity of eight pounds, and maintaining his mother if she should outlive his father." Worcester Prob. Rec.

6. ISAAC, s. of George (4), m. Elizabeth Goodnow 14 Aug. 1760, and had David, b. 17 July 1762. ISAAC the f. was a simple inoffensive man, who in his old age afforded much amusement to children by a peculiarly shrill whistle, produced, according to my recollection, by placing his fingers in his mouth. He became a pauper, and d. 25 Ap. 1814, a. 82.

7. JACOB, s. of George (4), was adm. to the ch. 4 Ap. 1742. No further trace of him is found on the records.

8. SAMUEL, perhaps s. of GEORGE (4), was a soldier in the old French War, and was killed at Fort Massachusetts 2 Aug. 1748. His service is described in a muster roll among Col. I. Williams' papers, preserved in the Library of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

ADAMS, JAMES, had dau. Mary, bap. 16 Dec. 1750; nothing more is ascertained concerning him.

2. OLIVER, by w. Elizabeth, had Enoch, Elizabeth, and Mary Parkhurst, all bap. 20 June 1810.

AIKEN, JAMES (otherwise written Aikens, Aitkens, Ekens, Ekins, and Eakins), is said to have been an emigrant from Scotland. He res. several years in Brookfield, where he m. Mercy Gibbs, 15 Oct. 1718, and where all his chil. were prob. born, though only one of the births appears on record, namely, "Mercy Ekens, daughter of James and Mercy, born January y^e 3^d. 17²⁰/₂₁." She m. William Paige of Hk. 12 Jan. 1743-4, and d. 19 Feb. 1823, at the great age of one hundred and two years, having been a member of the church more than eighty-six years. Of the chil. whose births are not found on record, were John, Solomon, and perhaps Abigail, who m. James Bacon, 5 June 1755, and also Margaret, who m. Nathaniel Whitecomb, Jr., 19 June 1755. JAMES the f. was one of the pioneers in the settlement of Hk., and res. on the easterly side of Great Meadow Brook, about a mile and a half south of the meeting-house, on or near the spot marked "Z. Phinney" on Ruggles's Map of Hardwick. It was currently reported by his contemporaries, that, before he rem. his family, and while he was preparing a shelter for them in the wilderness, his dau. Mercy, then about twelve or thirteen years old, many times rode through the pathless forest between Brk. and Hk. on horseback, guided by marked trees, to convey his weekly rations of food, — thus displaying that energy which characterized her whole life. He was Superintendent of the Hardwick Fair from its establishment in 1762 until 1771, and d. 10 Aug. 1775, a. 82. His w. Mercy united with the church 29 May 1737; the date of her death does not appear.

C. 1784, ordained pastor of the church in Dracont, 4 June 1788, dismissed 4 June 1812, and entered the U. S. Army as chaplain. Abraham Whitney 20 Jan. 1742-3; Daniel, b. 31 Aug. 1724; Timothy, b. 8 Ap. 1727. Thus far I have followed the account of this family, given by Bond in his Watertown Genealogies, except in regard to Joseph, whom he omits, David, whom he calls Daniel, and Ame (or Amy), whom he calls Ann, and says she "d. soon." There are other inaccuracies in his list, as appears by the variations between it and the names subscribed to an agreement by the children and heirs at law of Joseph Allen of Weston deceased, dated 30 Sep. 1731, which is preserved in the Middlesex Probate Office, to wit: Isaac Allen; Joseph Allen; Isaac Hagar and w. Prudence; Ame Allen; Rebecca Allen; Ebenezer Goodnow and w. Elizabeth; Joseph Goodnow and w. Anna; David Allen and Abigail Allen, by their guardian Nathaniel Allen; Elijah Allen, Tabitha Allen and Daniel Allen, by their guardian Jonas Allen. A final settlement of the estate was made 16 June 1753 (the elder children, Joseph, Prudence, Elizabeth, Anne, Amy, and Rebecca, having previously released their reversionary interest), when receipts for that part of the estate "which was allowed to our mother Abigail Allen, the widow of the said Joseph as her dowry," were given by Daniel Allen of Sheffield, housewright, for himself and as attorney for his brother David Allen of Claverack, N. Y., blacksmith; Elijah Allen of Sutton, housewright, by his attorney Joseph Coolidge; Abraham Whitney of Weston and his w. Tabitha.

He was not only one of the earliest but also one of the most active and energetic of the pioneers in Hardwick. He was a joiner, or housewright, a captain of militia, selectman, assessor, clerk and treasurer of the town, and a deacon of the church nearly fifty-seven years. After his death, a pamphlet was published containing several articles written by him, chiefly on religious subjects. In one of these is a scrap of autobiography which fixes the date of his birth and, in connection with the records heretofore quoted, sufficiently identifies him as one of the sons of Joseph (3): —

"My native place where born was I,
In seventeen hundred nine,
Does sixteen miles from Boston lie,
In Westown, called mine.

"Between my third year and my fourth
My mother left this life;
Which was to me affliction sore,
My father lost his wife.

"In all my father's family
Once sixteen did survive;
Before my father two did die,
Then fourteen left alive."

COBLEIGH, JONATHAN (otherwise written Coble, Cobley, Cobleich, and Cobling), prob. the same who was in Concord 1737, by w. Elizabeth, had in Hk. Reuben, b. 6 July 1743; Jonathan, bap. 21 Sep. 1746; John, bap. 1 July 1753. JONATHAN the f. was a cordwainer, and res. in that part of the town which is now included in New Braintree.

2. ELEAZAR, prob. brother of Jonathan (1), by w. Phebe, had Bathsheba, bap. 12 June 1743; Dan, bap. 9 Feb. 1745-6; Hannah, bap. 21 Sep. 1746. It is not unlikely that Simon, b. 18 Aug. 1741, was son of the same parents, though their names are recorded "Eleazar and Phebe Ablich."

OLIVER, aged 23, was a soldier in the French War, 1758.

COLLINS, GAMALIEL, m. Rachel Rich, and had Jonah Stevens, b. —; Rachel, b. —, m. John Wicker 15 Nov. 1803; Aquilla, b. 29 Jan. 1782 (it is understood by some members of the family that he never married; but the town records show that a person of the same name, and apparently the same individual, married Mary Smith of Gr. 18 Oct. 1807); James, b. 1 Sep. 1785. GAMALIEL the f. was born at Truro, was a shipmaster, and the "first adventurer in whale fisheries at Falkland Islands."¹ He rem. his family, about the commencement of the Revolutionary War, to the southwesterly part of Hk., a few rods northerly from the place marked "Mr. Collins" on the R. Map. He d. at Plymouth, apparently on his return from a voyage, as in his will, dated 27 Mar. 1786 and proved 13 June 1786, he mentions among his children the youngest son (b. in the previous September), "that was not named when I left home." Capt. Collins was evidently a man of mark; he was a member of the Committee of Correspondence in 1776, and selectman in 1778.

2. GAMALIEL, s. of Gamaliel (1), m. Patty Gilbert 21 June 1798; she d. 21 Aug. 1804, a. 28, and he m. Betsey Billings 29 Nov. 1804; she d. 10 Dec. 1805, a. 30, and he m. Ann Snow² of Truro. The births of the five children last named are entered on the Hk. records, indicating that the family rem. to this place.

2. ABNER, s. of Thomas, another descendant from the famous Roger, was born at Bridgewater in 1746, but spent a large portion of his life in Hk. He was a bachelor and a cordwainer. For several years he boarded in the family of Timothy Paige, Esq., plying his trade in a shop fitted up for his use. He d. 29 Oct. 1807, a. 61; but my memory of his kindness to me in my childhood is yet green.

CONVERS, BENJAMIN (otherwise written Converse), by w. Hannah, had Asa Wright, bap. 18 Mar. 1781; Royal, bap. 12 May 1782; an elder son Royal, d. 5 Feb. 1781, a. 4. His w. Hannah d. 25 July 1785, a. 34, and he m. Esther Grosvener of Windsor, pub. 17 May 1786. BENJAMIN the f., then of Windsor, bought the estate of Thomas Robinson, at and near the Old Furnace, 19 Oct. 1780 (for twenty thousand pounds in the depreciated currency of that period), and probably rem. immediately to Hk. He was licensed as a retailer in 1781 and 1782, and for a few years seems to have been prosperous. But in the troublous time which followed, he became an active military partisan of Shays, appearing as adjutant at Worcester on the 6th of September 1786; and on the collapse of the Rebellion found it necessary to abscond in order to avoid arrest. His subsequent history is unknown to me.

2. DANIEL J., m. Sabrina Brown, pub. 23 Jan. 1826. Their only child whose name appears on the record of births was Emily Elvira, b. 13 Sep. 1843. DANIEL J. the f. d. 16 May 1852, a. 49.

JOHN the f. was prob. s. of Samuel, who rem. from Cambridge to Grafton in the summer of 1730, and was elected deacon 21 Jan. 1732; if so, he was bap. 7 Mar. 1724–5, and was grandson of Deacon Samuel Cooper, and great-grandson of Deacon John Cooper, both of Cambridge. See Hist. Cambridge, pp. 516, 517. While residing in Grafton, 30 July 1746, he bought 100 acres of land in Hk., and was admitted to the church here on the first day of the succeeding March. He was elected deacon before 9 July 1751, when his name appears with that title on the church record; very probably the election soon followed the resignation of Deacon Paige and Deacon Robinson in 1749. He was selectman one year, assessor ten years, town clerk five years, and frequently school-teacher between 1751 and 1766. He prob. rem. or died in 1769, as in March of that year he was elected town clerk and assessor, and in the following May a successor in each office was elected; also the office of deacon in the church was filled by the election of Capt. William Paige (son of the former Deac. Paige) 9 Nov. 1769.

COVELL, ROYAL, m. Emeline Goss, of Winchester, N. H., 9 Aug. 1853. HARRIET E. C., m. John J. Johnson 11 Mar. 1852.

COX, EBENEZER, by w. Elizabeth, had Anna, b. —, m. Nathan Carpenter 15 Mar. 1773; (prob.) Sally, b. — 1759, d. unm. 2 Sep. 1808, a. 49; Jemima, b. 10 Nov. 1761, m. EBENEZER the f. was born in Dorchester, rem. early to Wrentham, and thence to Hk. about 1760; he res. on a road leading from the turnpike to Ruggles Hill, at a place marked "L. Burgess" on the R. Map. He was a distinguished officer during the French War; his name is borne on the Muster Rolls as a lieutenant in 1757, and captain from 1758 to 1762. He d. 2 Mar. 1768, a. 41, and his patriotism, valor, and good conduct are commemorated on his head-stone, which remains standing in the old cemetery.

2. BENJAMIN, prob. brother of Ebenezer (1), by w. Jerusha, had George, b. 1 July 1762; Jerusha, b. 16 Feb. 1764, m. BENJAMIN the f. also rem. from Wrentham to Hk. about 1760, and was actively engaged in the French War; his name is enrolled as a private in the company of Capt. Ebenezer Cox in 1758, as sergeant in 1759, and as ensign in 1760. He rem. to Barnard, Vt., about 1777, where he was one of the most active citizens, a captain of militia during the Revolutionary War, assessor, justice of the peace, and representative. He d. 25 Sep. 1788, a. 48.

3. JOHN DAVENPORT, s. of Ebenezer (1), m. Anna Powers of Brimfield, pub. 17 July 1786, and had Stephen, b. — 1789, d. 2 Ap. 1791, a. 2; Ebenezer, b. — May 1791, d. at Wore. 14 Dec. 1863, a. 72; Pamela; and Maria; perhaps one of the dau. was b. before Stephen. JOHN D. the f. d. 26 Ap. 1795; his w. Anna survived.

ELIZABETH, perhaps dau. of Benjamin (2), and b. at Wrentham, m. James Byram 8 Feb. 1781, and rem. to Barnard about 1786.

b. 4 Sep. 1764, d. unm. at Barnard 8 Aug. 1785; Joseph, b. 9 Oct. 1770. All these chil. except Joseph were b. and bap. at Falmouth. JOSHUA the f. rem. to Hk. as early as 1769, and caused the births of his chil. to be entered on record. He was prob. a descendant of John Crowell (formerly written Crow and Croel), who came to N. E. in 1635, "and was early in Yarmouth with w. Elishua." He was a farmer and res. on the easterly road to Gilbertville (with his son-in-law Mr. Spooner), at the place marked "Wid. Marsh" on the R. Map. His Christian character was severely tested by domestic affliction. His dau. Hannah (Mrs. Spooner) was insane for several years, and at length, on the 27th of January 1807, destroyed the life of her aged mother by stealthily approaching behind her chair, as she sat near the fire, and crushing her skull with an axe. After this Mrs. Spooner was more closely watched; but on the 16th of the following December she eluded the watchfulness of her keepers and destroyed her own life by cutting her throat. Mr. Crowell's son Thomas was also insane for many years; he was harmless and inoffensive, would seldom speak to any one, but would walk abroad in whatever weather, bare-headed and barefooted, and very thinly clad. I do not remember ever to have seen him with a hat or overcoat. In an unusually cold night, 22 Jan. 1812, he kindled a fire which consumed the house of his brother Joseph (who had the care of him), and perished in the flames.¹ The venerable father found rest from his earthly labors and trials 11 Sep. 1813, a. 91; his w. Mary, as before mentioned, met her tragical fate 27 Jan. 1807, a. 82.

2. JOSEPH, s. of Joshua (1), m. Perthenia Thomas 24 Oct. 1793, and had Paulina, b. 3 Dec. 1794, m. Jesse Shaw 19 Dec. 1813; Adolphus, b. 3 Feb. 1797; Maria, b. 25 Mar. 1798; Erastus, b. 10 May 1799, m. Rebecca Bothrel, pub. 10 Ap. 1820; Sophronia, b. 14 Ap. 1801; Jerusha, b. 16 Ap. 1803; Harvey, b. 15 Dec. 1804; Pliny Thomas, bap. 16 Sep. 1810. JOSEPH the f. was not insane, but was thriftless and imprudent in his habits. He res. on the easterly road to Gilbertville, at the place marked "Mr. Cobb" on the R. Map; but several years after the destruction of his house by fire, as before related, and the erection of a new one on the same spot, he rem. to Broome, N. Y.

4. JOSEPH, s. of Isaac (3), m. Polly Sprout of Gr., pub. 19 Sep. 1812, and d. 23 Oct. 1814. Mary, who d. 8 Nov. 1814, a. about 2, was prob. his daughter.

5. HOSEA, parentage not ascertained, m. Sarah, dau. of Marshall Johnson, 25 Feb. 1831, and had Balarah, b. — 1837, d. 8 Ap. 1840, a. 2 years and 9 mos.; Edgar, b. 1842, a soldier in the Union Army, d. at New Berne, N. HOSEA the f. d. 31 May 1877, a. 69; his w. Sally, d. 5 Nov. 1873, a. 59.

imperial commands by the sound of drum or fife, and enforcing them by waving his flag. Unlike his uncle Thomas, he was generally willing to converse with adults, and even with children; but pressure of important business compelled him to grant only brief audiences. The cares of his kingdom were so engrossing and oppressive that, as I remember, he was seldom seen to smile.

In his will, 13 July 1774, he names all his chil. except Lucy, to whose son Solomon Farr and dau. Lydia Farr legacies are given. He resided on the old River road, at the place marked "A. STEPHEN the f. bought a farm of 300 acres, bordering on the west side of Muddy Pond, 6 Dec. 1749, but soon rem. to the place afterwards owned and occupied by Col. Stephen Rice, on the old turnpike, marked "C. Paige" on the R. Map. He was selectman four years, assessor five years, innholder from 1754 to 1763, and retailer (perhaps innholder also) in 1764 and 1765. He was also prob. captain of militia, as he was known by that title during his residence in Vermont, and was so described on his headstone. In 1766 he rem. to Bennington and became landlord of the Green Mountain Tavern, afterwards so celebrated as the "Catamount Tavern."⁶ This house was the general headquarters of the controlling spirits during the long contest with New York, and also during the Revolutionary War, and among those spirits Capt. Fay was not the least active. When it was determined in 1772, during the New York controversy, to send special messengers to confer with Governor Tryon, Capt. Fay and his son, Dr. Jonas Fay, were selected as the messengers. During the Revolution he was constantly active, and rendered efficient service in a civil capacity; and in the clash of arms he was represented by his sons. It is said that five of his sons were engaged in the Bennington Battle, 16 Aug. 1777, the eldest of whom was killed. It is matter of authentic history, that when the father was informed that he had been unfortunate in respect to one of his sons, he exclaimed: "What! has he misbehaved? did he desert his post, or run from the charge?" On being told that his son was dead, he bowed his head, saying: "I thank God that I had a son who was willing to give his life for his country." Capt. Fay lived to see the arms of his country triumphant, but did not witness the establishment of peace. He d. 17 May 1781; his w. Ruth attained the age of 88 years.

He had also in Bennington Lydia, who m. Uriah Edgerton, Esq.; Sarah, m. Henry Hopkins; and twin sons, Ethan Allen and Heman Allen. JONAS the f. was a man of extraordinary energy and versatility of talent. In 1756 he was clerk of the company commanded by Capt. Samuel Robinson in the French War, and was then styled "cordwinder." In 1761 he was called "ensign" on the town records. His taste, however, was rather civil than martial, and political than mechanical. He studied medicine, and practised the healing art for several years here, and also taught school, res. at the place marked "Mr. Wesson" on the R. Map. On his removal to Bennington about 1768, he at once became conspicuous both as a physician and as a leading politician. The following is a brief summary of his public services: "In 1772, ning ran the cry over the ranks of his townsmen, 'John Fay is shot!' Maddened to fury, they sprang from behind the trees, fired their guns in the very faces of the foe, and, clubbing the breeches, leaped over the breastwork with an impulse of onset nothing mortal could resist." Jennings' Memorials of a Century, p. 255.

when Gov. Tryon invited the people of Bennington to send agents to New York to inform him of the grounds of their complaint, he, with his father, was appointed for that purpose. He was clerk to the convention of settlers that met in 1774, and resolved to defend by force Allen, Warner, and others, who were threatened with outlawry and death by the New York Assembly, and as such clerk certified their proceedings for publication. At the age of nineteen he had served in the French War during the campaign of 1756 at Fort Edward and Lake George, as clerk of Capt. Samuel Robinson's company of Massachusetts troops, and he served as surgeon in the expedition under Allen at the capture of Ticonderoga. He was continued in that position by the Committee of the Massachusetts Congress who were sent to the Lake in July 1775, and also appointed by them to muster the troops as they arrived for the defence of that post. He was also surgeon for a time to Col. Warner's regiment. In January, 1776, he was clerk to the convention at Dorset, that petitioned Congress to be allowed to serve in the common cause of the country as inhabitants of the New Hampshire Grants, and not under New York, and also of that held at the same place in July following. He was a member of the convention which met at Westminster in January, 1777, and declared Vermont to be an independent State, and was appointed chairman of a committee to draw up a declaration and petition announcing the fact, and their reasons for it, to Congress, of which declaration and petition he was the draughtsman and author. He was secretary to the convention that formed the Constitution of the State in July, 1777, and was one of the Council of Safety¹ then appointed to administer the affairs of the State, until the Assembly, provided for by the constitution, should meet; was a member of the State Council for seven years from 1778; a judge of the Supreme Court in 1782; judge of probate from 1782 to 1787; and he attended the Continental Congress at Philadelphia as the agent of the State, under appointments made in Jan. 1777, Oct. 1779, June 1781, and Feb. 1782. Dr. Fay was a man of extensive general information, decided in his opinions, and bold and determined in maintaining them. His education was such as to enable him to draw with skill and ability the public papers of the day, of many of which, besides the Declaration of Independence before mentioned, he was the reputed author. In 1780, he, in conjunction with Ethan Allen, prepared and published, in their joint names, a pamphlet of thirty pages, on the New Hampshire and New York controversy, which was printed at Hartford, Conn. . . . Dr. Fay resided in Bennington, in a house that stood on the Blue Hill, a mile south of the meeting-house, until after the year 1800, when he removed to Charlotte for a few years, and afterwards to Pawlet, but returned again to Bennington, where he died March 6, 1818, aged 82."² active members of the council, as shewn by such minutes of its proceedings as have been preserved, were Thomas Chittenden, president of the body; Jonas Fay, vice president; Ira Allen, secretary; and Nathan Clark, Paul Spooner, and Moses Robinson." Fay, Spooner, and Robinson, it may be added, were Hardwick men.

ment of wages to a laborer, he drew an order on a store-keeper, thus: "Mr. Bowman — Let him have it. George Field." On being told that this was a very unusual form of an order, he replied: "Just as well; short way." Mr. Bowman knew his customer so well that he duly honored his order.

be readily produced. Mr. Knowles has an inventive genius, which has produced other important inventions besides his looms. He has been engaged in the manufacture of cotton and woollen; and the Knowles' steam-pumps, which he manufactures in large quantities at Warren, have a world-wide reputation. He has been state senator, alderman, president of the Board of Trade, and is now (1879) president of the People's Savings Bank, and a trustee of the Free Institute." Hist. of Worcester County, ii. 665. "Tradition represents Capt. Olmstead to have been a man of great shrewdness and energy, and that Indian blood ran in his veins. He "was skilful in his profession, entered the navy as a surgeon, was taken prisoner, and d. at St. Eustasie, 1779, when about to be exchanged. . . . He was a man of vigorous intellect, upright morals, and profound patriotism." ¹

6. SETH, s. of John (4), b. — 1751, grad. Y. C. 1770, and received the degree of LL. D. from B. U. 1798. He commenced the practice of the law in Hk., where he was a member of the Committee of Correspondence in 1774 and 1775, and generally active in the Revolutionary struggle. He rem. to Taunton about 1778, was judge of probate, and, though not eminent as an advocate, was confessedly at the head of the bar as a counsellor. He m. Rebecca Dennis, had four sons and seven daughters, and d. of apoplexy 7 Jan. 1810.

PAIGE, NATHANIEL, m. Joanna —, and had Nathaniel, b. about 1679; Elizabeth, b. prob. about 1681, m. John Simpkins of Boston 28 Dec. 1698, had three children, and prob. d. before 1735, when her husband sold her paternal inheritance, and her concurrence in the sale does not appear in the deed; Sarah, b. prob. about 1683, m. Samuel Hill, Jr., of Billerica, 7 Jan. 1698-9, had six children, and d. 30 Ap. 1758 (her only son, Samuel, m. widow Abigail Duntton, dau. of Thomas Richardson, and d. 26 Jan. 1748-9, leaving only one child, Abiel or Abigail, who m. Samuel Kidder); James, bap. at Roxbury 28 Nov. 1686, d. 31 July 1687; Christopher, b. at Billerica (now Bedford), 6 Feb. 1690-1. NATHANIEL the f. is supposed to have come from England to Roxbury about 1685, with w. and three children. The earliest trace which I have found of his presence in New England is contained in his deposition recorded with Suffolk Deeds (xiii. 470), that on the 10th of March 1685-6 he saw Joseph Dudley, Esq., take peaceable possession of certain real estate in Billerica on behalf of "Daniel Cox of Aldersgate Street, London." On the organization of the government, 2 June 1686, after the abrogation of the first Charter, he was appointed by President Joseph Dudley one of the two marshals (equivalent to sheriffs) of Suffolk County; and it was "ordered that the President have an honorable maintenance when 'tis known how the revenue will arise, and that Mr. Paige have five pounds a quarter for his attendance on the President." ² He was also licensed by the County Court of Suffolk, 2 Aug. 1686, as an innholder in Roxbury. He was one of the eight original purchasers ³ from the Indian sachems 27 Dec. 1686, of the territory now embraced in the town of Hardwick. See chap. ii. pp. 15-17. A month afterwards, 27 Jan. 1686-7, the same persons, together with Ralph Bradhurst, in like manner bought the territory which is now embraced in the towns of Leicester and Spencer. These purchases, however, were merely speculative, from which no pecuniary benefit resulted for many years. For immediate use, Mr. Paige bought of George Grimes, 1 Mar. 1687-8, a farm of 250 acres in that part of Billerica which is now the easterly portion of Bedford, where he resided during the remainder of his life. His inventory indicates that he was a prosperous farmer, as the value of his farm had more than doubled during the four years of his ownership, and it was abundantly stocked with horses, neat cattle, sheep, swine, and farming tools; and among his possessions was also a "servant man" valued at fifteen pounds. His real estate at Billerica and the wild lands near Quabaog and Worcester he devised to his two sons (a double portion to the elder, as was then customary), and 200 acres of land in Dedham, near Neponset Bridge, which he bought of the Indians in 1687, to his two daughters, in equal shares. Whether he was in Boston on business, on a visit, or for medical aid, does not appear; but he died there on the 12th of April 1692, as the Billerica records show. His last will, dated on the day next preceding his decease, and describing him as "of Bilibrekey in the County of Middlesex, New England, yeoman, being sick and weak of body," is signed "Natt Paige;" and the signature is unusually plain and distinct, indicating a remarkable steadiness of nerve so near the close of life. His w. Joanna probably died in 1724, as on the fourth day of July in that year her sons divided the real estate in which she had dower under the provisions of their father's will.

2. NATHANIEL, s. of Nathaniel (1), m. Susanna, dau. of Maj. John Lane of Billerica, and grand-daughter of Job Lane of Malden, 6 Nov. 1701; she d. 2 Sep. 1746, a. 63, and he m. Mrs. Mary Grimes, who long survived him. His chil. were Nathaniel, b. 4 Sep. 1702; John, b. 11 Oct. 1704; Christopher, b. 16 July 1707; Susanna, b. 29 Ap. 1711, m. Samuel Bridge of Lexington 9 Ap. 1734, and had son Samuel, b. 6 Jan. 1735; she d. 16 Jan. 1735; Joanna, b. 29 Oct. 1714, m. Josiah Fassett 14 Ap. 1747. NATHANIEL the f. was a farmer, cornet of a company of cavalry, selectman, and a prominent manager of affairs in Billerica, and in Bedford after the incorporation of that town, where he d. 2 Mar. 1755, a. 75; his head-stone, on which his name is erroneously spelled PAGE, is still standing in the cemetery near the Common. In his will, dated 1 June 1748, he devised his homestead to his son Christopher, 200 acres of land in Hardwick to his grandson Samuel Bridge, £350, old tenor, to his dau. Joanna Fassett, and the remainder to his three sons; and he directed that his chil. John, Christopher, and Joanna, and his grandson Samuel Bridge, on penalty of forfeiting £60 each, should release to his eldest son Nathaniel, all "right to the estate in Old England, which belonged to their mother Susanna Paige late of Bedford, deceased."¹ He appointed his three sons as executors of his will, who wrote their name PAIGE on their bond of administration in 1755; later in life they changed the orthography, and wrote it PAGE, and the larger portion of their descendants have perpetuated the error.

3. CHRISTOPHER, s. of Nathaniel (1), m. Joanna —; she d. 27 Oct. 1719, and he m. Elizabeth, dau. of Deac. George Reed² of Woburn, 23 May 1720. His chil. were Joanna, b. 10 Aug. 1717, m. Benjamin Farley of Bedford, and

¹ This estate was probably in Yorkshire. Job Lane of Malden, in his will dated 28 Dec. 1696, devised to his son John "all the land I have in England, in Yorkshire, to him and his heirs forever." When the estate of Maj. John Lane of Billerica was divided, 26 Mar. 1718, it was agreed that the English estate should be shared by all his children, namely, Job, John, James, Susanna, w. of Nathaniel Paige; Mary, w. of John Whitmore; and Martha, w. of James Minott; the eldest son to take a double portion. Nathaniel Paige, son of Susanna, devised to his son Thomas, in 1772, "my estate in Old England." The same property is mentioned in the settlement of estates for a few years afterwards, and then disappears. There is a tradition, in various forms, and in several branches of the family, that the change of name from PAIGE to PAGE prevented the heirs from obtaining possession of the estate.

² Deacon George Reed, of that part of Woburn which is now Burlington, b. 14 Sep. 1660, and d. 20 Jan. 1756, was son of George Reed, who was b. in England about 1729, and d. at Woburn 21 Feb. 1705-6, and grandson of William Reed who m. Mabel Kendall and came from England in 1635, with wife and three children; res. successively at Dorchester, Scituate, Boston, and Woburn; returned to England, leaving his three elder children here, and d. at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in 1656, a. about 69. His w. Mabel, with her younger children, again crossed the ocean, m. Henry Summers of Woburn 21 Nov. 1660, and after his death res. with her son George until 15 June 1690, when she d. a. 85. was living in 1770 (her dau. Joanna was b. at Bedford 22 Ap. 1733; and her son Benjamin was drowned in returning from Crown Point, during the French War): Christopher, b. 11 June 1721; William, b. 2 May 1723; George, b. 17 June 1725; Timothy, b. 24 May 1727; Jonas, b. 19 Sep. 1729 (he was early crossed in love, which partially unsettled his mind; he served in at least five campaigns during the French War, and was living, unm., in 1792); Elizabeth, b. 3 Oct. 1731, d. young; Lucy, b. 22 Feb. 1733-4, m. Seth Lincoln of Western (now Warren) 10 Oct. 1751 (he died in 1793, and she m. — Tyler, and d. 1 Sep. 1821); Nathaniel, b. 12 May 1736; John, b. 6 July 1738; Elizabeth, b. 7 June 1743, m. Solomon Green, 29 Dec. 1763 (one of her eight children was Rev. Archelaus Green, a Universalist clergyman, who was b. 16 July 1770, and d. at Virgil, N. Y., 25 Dec. 1843). CHRISTOPHER the f. was a farmer and joiner, and res. on the easterly road to Gilbertville, at the place marked "A. Warner" on the R. Map. He came here from Bedford prob. early in 1735, and was very active in the management of the common property of the "Proprietors," and in the organization of the township and of the church. He was frequently the agent of the inhabitants or "settlers" to transact their business with the proprietors, while their meetings were held at Roxbury, and with the General Court at Boston, notably in their final and successful effort to obtain incorporation as a town. He was moderator of the first town-meeting in 1739, selectman seven years, and assessor five years. He was also moderator of all the meetings of the proprietors held in Hardwick until 1761; and compensation was granted to him 16 May 1757, "for service done the proprietors as their agent to the General Court." At the organization of the church, 17 Nov. 1736, his name stands first on the list of members; and he was elected, 3 Dec. 1736, as its first deacon. This office he resigned, 13 April 1749 (and prob. his membership also), and became a member of the church in Nitchawaug, now Petersham. This caused a breach between the two churches, which was not healed for about twenty years. He d. 10 Mar. 1774; his w. Elizabeth d. in 1786, a. 86. A numerous posterity survived, as appears by an obituary, published in the Massachusetts Gazette, 31 Mar. 1774: "At Hardwick, Deacon Christopher Paige, aged 83 years and 21 days, in a comfortable hope of a better life; he left a widow, and has had 12¹ children, 9 now living and 3 dead, 81 grand-children, 66 living and 15 dead. A funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Hutchinson at his funeral, on the Monday following."

6. CHRISTOPHER, s. of Nathaniel (2), m. Susanna Webber of Medford, and had Christopher, b. 29 Oct. 1743, a captain, res. on the homestead, m. Lydia —, and d. s. p. about 1828; Susanna, b. 17 May 1745, and d. 8 Sep. 1746; Mary, b. 20 Feb. 1746-7, m. Deac. CHRISTOPHER the f. res. on the homestead in Bedford, and d. 11 Nov. 1786; his w. Susanna d. 20 July 1792, a. 82.

7. CHRISTOPHER, s. of Christopher (3), came to Hk. with his father in 1735, m. Rebecca Haskell of Rochester, pub. 3 Mar. 1738-9, and had one son, Christopher, who rem. to Swanzey, N. H., and had many children; this numerous posterity, however, I have not been able to trace. CHRISTOPHER the f. was a precocious youth, being married before he was eighteen years old; but he manifestly lacked discretion or energy in the general affairs of life. He res. for a time on the northerly border of the homestead, about midway between the Gilbertville road and the house of his brother William; afterwards at Peter-sham and at Ware, where he d. 3 Dec. 1772.

8. WILLIAM, s. of Christopher (3), m. Mercy, dau. of James Aiken, 12 Jan. 1743-4, and had William, b. 1 May 1745; James, b. 19 Sep. 1747; Rebecca, b. 8 Oct. 1749, m. John Foster of Rochester 6 Oct. 1768;¹ Jesse, b. 4 Mar. 1752; Mercy, b. 18 May 1754, m. Nathaniel Graves, Jr., of Athol 29 May, 1777; Lucy, b. 19 Mar. 1757, m. Daniel Ruggles 31 Dec. 1779; Christopher, b. 12 June 1762. WILLIAM the f. was a farmer, and one of the foremost actors in public affairs. In the French War he served his country in at least four campaigns, — as lieutenant in 1755, and as captain in 1758, 1759, and 1760. In the Revolutionary period he was a member and chairman of the Committee of Correspondence, and of other important committees, representative in 1778, 1779, and 1780, and a delegate in the Convention at Cambridge in 1779 for framing a Constitution. His military spirit long survived; he accepted office 9 Jan. 1775 as captain of an "Alarm List;" and when the company commanded by his brother, Capt. Timothy Paige, marched "to Bennington in an alarm," 21 Aug. 1777, he volunteered his service as a "cadet." He was one of the committee appointed by the General Court for the sale of confiscated estates in the county of Worcester. He served the town as selectman ten years, and assessor three years; he was also a pillar in the church, of which he was elected deacon 9 Nov. 1769. He res. on the northerly side of a road which formerly extended easterly from a point about thirty rods northerly from the place on the easterly road to Gilbertville, marked "J. Marsh" on the R. Map, to the place marked "D. Warner." Traces of the old road are still visible, on the southerly border of the present homestead of Mr. Charles Mandell, and also on the side hill easterly from the brook. The house remained standing on the westerly side of the brook seventy years ago, and vestiges of the cellar and garden may probably yet be seen. This estate adjoined the homestead of his father, and here he dwelt until late in life, when he rem. to a house standing at or near the place marked "Moulton," not far from the present central bridge over Ware River, where he d. 14 Feb. 1790; his w. Mercy d. 19 Feb. 1823, at the great age of one hundred and two years and thirty-six days,² allowing eleven days for change of style. See JAMES AIKEN.

He performed the duties of pastor nearly four years at Springfield, to 1829, about two years, to 1832, at Gloucester (now Rockport), and seven years at Cambridge, to July 1 1839, when he finally resigned all pastoral charge. He continued to preach, occasionally, about thirty years afterwards, until the precarious condition of his health compelled him to desist. During his pastorate he published "Selections from Eminent Commentators," in 1833; "Questions on Select Portions of the Gospels, designed for the Use of Sabbath Schools and Bible Classes," 1838, and a Centennial Address at Hardwick, in the same year. He subsequently wrote a "Commentary on the New Testament," in six volumes, the first of which was published in 1844, and the last in 1870. While thus engaged, as a relaxation from severer labors, he gathered materials for a "History of Cambridge," published in 1877, and for this "History of Hardwick," with a genealogy of its early families. Elizabeth 24 Ap. 1724, and her brother, Jedediah Brigham, was appointed guardian to the only surviving son, Samuel, then in his nineteenth year, 25 Feb. 1725-6. See Hist. of Cambridge, p. 644.

3. SAMUEL, s. of Samuel (2), m. Mercy, dau. of Moses Leonard and gr.-dau. of Moses Newton, 29 May 1732. At the time of their marriage they res. in Southborough, but soon rem. to Grafton. Isaac Webster of Ben. —. SAMUEL the f. res. in Grafton a short time after his marriage, and rem. to Ilk. in 1735 or 1736, where for the next quarter of a century he was one of the most active and energetic citizens;¹ selectman ten years, assessor three years, and town clerk four years. He was elected 30 Ap. 1746, deacon of the church, which office he resigned 2 Mar. 1748-9, and became deacon of the Separate Church, which was organized at or about that time. He was captain of a company in the French War during the regular campaigns, from 1755 to 1759 inclusive, with the possible exception of one year. Attracted by the beauty of what is now Bennington, which place he visited on his return from one of his campaigns, he organized a company, purchased the rights of the chartered proprietors, and commenced, in 1761, a settlement in the unbroken wilderness. Here, as well as in Hardwick, he was active and prominent; he "was the acknowledged leader in the band of pioneers in the settlement of the town, and continued to exercise almost a controlling authority in the affairs of the town the remainder of his life."² In the long and bitter controversy between New York and New Hampshire, concerning the territory then called the New Hampshire Grants, but which now constitutes the State of Vermont, he was actively engaged until the premature close of his life. His energy and ability were recognized by Governor Wentworth, who commissioned him, 8 Feb. 1762, justice of the peace, he thus "being the first person appointed to a judicial office within the limits" of that territory.³ As a final resort, he was appointed to present a petition to the king for relief. He sailed from New York, 25 Dec. 1766, landed at Falmouth 30 Jan. 1767, and soon afterwards arrived at London.⁴ He was partially successful in his mission, but it was left incomplete by his death, of small-pox, 27 Oct. 1767. He was buried in the cemetery connected with the church of his favorite preacher, Rev. George Whitefield, and a monument, with an elaborate inscription,⁵ was erected to his memory in the cemetery

ing-house, containing one acre and a half; and three hundred acres or thereabouts, on the west side of the farm I formerly lived on; also one hundred and sixty acres on Greenwich River in said town, with all other lands I own in said town; with some land in the Township of Greenwich, namely, the farm Joseph Kidder formerly lived on, containing three hundred acres or thereabouts, and one hundred acres near or adjoining said Greenwich meeting-house, and also one hundred acres in the second Division, and also the west half of the original Lot 47, being about fifty acres, with all and every parcel of land or lands which I now own in said Township." Dated at New Haven 15 Dec. 1766, and acknowledged before "Roger Sherman, Assistant." The "small meeting-house" was that which had been used by the Separate Church, and stood on the easterly side of the old road, long ago discontinued, from the Common to the house marked "J. Gorham" on the R. Map, and about midway between that house and the present road to Ware. The land conveyed by this deed was more than 1,000 acres, in addition to the six hundred acres previously sold to Capt. Daniel Wheeler.

LEONARD the f. served in the French War, 1757, and was a member of the company commanded by his brother Samuel in the Bennington Battle. It is related by Rev. Mr. Jennings, as one of the traditions still extant, that "Leonard Robinson, whose aim was quick and deadly, declared that every time he shot he saw a man fall. 'But,' said he, 'I prayed the Lord to have mercy on his soul, and then I took care of his body.'" He was reputed to be a very pious man; but Mr. Jennings adds that "his piety would seem to have been of that kind that 'trusts God, but keeps the powder dry.'" He res. in Bennington until late in life, when he rem. to Swanton, and d. 29 Sep. 1827, a. 91; his w. Eunice d. 10 Mar. 1826, a. 76.

Erastus Montague; Sarah, b. 8 Oct. 1791, m. William Haswell. SAMUEL the f. inherited his father's military spirit. At the age of seventeen he was a member of the company commanded by his father in 1756, and the next year was adjutant of Col. Ruggles' regiment. He and his brother Leonard, with their families, were members of the first company which commenced the settlement of Bennington 18 June 1761. "He was an active man in the New York controversy and in the other early affairs of the town; in 1768 was chosen town committee, in place of his father, deceased; commanded one of the Bennington companies of militia in Bennington Battle; performed other important military services during the war, and rose to the rank of colonel. In 1777 and 1778 he had charge, as overseer, of the Tory prisoners; and in 1779 and 1780 represented the town in the General Assembly, and was for three years a member of the Board of War. He was the first justice of the peace appointed in town under the authority of Vermont, in 1778, and was also, during the same year, one of the judges of the Special Court for the south shire of the county, and in that capacity sat on the trial and conviction of Redding."² He d. 3 May 1813, a. 74; his w. "He was chosen town clerk at the first meeting of the town, and for nineteen years; colonel of the militia, and at the head of his regiment at Mount Independence on its evacuation by Gen. St. Clair; member of the famous Council of Safety at the time of the Battle of Bennington, and during the campaign of that year; chief justice in the Supreme Court on its first organization, and for ten years, when he was elected, 1789, to the office of governor of the State by the Legislature; in 1782 one of the agents of Vermont in the Continental Congress; and on the admission of Vermont into the Union one of the senators in "Congress" ¹ in 1791. Though less distinguished than his brothers in official transactions, he exhibited the family energy in the New York controversy, and was imprisoned in the Albany jail nearly a year for his participation in the "riots," so styled, but was at last liberated without trial.² During the Bennington Battle, while his brother Moses was performing his arduous duty at the Catamount Tavern as one of the Committee of Safety, Silas and his brothers Leonard and David were in the midst of the conflict, as members of the company commanded by their brother Samuel. After the war he is said to have rem. to St. Albans, where both he and his w. Susanna died.

ROBINSON, THOMAS, having lost his first w., m. Mary, wid. of John Woody and dau. of John Cogan³ of Boston, 11 Jan. 1652-3; she d. 26 Oct. 1661, and he m. wid. Elizabeth Sherman. His chil. were John, b. —, a merchant (named in his father's will 17 Mar. 1665-6, and then "supposed to be in England"); Samuel, b. —, a merchant, d. unm. 16 Jan. 1661-2, a. 24; Josiah, b. —, "apprentice to Mr. Joseph Rocke,"⁴ d. 17 Ap. 1660; Ephraim, b. —, d. 22 Sep. 1661; Thomas, bap. at Scituate 5 Mar. 1653-4; James, b. at Boston 14 Mar. 1654-5, d. — Sep. 1676; Joseph, bap. 8 Mar. 1656-7, m. THOMAS the f. was in Scituate as early as 1640, when he bought land of William Gillson, and represented that town in the General Court of Plymouth at its session in October 1643. He was also deacon, probably of the second church in Scituate.⁵ In August and September, 1654, he bought two estates, adjoining each other, on the westerly side of Washington Street, directly opposite to the Old South Church, in Boston, bounded on the south by the lot on which the Province House was afterwards erected, and having a depth of two hundred and seventy feet. Here he prob. res. during the remainder of his life, though he seems to have retained his connection with the church at Scituate, as all his children by the second marriage, except James, were baptized there. There are reasons for believing that he was son of the celebrated REV. JOHN ROBINSON of Leyden, pastor of the Church of Pilgrims which came to Plymouth in 1620. Isaac Robinson, unquestionably a son of the Rev.

John Robinson, settled at Scituate at the same time, or at very nearly the same time, that Thomas made his purchase of a homestead there; and it is not unreasonable to infer kinship. At the same time, it must be confessed that no authentic evidence of the supposed fact has yet been discovered, and that the name Thomas is not found in any known catalogue purporting to contain the names of his children. But whatever his ancestry, Déacon Robinson wrought out a good name for himself, which he left as a rich inheritance to his posterity. He d. 23 Mar. 1665-6; his w. Elizabeth d. in 1667.

2. THOMAS, s. of Thomas (1), m. Sarah, dau. of Edward Denison¹ of Roxbury, and had Thomas, b. 5 Nov. 1677, m. Benjamin Green 31 Aug. 1764.³ JAMES the f. was a housewright; he inherited the homestead on Washington Street, Boston, which he sold 7 Feb. 1711-12, and bought a house on the southerly side of Boylston Street; this also he sold 12 April 1714, and rem. to Rochester, attracted probably by the fact that Rev. Timothy Ruggles, a brother of his wife, was there settled in the ministry. He resided in Roch. until the spring of 1757, when he exchanged his farm in Roch. for another in Hardwick, where several of his chil. had already settled. Of his eight surviving chil. Dorothy alone remained in Roch.; all the others were in Hardwick and Barre. His res. here was on the road to Ware, about two miles from the Common, at the place marked "Mr. Leonard" on the R. Map. ¹ Edward Denison was son of William Denison, one of the earliest inhabitants of Roxbury. He had two brothers, — Daniel, the Maj.-General of the Massachusetts Colony during "Philip's War," and George, a successful and distinguished captain of Connecticut troops during the same war; both also rendered important service as legislators and magistrates. Edward manifested no taste for military affairs; but he was useful as selectman, town clerk, and representative. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Capt. JAMES the f. was one of the very earliest pioneers in what was then a wilderness, and res. on the River road to Barre, at or near the spot marked "Col. Robinson" on the R. Map. His farm, bounded easterly on the river and northerly on the Barre line, was included in New Braintree when that town was incorporated, and was annexed to Hardwick 10 June 1814. He was distinguished for his industry, economy, and strict honesty; and, as a natural result, he accumulated a comparatively large estate. It is related, as one of his peculiarities, that he held corn at a fixed value; that he would never sell his crop at a less nor even at a greater price; that he once rebuked a neighbor for taking what he called an extortionate price, who excused himself saying, that he could not well spare the corn, but the woman insisted on having it. "A woman!" said he; "so much the worse!" "But she offered me so much." "Then you should have beaten her down." He d. 21 May 1790, a. 78; his w. Elizabeth, who fully equalled him in industry and economy, survived him.

5. SAMUEL, s. of James (3), m. Elizabeth, dau. of Joseph Doty, Jr., of Rochester, 20 Oct. 1737, and had Samuel, b. 22 Nov. 1742; Sarah, b. 31 Oct. 1744, m. Aaron Hunt 24 Oct. 1765; Isaac, b. 20 Jan. 1746-7, a physician, settled in Chesterfield about 1771, ret. to Hk. about 1782, and after 1 Mar. 1788 rem. to Stamford, Vt.; Joseph, b. 29 Feb. 1752. SAMUEL the f. was a weaver; he rem. from Rochester to Hardwick before 13 May 1740, at which date he bought a farm on the River road to Barre, adjoining the estate of his brother James, and prob. res. there until 31 Aug. 1762, when he purchased of his sister Hannah their father's homestead on the Ware road. His death does not appear on record; but the widow of his son Joseph informed me, many years ago, that he d. in Mar. 1784, and that his w. Elizabeth rem. to Vermont (prob. to Stamford, where her son Isaac resided), and d. about 1805, a. 88.

6. THOMAS, s. of James (3), m. Mary, dau. of Capt. Eleazar Warner, 23 Nov. 1744, and had Denison, b. 18 Sep. 1746; Thomas, b. 10 Feb. 1753; Mary, b. 3 Dec. 1758, m. Timothy Paige, Esq., 20 Jan. 1780, and d. 29 Mar. 1836. THOMAS the f. came to Hardwick when a young man, and at first engaged in farming. He resided on the River road to Barre, on the farm adjoining that of his brother Samuel. Within a few years, however, he rem. to the Furnace Village, and res. at the place marked "T. Elwell" on the R. Map (now the residence of Mr. Joseph N. Lincoln). Here he kept a store and tavern, and also managed a saw-mill and grist-mill, on Moose Brook. He was prosperous in business, inasmuch that only three persons in the town were assessed for a larger property than his in 1776; but of this plentiful estate he sacrificed the larger part, if not absolutely the whole, in the Revolutionary contest, in which he was actively engaged from the beginning to the end. He was one of the grand jurors who refused, 19 Ap. 1774, to be impanelled at Worcester by Peter Oliver, the chief justice, should be present. He was elected lieutenant of an "Alarm List" 9 Jan. 1775, and was afterwards styled captain. He was a selectman five years, a member of the Committee of Correspondence five years, and served on various other important committees during that troublous period. He sold his real estate, consisting of one hundred and fifty acres, in five parcels, in and near the Furnace Village, with the saw-mill and grist-mill, to Capt. Benjamin Convers 19 Oct. 1780, for £20,000, in the depreciated currency of that period, and subsequently rem. to Windsor, but returned again after a few years. About 1799, his mental faculties having become impaired, and both of his sons having left the town, he and his aged wife became inmates of their daughter's family, where he d. 4 (or 5) Jan.

1802, a. nearly 84; his w. Mary d. 7 Aug. 1812, a. 88. Her youngest and last surviving grandchild, while tracing these lines, cherishes a fresh and affectionate remembrance of her manifold kindness to him in the days of his childhood and youth.

Abigail, dau. of Griffin Crafts, 24 Jan. 1650-1, and had four sons, three of whom, — John, Thomas, and Samuel, — survived him; he d., or was buried 15 Sep. 1658; Sarah, b. about 1627, m. William Lyon of Roxbury, 17 June 1646, had six sons and one daughter, and d. 9 Feb. 1688-9; Samuel, b. about 1629. THOMAS the f. came from England to Roxbury in 1637. He and his wife are very favorably mentioned by the "Apostle Eliot" on the Records of the Roxbury church, of which he was pastor and they were members: "Thomas Ruggles: he came to N. E. in the year 1637; he was elder brother to John Ruggles, children of a godly father; he joined to the church soon after his coming, being as well known as his brother; his first born son died in England; his second son John was brought over a servant by Philip Eliot; and he brought two other children with him, Sarah and Samuel. He had a great sickness the year after his coming, but the Lord recovered him in mercy." — "Mary, the wife of Thomas Ruggles: she joined to the church with her husband, and approved herself a godly Christian by a holy and blameless conversation, being converted not long before their coming from England." He res. in Roxbury seven years, and d. 15 Nov. 1644; his death is recorded by Eliot, with the following remark: "1644, 9^m. 15^d. Thomas Ruggles, a godly brother; he dyed of a consumption. These two¹ brake the knot first of the Nazing Christians; I mean they first dyed of all those Christians that came from that town in England."² His w. 2. JOHN, brother of Thomas (1), "came to N. E. in the year 1635, and soon after his coming joined unto the church; he was a lively Christian, known to many of the church in Old England, where many of the church enjoyed society together; he brought his first-born, John Ruggles, with him to N. ³ Samuel Hill was "one of the most distinguished men that Guilford ever produced. He represented the town in forty-three sessions of the Legislature, was several times Speaker, was judge of our County and Probate Courts, was town clerk, and all the business of the church, society, and a large share of that of the county and of the colony for forty years seems to have centered in him." *MS. ing the same period, and representative for the four critical years succeeding the Revolution of 1689. He was for several years captain of militia, and when Governor Andros and his associates were seized and imprisoned, Joseph Dudley (afterwards Governor) was committed to his special charge, while temporarily released from prison. His preservation from death by lightning on the 25th of May 1667 was so remarkable that an account of it was entered on the Church Record by Rev. Samuel Danforth: "25 (3) 1667. There was a dreadful crack of thunder. Samuel Ruggles happened at that instant to be upon the meeting-house hill, with oxen and horse, and cart laden with corn. The horse and one ox were stricken dead with the lightning; the other had a little life in it, but it died presently. The man was singed and scorched a little on his legs, one shoe torn apieces, and the heel carried away; the man was hurled off from the cart and flung on the off side, but through mercy soon recovered himself and felt little harm. There was a chest in the cart, wherein was pewter and linen; the pewter had small holes melted in it, and the linen some of it singed and burnt." He (or his son Samuel) was one of the eight associates, who purchased of the Indians 27 Dec. 1686, the territory, now the town of Hardwick; and he with his son Samuel and four others, on the 5th of May 1686, bought of Capt. James Fitch of Norwich, Conn., a tract styled the "Mashamoquet Purchase," which afterwards became the town of Pomfret, Conn. It was many years, however, before his posterity derived much pecuniary advantage from these purchases. He d. 15 Aug. 1692, a. 63; his w. Anna d. 5 Sep. 1711, a. 67.

He inherited his father's military spirit and succeeded him in many of his offices; he was captain of militia, 1702; assessor, 1694; representative, 1697; and selectman continuously from 1693 to 1713, except in 1701 and 1704, nineteen years. His death occurred after a very short sickness, 25 Feb. 1715-16, and his funeral is mentioned in Sewall's Diary: "Feb. 28, 1715-16. Capt. Samuel Ruggles was buried with arms. . . . He is much lamented at Roxbury."³ His w. Martha d. — 1738.

7. TIMOTHY, s. of Samuel (4), grad. H. C. 1707, was ordained pastor of the church in Rochester 22 Nov. 1710. He m. TIMOTHY the f. held a high rank in the ministry, and was preëminently a man of business. He was apparently more active and efficient than any other individual in promoting the settlement of Hardwick. Through his influence and exertions, six sons and a daughter of his own family, five sons and two daughters of his sister Patience, wife of James Robinson (also their father and mother, late in life), and many members of his parish, were among the early settlers. On behalf of the proprietors he personally visited the town several times, both arranging the financial affairs of the people and ministering to their spiritual wants. He d. in office as sole pastor of the church 26 Oct. 1768, a. nearly 83. In the epitaph on his head-stone he is described as "an Able Divine, and a Faithful Minister. Having a peculiar talent at composing Differences and healing Divisions in Churches, he was much improved in Ecclesiastical Councils."

8. BENJAMIN, s. of Samuel (4), grad. Y. C. 1721 (A. M. at Y. C., and also at H. C. 1724). He m. Dorcas, dau. of Samuel Whiting, and grand-daughter of Rev. Samuel Whiting of Billerica, 30 Dec. 1725. I have not seen his family record; but, from other sources, I learn that he had Benjamin, b. 18 Dec. 1726; Whiting, b. — 1733; Mary, b. —, m. Dr. Joel Carpenter of Hk. 9 Dec. 1755; Dorcas, b. —, m. Edward Smith of Hk. 25 Aug. 1757; Lucy, b. — 1740, m. BENJAMIN the f. was ordained pastor of the second church (then newly formed) in Middleborough, about 1724, where he remained until the church was organized in New Braintree 1754, of which he became the first pastor, and remained in office during the remainder of his life, having Rev. Daniel Foster as a colleague about four years. He d. suddenly 12 May 1782, a. nearly 82; his w. Dorcas d. 5 Sep. 1778, a. 75.

Joshua Spooner of Brk., pub. 8 Jan. 1766, and was executed at Worcester 2 July 1778, having been adjudged guilty of hiring other persons to murder her husband. The known circumstances of this case, however, indicate insanity rather than moral turpitude; and confinement in a lunatic asylum would seem to have been a more appropriate result than death on the gallows, — involving, as it did, the death of her unborn child; ¹ Elizabeth, b. 15 May 1748, m. Gardner Chandler, pub. 18 May 1772. TIMOTHY the f. grad. H. C. 1732, and was one of the most prominent citizens of Massachusetts, and indeed of New England, in both military and civil affairs. As a soldier, he raised a company for service in the West Indies, 1740, and received his commission as captain; but as the number of companies exceeded the demand, his company was disbanded, and thus escaped almost certain destruction, inasmuch as scarcely a title of those who embarked in this expedition lived to return. In the French War, which commenced in 1753 (though not formally declared until 1756), and continued until 1763, he rendered active and important service, first as colonel of a regiment, and afterwards as brigadier-general of the provincial troops on the northern frontier. But he was, perhaps, even more eminent in civil life. He commenced the practice of law in his native town (Rochester), rem. to Sandwich about 1737, and thence to Hardwick between 24 Ap. 1753, and 4 Mar. 1754. In his practice, before his removal to Hk., he was the dreaded rival of James Otis, senior, as he was, at a later period, of James Otis, junior, in the General Court. After his removal, he was commissioned justice of the peace and quorum 19 Ap. 1754, judge of the Court of Common Pleas 19 Ap. 1757, and chief justice of Jonathan Sturgis 14 Aug. 1768; Thomas, b. 17 June 1734, or 1735, prob. d. young. She must have been several years older than her second husband, General Ruggles, who was not many months more than twelve years old when her first child was born.

¹ The conduct of Mrs. Spooner, both before and after the murder, bears evident marks of insanity. It appeared on the trial, that two entire strangers, James Buchanan and William Brooks, who had been British soldiers, were invited by her into the house, and were entertained for two weeks; during which time she engaged them to kill her husband, on his return from Princeton, — provided that Ezra Ross failed to destroy his life, as he had promised. And after the murder, she not only rewarded the three murderers with money, but dressed them in her husband's clothes, in the presence of her household servants. The argument of her advocate, Hon. Levi Lincoln, Sen., although it failed, in that period of furious excitement, to convince the jury, deserves consideration. A sketch of that argument is printed in Chandler's Criminal Trials, ii. 26-33. Among other things, he said: "The whole evidence was that of a fool, or a distracted person. Born in a high rank of life, well educated, and accomplished, a wife and a mother, and in the enjoyment of a good estate, what object could she have in undertaking such a detestable crime? . . . Whom did she trust with the management of a villainy that so nearly affected her reputation, her safety, her life, her children, the lives of others, and the happiness of her friends? The answer was, to prostitutes, Tories, regulars, deserters, strangers, and foreigners. Was a woman that is admitted to have sense so stupid, if in the exercise of her reason, as to trust all that was valuable to her and hers in the hands of such persons? . . . After the murder, she gives the murderers his watch, his buckles, waistcoat, breeches, and shirts, and even puts them on, to be worn in the eye of the world, where they were well known to be Spooner's clothes, and from their goodness and fashion might be known not to belong to the persons wearing them, being low and vulgar. Was this the conduct of a person in the exercise of reason? Would it have been less rational to have written on their foreheads, in capitals, 'the murderers of Mr. Spooner?' Under such circumstances, a verdict of "guilty" could not be expected from a jury, at the present day; but "not guilty, by reason of insanity," would be recognized by both jury and the whole community as a righteous decision.

It may be added, that Mrs. Spooner's daughter Bathsheba, who married — Trott, and (2d) — Heywood, and who died at Cambridge, 1 June 1853, aged 83, was hopelessly insane many years before her death.

the same Court 21 Jan. 1762, which office he held until the Revolution. He was also appointed special justice of the Superior Court 23 Feb. 1762, "in the room of Chambers Russell, Esq., one of the standing justices of the said Court."¹ He was a representative in the General Court from Rochester in 1736, from Sandwich eight years, from 1739 to 1752, and from Hardwick fifteen years,² from 1754 to 1770, in all twenty-four years, and was Speaker of the House in 1762 and 1763. In 1765 he was a delegate from Massachusetts to the Congress which met in New York, and was elected President of that body; but he refused to sign the proceedings, which he deemed derogatory to the British government, and was reprimanded therefor by the House of Representatives. During the political contest which raged furiously in the succeeding years, he was the leader of the king's party in the General Court until he ceased to be a member of the House. He was elected councillor in 1764, but declined the office, thinking he could render the king more effective service on the floor of the House. On the change of the form of government in Massachusetts, he was appointed a member of the Council by Mandamus, and took the oath of office 16 Aug. 1774. After this he returned no more to Hardwick, but left Boston with the British officers and troops the next spring, retired to Nova Scotia, and died at Wilmot, near Annapolis, 4 Aug. 1795. His w. Bathsheba remained with her eldest son in Hardwick, where she died, probably, early in 1787; a notice of her death appeared in the Worcester Magazine for the fourth week in March. His homestead in Hardwick (where some of the traces of his agricultural skill remain visible after the lapse of more than a hundred years) was on the easterly road to Gilbertville, about three quarters of a mile from the Common, at the place marked "J. Mann" on the R. Map. The dwelling-house, which stood a few feet south of the present residence of Mr. Charles Mandell, was demolished not long ago.

Sabine says, "he was a member of the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia many years;"¹ but I suspect he mistakes the father for the son, who held that position.² He d. at Granville 9 Dec. 1831, a. nearly 93; his w. I have found it impracticable to give a full account of the several families bearing the name of SMITH, who have res. here, or to show the connection, if any, between them, except in a very few cases. Many seem to have remained here only a short time; many undoubtedly neglected to register the birth of their children; and many deaths also were not recorded. I have mentioned such births, marriages, and deaths as I could ascertain, in chronological order, and regret my inability to present a more satisfactory result.

APOLLOS the f. was a farmer, prob. inherited the homestead, and d. 1 Nov. 1843, a. 76. The names of his chil. and gr. chil. indicate that he was son of Reuben (2), rather than of Jesse (1); but if he was 76 years old when he d. in 1843, he must have been born as early as 1767, whereas Reuben (2) was not married until 1769.

Sarah, dau. of Ebenezer Whipple of Hk., 21 May 1760, res. in Pet., was a carpenter and a soldier in the Revolutionary War; he rem. to Heath, and d. 25 Ap. 1785, a. nearly 50; Ruggles, b. 24 Mar. 1736-7, m. Mehetabel Nye, res. in Pet. and Dana, is said to have served in the French and Revolutionary Wars, was certainly involved in the Shays Rebellion, and through his active life almost constantly engaged in litigation, — a notable instance of which was his suit against Sarah Peckham for breach of promise of marriage, tried at Worcester, and a verdict rendered for the defendant 16 Oct. 1782. His old age was dark and dreary; he became entirely blind, lost all his property, and would not acknowledge any expectation of a future existence. He retained his mental faculties, which were naturally strong and active, until extreme old age, and, until near the close of life, often walked from Dana to Hk. He d. in 1831, a. 94; his wife Mehetabel d. 1 Sep. 1855, a. 92, or 97, according to different authorities; Wing, b. 29 Dec. 1738, res. in Pet., was a carpenter, a captain in the Revolutionary War, m. Eunice Stevens 27 Jan. 1763, and d. 7 Dec. 1810; Eliakim, b. 7 Ap. 1740; Daniel, b. 10 Dec. 1741, m. Abigail Munroe 18 Nov. 1766, settled in Hartland, Vt., and was selectman, representative, justice of the peace, and d. in Nov. 1828; Hannah, b. 25 June 1743, d. young; Paul, b. 20 March. 1745-6, m. Asenath Wright; she d. and he m. Mrs. Ann Post. He was a physician and an active politician. He settled early in Hartland, Vt., and "was a member of the state council four years from 1778, then Lieutenant-Governor until 1786, judge of the supreme court for nine years ending in 1788, and was an agent of the State to the Continental Congress in 1780, and again in 1782."² He

d. 5 Sep. 1789, a. 43, while yet in the prime of life, and in the midst of his usefulness. (His second son, Paul, settled in Hardwick, Vt., was the first town clerk of that town, 1795, and also its first representative, elected in 1797, 1798, and 1799.) DANIEL the f. res. several years in Dartmouth, where he was born, and the births of all his children are recorded in that town; but a doubt is expressed in the Spooner Memorial, p. 96, whether all of them were born there, inasmuch as the father seems to have resided in Rhode Island about 1732. However this be, it is certain that he removed to Hardwick before 16 June 1748, when he sold a lot near the Barre line, "granted originally to Mr. Keith," and adjoining land of "Col. Willis." He did not long remain here, however, as in a deed dated 14 July 1750 he is described as of Nichewoag (Petersham); but he manifestly retained very intimate relations with the inhabitants of Hk.; five or six of his children married our sons and daughters, and in his old age he came here for his third wife. He was a "joiner" or carpenter, and was elected deacon of the church in Petersham soon after his removal into that town. The precise date of his death is not ascertained; but he is generally believed to have survived until 1797, one hundred and three years after he was born. There can be no reasonable doubt, I think, that he completed more than a century of life; and the tradition of his extreme old age is current among his descendants to the present day. His last wife, Mary, d. here 9 May 1822, a. 94; her head-stonestands in the new cemetery.

8. THOMAS, s. of John (4). m. ² Like other Southern planters, Mr. Warner held slaves. When he returned to New England, about 1850, with shattered health, he brought with him one of the house-servants, who faithfully ministered to his wants as long as he lived. The following account, which was published in the Barre Gazette, Ap. 3, 1874, has reference to this subject, and is presumed to be substantially correct: "Hardwick has a real slave romance. 'Aunt Judie Warner,' as she is familiarly known, an aged negress who came to Hardwick some twenty-five years ago, with her helpless master, Colonel Frank Warner, and nursed him until his death, several years ago, when he left her eight hundred dollars, is going back to his old home in Arkansas. Within a few months she has learned that her children, sold from her when young, and whom she has mourned as dead, are living, and that one daughter is about to be married; so she is going on to the wedding. Charles P. Aiken, with whom she has been living, accompanies her on this pilgrimage."

Desiring to know the result of this matter, I addressed the Town Clerk, who ascertained for me the following particulars: Mr. Aiken left Hardwick with "Aunt Judy" April 6, 1874, and in due time she arrived at her old home in Lewisville, La Fayette Co., Arkansas. Here she found her children, but soon became homesick. She therefore "bought a home for her children, and retraced her steps to Hardwick, arriving there only a few days after Mr. Aiken, May 24, 1874, taking with her a daughter and grand-son, expecting to have a home with Mr. Aiken." He could not easily accommodate so large a family; and therefore she "kept house at the Old Furnace until the next autumn, and then went back with her daughter and child to Arkansas; she lived there until the summer of 1875, when she went to Cleveland, Ohio, to the house of a brother of Colonel Warner, where she died in the autumn of 1882." Such is the conclusion of a "real slave romance," and the only one of its kind connected with the history of Hardwick.

CONCLUSION.

ON examination of the foregoing Genealogical Register, it will be observed that many of the very early inhabitants of Hardwick came from widely distant towns, yet in groups of relatives and friends. The largest group, under the influence of Rev. Timothy Ruggles, came from the Old Colony, notably from Rochester, Dartmouth, Sandwich, Harwich (including Brewster), and Eastham. Another company was from Hampshire County, especially from Hatfield, with whom came the first Pastor of the Church, and the progenitors of General Warner. Another group, under the leadership of Captain Samuel Robinson, came from Grafton, Westborough, Southborough, Shrewsbury, and other towns in that section of the county, more or less connected with each other by the ties of blood and marriage. A smaller number came with Deacon Christopher Paige, from Bedford, Concord, Littleton, and other towns in that region. And, finally, a somewhat numerous and active class came with Captain Eleazar Warner from Brookfield, the only town except Rutland which was then organized in this immediate neighborhood. The names of families coming here from each town have been sufficiently designated in the Register, and need not be repeated. It may be added, that the members of these several groups generally clustered around each other in their habitations; and some of the early controversies in the town, concerning meeting-houses and other public conveniences, may have a more than merely local interpretation.
